ROAD INQUIRY CENTERS ON GRAVEL FROM PRIVATE FIRM

Records Show State Highway Department Has Put $148,074 in Pit and Buys Own Material From Leasing Company.

SENATOR DONNELLY STUDIES CONCLUSIONS

He Declares, Among Other Things, That Missouri Gravel Co. Has Violated Contract by Excess Commercial Sales.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 28.—State Highway Department records show a total of $148,074 of the department's funds was invested in a 592-acre Northeast Missouri gravel pit which is being operated for private profit by the Missouri Gravel Co., a subsidiary of an Illinois materials corporation.

The contract between the Highway Department and the Missouri Gravel Co. is one of the chief elements in an investigation being conducted by Senator Phil M. Donnelly of Lebanon, majority floor leader, preliminary to the introduction in the Senate of a resolution to authorize an official inquiry into Highway Department affairs.

The records show that the department buys its own gravel from the company for surfacing highways, possibly at a somewhat lower cost than it would pay producers of privately-owned gravel. They also show that the company is permitted to sell 50,000 tons a year commercially, for which the department may receive the small royalty of 2 cents a ton, or in lieu of royalty, purchase at the contract price an equal amount of gravel produced by the company from one of the pits it owns.

Donnelly's Conclusions.

Senator Donnelly is giving particular attention to these conclusions drawn from the records:

That State-owned road material supplies are being depleted by private commercial sale.

That although the State has an investment of nearly $150,000 in the gravel pit, and the gravel company an estimated investment of only $80,000 in machinery, the State pays as high as 54.3 cents a ton for most of the gravel it gets from the company. For a small part it pays a lower price.

That in the three years the contract has been in force the State has paid the company in excess of $300,000.

That in the three years the company has sold commercially a larger amount of gravel than the 50,000 tons a year authorized in the contract.

Terms of the Contract.

The contract as first executed, provided for purchase by the Highway Department of a minimum of 150,000 tons of road surfacing gravel a year from the lessee of its gravel pits, near Le Grange, Lewis County, and authorized the lessee to sell any gravel produced, in excess of the State needs to municipalities, counties or other government subdivisions, for road and street work.

In February, 1931, the contract was modified to limit the commercial sales, to buyers other than the State, to 50,000 tons a year, the restriction limiting sales to public agencies being removed.

This limitation has been exceeded for the last two years, according to department records and admissions of department officials.

Since the contract has been in force, the company has sold commercially 257,480 tons of gravel, according to department officials. As an offset the State has been paid in kind of 214,447 tons which it purchased from pits owned by the company, it was said at the contract price provided for gravel taken from the State-owned pits.

$6941 Paid State in Royalties.

In the three years the arrangement has been in force, the Missouri Gravel Co., controlled by the Moline Consumers Co. of Moline, Ill., has paid the State $6941.86 in royalties for gravel and sand taken from the State-owned deposits, and sold commercially. The company still owes the department a royalty of 2 cents a ton for 153,132 tons of coarse aggregate, a type of gravel used in concrete paving, not covered by the contract, which was sold to the State, according to department officials.

The State has exceeded the mini-

LAWYER GETS YEAR FOR EMBEZZLING $3 FROM CLIENT

Joseph C. Crouch Sentenced to Workhouse After Negro Testifies He Did Not 'Take Care' of Case.

ATTORNEY CALLS MONEY RETAINER

Says He Gave Receipt for It — Supporting Witness Fails to Prove He Was Present.

Joseph C. Crouch, an attorney, was found guilty of embezzling $3 from a Negro client, and sentenced to a year in the Workhouse by Judge Dickmann in Court of Criminal Correction yesterday.

The attorney, whose office formerly was in a building, since destroyed, in the 1400 block of Market street, was accused by Alex Moore, 2734 Gamble street, who testified that Crouch pocketed the $3 he gave him to "take care" of a minor Police Court case.

Moore testified that he was fined by default when neither he nor Crouch appeared in court last month to defend the charge. He later explained his absence to Police Judge Blaine, who referred the case to the Prosecuting Attorney.

Moore said he met the lawyer in the corridor at Municipal Courts Building, where he was introduced as "Judge Crouch." "He said that $3 would take care of the whole thing and I could forget about it," Moore testified. "I gave it to him, he went into the courtroom, came out and said he would have to take care of it later. I never got my money back."

Crouch testified in his own defense, later issuing the following statement:

"On Dec. 10 at the Municipal Courts building a Negro called me and showed me a traffic ticket and told me he was late to court and paid me $2.50, for which I gave him a receipt for legal services. The money was not given to pay costs, it was paid me to see the Judge and ask him to set aside the order for the arrest and bond because he was not in court to answer. I fulfilled my obligation to my client. The law is plain that where the relation of attorney and client exists there can be no embezzlement. I fear not the outcome of this case, and then——"

The defendant presented a witness who said he was in Police Court Dec. 10 to answer a summons and saw Crouch write the receipt, but the witness was unable to find his name on the Police Court docket of that day.

Crouch filed a motion for a new trial, but was held in default of $500 bond pending action by the court. He said he lived at 3961 North Market street.

Numerous complaints, similar in nature to the one that led to his trial, have been made against the attorney.

SPINNING THE FAMILY WOOL

Wheels Brought Down From Attics in Saskatchewan.

By the Associated Press.

SASKATOON, Sask., Jan. 28.—In dusty attics spinning wheels are being resurrected that thrifty Priscillas of the Robin Hood district near North Battleford, Sask., may utilize locally-grown wool.

The district's return to old methods was reported here today by W. G. Clark, who keeps 100 Shropshire sheep on his farm near North Battleford. Norwegian settlers and other neighbors, he said, have bought his entire clip. The wool has been washed, carded, twisted and knitted into socks, sweaters and mitts. One family sent to its old home in New York State for the family spinning wheel.

HEADACHE PILLS, MATCHES IN HOUSE EXPENSE ACCOUNTS

Members Also Charge Home Town Newspapers and Hair Brushes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — House members may not be able to get shaves and haircuts free as do Senators, but they did spend $3,238,000 of the Government's money for their personal comfort and convenience last year, besides the more than $4,000,000 they drew in salaries.

These figures were included in the annual report of South Trimble, clerk of the House. It showed that—like the Senate—the House in the last fiscal year had some expenses that might surprise the man who knows nothing about Congress.

For example, there was $19.80 for 2400 headache tables, $13.08 for a carton of fizzy sedative.

Buying "back home," newspapers cost $895.92, although about a third of the House members have shining pates, 76 hair brushes cost $44.01. Telegraph tolls were $80,091 and other items include $34 for 24 cuspidors, $2.25 for 12 ice picks, $27 for 18 long-handled bath brushes, $15 for 48 nail brushes, $37.50 for matches and $17 for ash traps.

On the big payroll for clerk hire there were 86 members who had in their office drawing money persons with the same surname as their own. Missourians in the list are Manlove, Romjue and Williams.

KILLS SELF TO GET ATTENTION FOR HIS DEPRESSION REMEDIES

Illinois Florist Leaves Notes to Hoover, Congressmen; Ends Life by Wrecking Auto.

By the Associated Press.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Jan. 28.—Indicting the world's financial ills in notes to President Hoover, Senators, Congressmen and newspapers, John H. E. Stapp, 27-year-old florist of Rock Island, drove his automobile into a bridge abutment to kill himself, testimony at a Coroner's inquest showed today. The jury decided his death was suicide. Stapp was found dead near his wrecked car yesterday near Preemption.

Stapp's notes went into detail in regard to his views for the solution of the depression and cited the difficulties which had affected his own business in the last four years. He said his firm had kept 40 men at work, in spite of the fact that the concern had lost $100,000 in the four-year period. His act, he wrote, was to benefit his firm through his insurance policies and to make public in dramatic manner his view on the depression.

Court Allows Decree on Ground of Pre-Marital Fraud—They Were Wed Six Months Ago.

By the Associated Press.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Jan. 28. — Marion Talley of Kansas City, former Metropolitan Opera singer, obtained an annulment here last night of her marriage six months ago to Michael Raucheisen, 43-year-old German concert pianist.

The annulment was granted in Superior Court on her charge that Raucheisen had violated a pre-nuptial agreement to allow her mother and sister to live with them.

Counsel said the singer had gone into seclusion after receiving the decree. The pianist was reported en route to Berlin, where Miss Talley met him last winter when touring Europe with her mother and sister.

The two were married six months ago at White Plains, N. Y. They drove in Miss Talley's motor car to Kansas City, where they lived for a time in the walk-up apartment which had been the home of Miss Talley and her family prior to her marriage.

In an interview which followed her marriage, Miss Talley attributed to fate her sudden rise as a singer, her equally sudden retirement and her meeting with Raucheisen in his Berlin studio. Whether she would return to opera, Miss Talley said, was something else for fate to decide.

Secretly Wed After Announcing She Had No Intention.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The marriage of Marion Talley and Michael Rauscheisen, annulled by a California court, was a big surprise to the operatic world.

Only a few months after she had announced she had "no intention of getting married," she and Rauscheisen were secretly married in White Plains. The Rev. Thomas F. Watkins of the First Presbyterian Church performing the ceremony. This was on June 30, 1932, but news of it did not leak out until the next day, when the two were already gone on their honeymoon.

Rauscheisen at the time said he was 43 years old, and Miss Talley said she was 25. The license noted that he had previously been married and divorced.

Miss Talley made her debut at the Metropolitan in 1926 when she sang "Gilda" in "Rigoletto." Two hundred citizens of her home town, Kansas City, came to hear her. She was acclaimed by the crowds although critics were not so enthusiastic.

She retired in 1929 after she and her managers had a falling out with the Metropolitan management.

BANK ROBBERY AND FARM REVOLT IN TOWN SAME DAY

Four Holdup Men With Heavy Beards Get $7000 at Madison, Minn.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Minn., Jan. 28.—Five bank robbers appeared when 2000 farmers were hurrying into Madison today to prevent three foreclosure sales.

Four men, whose features were hidden partly by heavy growths of beards, forced four employes and a customer of the Klein National Bank at Madison to the floor and escaped with $7000 in a car driven by a fifth. The robbers swept into town while roads were thronged by the automobiles of incoming farmers, less than an hour before the scheduled sale time.

In two nearby communities, farmers also prevented foreclosures. One was at Granite Falls and involved a lumber company's lien for about $100; the other was at Montevideo, where the Sheriff postponed the sale after 400 farmers waited 45 minutes for bids.

THREE DISARM POSSE AFTER $14,000 HOLDUP

Robbers Overcome Pursuers With Machine Guns in Fight Near Holt, Mo.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 28. — A posse was captured and disarmed today by three men it had pursued along various highways after they wounded the North Kansas City Marshal and escaped with about $14,000 carried by a woman bank messenger he was guarding.

The six men in the posse, released later, said they suddenly came on the three robbers mending a tire near Holt, Mo. A fight followed in which members of the posse were fired on by two machine guns, they said.

The robbers, one wounded, overcame their pursuers, gathered up an armload of revolvers and shotguns and escaped in one of the three cars in which the citizens had overhauled them. One of the six possemen was used as a shield as the robbers took up their flight. He soon was released.

The robbers obtained the money in a sidewalk holdup of Mrs. Dorothy Jully, bookkeeper for the National Bank & Trust Co., and Marshal Edgar Nall, who was guarding her in transfer of the currency to the Postoffice. Nall was shot down when he drew a revolver. Mrs. Jolly sought refuge in an ice box of a grocery store when the robbers opened fire with a machine gun.

Late today the robbers' car was reported to have been seen near Lawson, Mo., north of Excelsior Springs. A widespread search for the robbers was under way tonight in Northwestern Missouri, conducted by Sheriffs and Deputies of several counties, State Highway Patrolmen and Kansas City police in radio patrol cars.

The holdup was Mrs. Jolly's third experience of that nature during three years of employment by the bank. She was one of seven employes and officers locked in a vault when two men robbed the bank Sept. 3, 1930. Last April 9 a woman guarded Mrs. Jolly while a male companion obtained $1000 from the bank cages.

ACTRESS QUESTIONED ABOUT MOVIE WRITER

Having Had Complaints on John Farrow, U. S. Agents Call on Maureen O'Sullivan.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28.—Murray W. Garsson, special assistant to the Secretary of Labor, announced today that he had begun questioning of Maureen O'Sullivan, Irish movie actress, in connection with the arrest of John Farrow, movie scenario writer, on charges of overstaying a leave to enter the United States. Garsson said that Miss O'Sullivan also was questioned about her own permit to reside in this country.

After the arrest of Farrow at a hotel during a Hollywood party Thursday night, agents said complaints had been made to them about him and that as a result action might be taken to return him to Australia, regardless of the condition of his permit.

Garsson did not say what information was sought from Miss O'Sullivan. She once was identifed as a frequent companion of the writer in Hollywood and rumors sprang up at the time that they were engaged.

Recently the actress intimated that she might return to Ireland because she was "homesick" but subsequently she told friends that she planned to remain in this country.

Agents have disclosed that 16 aliens have overstayed their permits in Hollywood and are packing up to leave the country by Government request.

BRITAIN WILL RETURN TO GOLD ONLY IF SURE IT WILL WORK

Chamberlain Says There Will Have to Be World Agreement on Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Jan. 28.—Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a speech here tonight, made clear the conditions under which Great Britain will return to the gold standard.

"We are not going to trust ourselves again to the gold standard," he said, "unless and until we are assured it will work. In order to be sure it will work, there has to be an international agreement as to the conditions under which it shall be worked."

PRESIDENT-ELECT ASKS LINDSAY TO MEET HIM AT WARM SPRINGS

World Economic Issues and Armament Among 'Many Things to Be Gone Over' Before Sir Ronald Departs for London.

"BEST NEWS IN LONG TIME," SAYS ENVOY

He Declares He Is More Than Hopeful of Outcome —Calls Debt Difficulties Paramount Cause of Business Inactivity.

By the Associated Press.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Jan. 28.—Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, arrived here at 10:50 tonight by automobile from Atlanta to confer with President-elect Roosevelt on war debts, economics and disarmament.

The Ambassador was accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and Louis M. Howe, political secretary to the President-elect. Sir Ronald said he would have nothing to say until after tomorrow's meeting with Mr. Roosevelt. No attempt was made for a conference tonight.

In this unprecedented bridging of the gap between administrations on foreign affairs, President-elect Roosevelt took the initiative with the full co-operation of the outgoing Secretary of State, Henry L. Stimson.

With the international situation now obviously in his control, Mr. Roosevelt asked Ambassador Lindsay to call at the "Little White House" on Pine Mountain to go over in a most general way the war debts, world economic and disarmament problems now facing the two governments.

What Prompted Meeting.

Word from Washington that Sir Ronald was to leave for London on Tuesday was said by Mr. Roosevelt to have prompted the meeting. It gives opportunity to convey in general outline the ideas he has for restoration of world currency stabilization and trade in return for the war debts relief asked for by Great Britain.

Because Mr. Roosevelt will deal personally with the European debtors, there persists speculation that Ramsay MacDonald, the British Prime Minister, may be the one to come to Washington to talk with Mr. Roosevelt early in March.

Leaving Washington by airplane at noon, Ambassador Lindsay told newspaper men "there are many things to be gone over." The statement agreed with the word from here that debts, economics and armaments were to be gone over.

There is no room at the Roosevelt cottage for the Ambassador to remain all night, and a room in a cottage a mile distant has been reserved for him.

No Reaction on British Note.

There has been no reaction from Mr. Roosevelt whatever on the recent British note accepting his proposal to combine an economic discussion with the war debts talk but to limit drastically the scope of the economic moves.

Lindsay's Trip Viewed with Satisfaction in London.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Sir Ronald Lindsay's departure for Warm Springs, Ga., to visit President-elect Roosevelt was viewed with satisfaction today in Whitehall circles. It was felt the Ambassador thus would be able to present more clearly to Downing Street when he returns the views of the President-elect.

HITLER IS GIVEN NEW CHANCE AT CHANCELLORSHIP

May Succeed Ousted Von Schleicher if He Can Gain Support or Von Papen Likely Will Return.

GENERAL REFUSED POWER HE SOUGHT

Wanted to Dissolve Reichstag, Consent Was Denied, and Helpless to Rule, He Resigned.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 28. — Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher, for almost a decade considered to be Germany's most clever player of politics, today was checkmated by the opposition whom he a few days ago described as political manipulators, and resigned.

Former Chancellor Franz von Papen, Nationalist Leader Alfred Hugenberg and National Socialist Leader Adolf Hitler, plus the East Prussian Junkers and also certain big industrialists, persuaded President Von Hindenburg that Gen. Von Schleicher was unable to master Germany's economic crisis and insisted that a stronger man must be placed at the helm.

With the dismissal of Gen. Von Schleicher, President Von Hindenburg's conception of the Constitution has become a pivotal question. On one hand, those who scorn parliamentarism try to convince him the country is in such a state of emergency that the fate of the people is more important than the letter of the Constitution. On the other hand, organized labor of all political shades solemnly adjures the President to "energetically oppose all underground efforts aiming at a coup d'etat and to insist upon a constitutional solution of the crisis."

The deposed Prussian Premier, Otto Braun, even issued a public warning that a declaration of a state of national emergency would be tantamount to high treason.

Von Papin Contacts Hitler.

Former Chancellor Von Papen, as the confidant of President Von Hindenburg, immediately started contacting Hitler, Dr. Hugenberg and the Centrists, but Wilhelmstrasse expects no definite developments before Monday.

General von Schleicher, head of the 20th cabinet since the birth of the German republic, resigned after governing the nation only 56 days. This was a shorter administration than any previous chancellor's, with the exception of that of Prince Max von Baden, head of the last imperial cabinet, who was swept away by the revolution after 30 days in the chancellorship.

General von Schleicher resigned because the President refused to vest him with power to dissolve the Reichstag. He interpreted this refusal as meaning that he no longer enjoyed the President's confidence, without which it would be impossible for him to rule in the face of a hostile Reichstag.

In his interview with the President, General von Schleicher laid down three possible methods of solving the political crisis. First, he suggested a government backed by a Reichstag majority, which could be achieved only by making Hitler chancellor. Second, he proposed a minority government resting upon "the broad stream of popular support," which also would necessitate a Hitler chancellorship with the toleration of the parties of the right. Third, he suggested the formation of a presidential cabinet vested with extraordinary powers and independent of political parties.

Opposition to Von Schleicher.

Hitler's National Socialists have opposed General von Schleicher on the theory that he was responsible for the President's failure to appoint the Nazi chieftain to the chancellorship. The Nationalists objected to him because of his program for dividing large eastern estates into small parcels as a method of meeting the unemployment problem. Industrialists felt that he deferred too much to agriculture. The Centrists were filled with resentment because he overthrew the government of Dr. Heinrich Bruening last spring. Socialists and Communists considered him reactionary.

Political commentators expected that, if Hitler could guarantee a stable government, with the support of the Nationalists and at least the toleration of the Centrists, he would have an opportunity to become the next Chancellor. Failing that, they forecast the reappointment of Col. Von Papen.

Hermann Goering, speaker of the Reichstag, announced that he would not call the Legislature into session Tuesday as scheduled but would wait until the Cabinet crisis was over. The Council of Elders of the Reichstag will meet Tuesday to discuss the program.

ROOSEVELT TO TALK OVER BRITISH DEBT WITH ENVOY TODAY

Ronald was under no definite instructions, it was regarded as entirely possible he might outline to Mr. Roosevelt the British position, as enunciated by Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain in his speech at Leeds and in the subsequent British agreement to enter into new debt talks.

As viewed here, the British, by parrying Mr. Roosevelt's inference that debts and economic conditions were to be discussed simultaneously, hope to have forced the Washington conference to be narrowed down to debts alone.

In his Leeds speech Chamberlain retiterated that Britain would prefer all-around cancellation of debts and reparations but, if that was too much for America to accept, the British would negotiate, keeping in mind two points—that the settlement must be final and that German reparations must not be resumed.

"Best News England and World Have Had for Long Time."

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 28.—Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, tonight said the information that President-elect Roosevelt proposed to reopen the discussion of war debts was "the best news that England and the world have had for a long time."

Here en route to Warm Springs, Ga., for a general discussion with the President-elect on war debts and world economic and disarmament problems, Sir Ronald said the "debt difficulties of Great Britain and other nations are a paramount cause of the worldwide business inactivity. Needless to say, I am more than hopeful of the outcome."

"I like the way President-elect Roosevelt does things. It was late Friday before I knew he wanted to see me and of course I readily accepted his invitation. Mr. Stimson (the Secretary of State) arranged for the plane and here I am in Atlanta. Twenty-four hours ago I had not the slightest idea I would be anywhere other than in Washington."

The Ambassador flew here from the capital today, arriving at 5:15 p. m. on a regular passenger plane. He stopped here to await the arrival of Mrs. Roosevelt, who flew from Washington in a special plane, reaching here shortly after 7 p. m.

With Mrs. Roosevelt were Elliott Roosevelt, her son; Louis McHenry Howe, the President-elect's political secretary; Mrs. Henry Morganthau Jr., wife of one of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers, and Gene Vidal, former Army football star and a friend of the Roosevelt family.

Sir Ronald and Mrs. Roosevelt and her party left here by automobile at 8:45 p. m. for Warm Springs.

WOOLWORTH HEIRESS DENIES SHE IS ENGAGED TO COUNT

Miss Barbara Hutton Sails for Australia, Leaving Italian Nobleman on Pier.

By the Associated Press.

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Jan. 28.—Denying that she was engaged to be married to Count Emanuele Borromeo-d'Adda of Rome, Miss Barbara Hutton, 19-year-old heiress to the $50,000,000 Woolworth fortune, sailed late today for Australia, leaving the Count on the pier.

He had no statement to make after her departure, but beforehand he had stated that he considered he and Miss Hutton were "informally betrothed."

At the pier Count Borromeo-d'Adda handed the heiress a large envelope. She declined to accept it, and he walked on board with her. They spent 15 minutes in conversation before the boat sailed.

"I'm not going to marry anyone," she said. "That's straight and final."

OFFICERS UNABLE TO FIND LUKE LEA AND HIS SON

Under Prison Sentence in North Carolina; Report They Surrendered Is Denied.

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 28.—Luke Lea, former United States Senator, who is facing a prison sentence in North Carolina, could not be located tonight.

The newspaper publisher and his son, Luke Lea Jr., whom North Carolina seeks to punish following upon their conviction of bank law violations, were reported today first to have surrendered and later to have been arrested in the little mountain town of Jamestown, but Sheriff Peavyhouse of Fentress County, talking by telephone tonight from Jamestown, denied they had been taken into custody there.

Sheriff Peavyhouse explained his absence since yesterday afternoon by saying he had been up near the Kentucky border looking for an escaped prisoner.

The Leas' chief counsel, L. E. Gwinn, said previously announced plans to resist extradition and, if necessary, seek a habeas corpus writ were unchanged.

No word came from the Leas' offices here as to where they were today.

The Leas were convicted in Asheville, N. C., Aug. 25, 1931, of bank law violations, the elder being sentenced to six to 10 years in prison, and Luke Lea Jr. to pay $25,000 in fines and costs, or serve two to six years.

W. A. Garrett, a Jamestown attorney, who also was reported to have left with the Leas in their car, denied tonight that he had and said he was "pretty sure" they were not in Fentress County.

MANY MADE HOMELESS ALONG NEW ENGLAND COAST BY GALE

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—New England's coast line today took another beating from a roaring surf that caused damage estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars and made many persons temporarily homeless. Whipped by two days of northeast wind, the sea rushed in over seawalls and other protective barriers at high tide about noon and then receded, leaving damage and disorder in its wake.

Summer cottages toppled into the sea and many buildings and piers fell. Coastal lowlands were inundated for miles. The tide rose three feet above normal at Boston.

Shipping was tied up. Thirty-five miles to sea from its usual base, the Nantucket lightship fought feebly to return to its post from which it was driven yesterday.

Railroads and, in some places, trolley lines were inundated. Long stretches of track close to the sea were buried under tons of boulders and sand.

The Red Cross moved into Revere on the Massachusetts north shore and set up headquarters to supplement the efforts of police and firemen in assisting residents.

Many roads were closed to travel by order of state and local authorities when the tide receded, leaving them broken or strewn with debris. Some were impassable. Cottages tumbled into the sea after being undermined at Kennebunkport, Me., in the Beachmont section of Revere and other places along the Massachusetts and New Hampshire coast.

FORD SAYS ATTACK ON HIS INDUSTRIES CLOSED FACTORIES

Will Be Going Again Full Tilt in Short Time, Auto Maker Asserts — 'Can't Stop Progress.'

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Jan. 28.—Henry Ford, in a brief statement today, said the labor difficulties in local body plants that resulted in a suspension of work in his factories "is not a strike—it's an attack on the Ford industries." He added, however, that "one way or another our plants will be going again full tilt in a very short time."

"You just can't stop progress," Ford said. "This is not a strike—it's an attack on the Ford industries. So was the Selden patent suit years ago, but all efforts of that kind to throttle any industry are like a man throwing ashes into the wind. Eventually he gets himself all covered over with ashes. One way or another, our plants will be going again full tilt in a very short time."

Ford declined to be quoted further and did not elaborate upon the statement published abroad that he blamed "certain competitors" for the strike in the local body plants.

The reopening, Ford officers said, would follow "within six hours" upon settlement of differences between the Briggs Manufacturing Co. and its workers who walked out last week. Officers of both concerns indicated a belief tonight that the strikers would accept by Monday noon a wage guarantee offered by the Briggs company.

Ford's associates last night said that Ford told them informally the London Evening Standard statement quoting him as saying "the actual truth is that certain bankers are trying to obtain control of the Ford concern" was "not exactly correct."

Might Make Own Bodies.

While an official statement to that effect was lacking, it was intimated consideration had been given to the possibility the Ford company might prepare to make its own bodies if necessary. All the dies now used by the Briggs company at the Highland Park plant are owned by the Ford company.

At the Briggs plants today, police said the strikers were wavering between a desire to return to work by Monday noon, when the Briggs company said it would begin hiring generally, and holding to demands of their leaders that the company recognize shop committees set up by the strikers. State police guarded the plants. Forty men returned to work this morning, jeered by a dwindling line of pickets.

Briggs officers said they considered their guarantee to the workers of a base rate of pay, with abolishment of "dead time" deductions when material was not available for work, were sufficient. They said they would conduct no more negotiations with the men.

Deadline Is Monday Noon.

"The jobs are there if they want to come and get them," H. A. Hund, general manager of the Briggs company, said. "We will hold them until Monday noon; then we will hire generally."

Previous to the suspension, about 40,000 employes had been working mainly three days a week in the Ford plant. Officers said approximately 60,000 others were affected in plants outside Detroit when the Briggs company was unable to furnish bodies.

Several other automobile factories whose bodies are furnished by the Briggs concern reported a surplus on hand sufficient to carry them into next week.

The Briggs company planned to keep its employment offices open on Sunday for all former employes who wished to return.

HARRY LAUDER IN MERRY MOOD AS HE SAILS FOR SCOTLAND

"I'm Part of Constitution of U. S.," He Says; No Big Profit in His Tour.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. — Sir Harry Lauder sailed for his native Scotland today. Dressed in tweeds and a cape coat, he stood on the deck and joked.

"I've been coming over here so long that I am part and parcel of the Constitution of the United States," he said. "Where would Scotch songs and Scotch jokes be in America today if I had not brought them here 25 years ago and kept bringing them here ever since? I am an institution."

He was reminded that he was dispensing free, ideas which might make him money on the stage.

"That's all right," he added, "I'm reckless this morning. I'm giving them away. When a fellow is in love he is reckless—and I am in love. With whom? My profession."

He said his 16 weeks' tour had been a success but "there was no big profit, I'll admit."

BLACK AND NORRIS DEMAND INQUIRY

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—A full investigation of charges that a few great banks have established a "hidden dictatorship" over thousands of industrial corporations throughout the United States by means of interlocking directorates and financial intimidation, was demanded today by Senators Black (Dem., Alabama, and Norris (Rep.), Nebraska. If the authority of existing committees is not sufficient to cover such an inquiry, they purpose to ask the appointment of a special committee with adequate power.

The impetus for such an investigation grew out of hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee on the Black 30-hour week bill, in which witnesses testified that eight large banks in New York were represented on the directorates of more than 3700 banks and corporations, and that numerous employers had been compelled, against their will, to reduce wages. It was heightened by the statement attributed to Henry Ford, that banking interests were trying to get conrol of his business.

Speaking in the Senate this afternoon, Black said: "It might interest Mr. Ford to know that at the very moment when he was making this statement, John P. Frey, head of the Metal Trades Division of the American Federation of Labor, was testifying before the Judiciary Committee that a few New York banks had established a financial dictatorship over thousands of corporations scattered throughout the country, including almost every conceivable form of business.

Ford No Financial Radical.

"Henry Ford is probably the largest manufacturer in the world, and I hardly think he will be suspected of harboring radical notions about financial affairs. I consider that his statement is especially significant, when studied in connection with the testimony before the committee.

"Mr. Frey told us that until the last year or two he had always opposed governmental limitation on hours of work, believing that the problem could be worked out satisfactorily between employers and employed. He has changed his mind since he discovered that employers do not control the policies of their own companies, but are compelled to accept dictation from the bankers."

Other witnesses had told the committee that when employers protested against bankers' orders to reduce wages they were told that unless reductions were initiated immediately money to meet their payrolls would not be forthcoming. In some instances, it appeared, these orders were conveyed through the banks' representatives on the boards of the respective corporations.

Chairman Norris of the Judiciary Committee vigorously seconded Black's demand for a complete investigation of the situation, declaring that if his committee lacked the necessary powers to carry it through, he would introduce a resolution for a special inquiry.

Norris and Black announced that the Judiciary Committee would pursue its inquiry into the subject next week, asking the Senate for additional authority if it becomes necessary.

BILL RESTRICTING DRY ENFORCEMENT PASSED BY HOUSE

Measure Bars Purchase of Liquor for Evidence, Wire Tapping and Use of Under-Cover Men.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—New restrictions on prohibition enforcement were given final approval today by the House which passed and sent to the Senate a bill allowing only $8,440,000 for this activity next year.

Despite statements from high administration officials that the things it proposed to bar would handicap enforcers, the House left in the bill all the restrictions it had adopted yesterday.

These forbid the purchase of liquor as evidence, prevent pay for evidence, prohibit wire tapping and bar employment of informers or under cover men.

The $8,440,000 for prohibition out of the $102,602,000 in the four-department bill compares with $10,250,000 appropriated for Federal dry law work this year and $9,599,000, the amount sought in the budget for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1934.

Faces Fight in Senate.

Hardly had the House passed the bill today when Senate leaders voiced their differing intentions.

Senator Sheppard (Dem.), Texas, a leading prohibitionist, said he would appeal to the Senate Appropriations Committee to eliminate the provision prohibiting wire tapping, buying of liquor for evidence and the hiring of informers. He added if the committee fails to heed his request he would take the fight to the Senate floor.

On the other hand, Senator Blaine (Rep.), Wisconsin, said the reduction from $9,120,000 to $8,440,000 for prohibition enforcement in the $102,602,000 supply bill for the State, Justice, Commerce and Labor departments, was "not enough."

Another prohibitionist, Senator Capper (Rep.), Kansas, said the amount left was "too low and would cripple the work" of enforcement.

Senator Bingham (Rep.), Connecticut, said the House action was "another evidence" confirming the contentions of Attorney-General Mitchell and various bar associations that whatever is to be done about prohibition repeal and modification "ought to be done at once." Mitchell has advocated quick action on repeal to avert nullification of the eighteenth amendment through lack of enforcement. Bingham added, however, he would support the cut in the Senate Appropriations Committee.

House Anti-Drys Hold Ground.

Before passing the bill, the House was called on by Representative Oliver (Dem.), Alabama, chairman of the appropriations sub-committee in charge, to vote separately on an amendment by Representative Tinkham (Rep.), Massachusetts, to prevent use of funds for wire tapping, and one by Tarver (Dem.), Georgia, to prohibit funds being used for the purchase of liquor for evidence and information from "stool pigeons" or undercover men.

Holding their strength, the anti-prohibitionists shouted down the drys on the Tinkham amendment and Oliver's effort to get a roll call vote failed when an insufficient number of members demanded it.

The final test came when Representative Blanton (Dem.), Texas, forced a roll call on the Tarver amendment, which was retained in the bill 174 to 165. One hundred and 10 Democrats, 63 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite, voted for, while 62 Democrats, and 103 Republicans voted against. No effort was made to override the amendment by Representative Griffin (Dem.), New York, approved yesterday cutting the enforcement fund to $8,440,000.

Members of the Missouri delegation who voted lined up as follows on the Tarver amendment:

For—Cochran, Dickinson, Johnson, Lozier, Milligan, Williams, Democrats; Dyer, Niedringhaus, Republicans. Against—Barton, Cannon, Democrats; Hopkins, Republican.

Cheered by their unusual victory, the anti-prohibitionists who have fought for years in the House for these restrictions on the enforcement fund, shouted and applauded.

As the enforcement fund for the fiscal year 1934 now stands, it is about 18 per cent below 1933 appropriations, 12 per cent less than this year's budget estimates, and about 7 per cent below the Appropriation Committee's recommendation of $9,120,000.

CROWD MARCHES ON JAPANESE CONSULATE IN CHICAGO

Several Persons Hurt When Police Block Demonstrators at Bridge.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—A crowd of 500 marching toward the Chicago Tribune building to hold a demonstration before the Japanese Consulate there was blocked at the Michigan boulevard bridge today by police and several were hurt in a brief fight. Banners bearing the legend "Peace for China, Down with Japan" were displayed by the marchers.

Policeman Bernard Deshon was injured by a blow on the head, and two demonstrators were similarly hurt.

Warned of the impending demonstration, the police reserves had drawn up with steel helmets and carrying pick-ax handles for clubs. At the boulevard bridge the police ordered the crowd to halt. One agitator jumped to an elevation and started a speech. Police rushed him, knocked him down and the crowd retreated.

Lydia Bedell, alias Bennett, a former Chicago school teacher who was neatly dressed and wore a fur collar, led the demonstrators with Warren Lamson. Both were described by the police as leaders of the Chicago Unemployed Council. They were arrested and with about 125 others taken to jail.

WARRANTS ACCUSE TWO IN HOLDUP OF CREVE COEUR BANK

Confession of Youth on Spending Spree Leads to Arrest of Second Man in $5793 Holdup.

Warrants issued at Clayton yesterday charge Norman Wilson Creason, an unemployed mechanic, and Charles W. Harrison, a meter reader for the Union Electric Light and Power Co., with the $5793 holdup of the Creve Coeur Farmers' Bank last Monday. The specific charge is robbery under the Henry law, a capital offense.

Creason, who is 19 years old and has been living in the 5000 block of Page boulevard, has confessed he was the holdup man and has said Harrison gave him a meter reader's cap to wear into the bank as a ruse and a company automobile in which to escape, sharing in the loot afterward. Harrison, who, with Creason, is in jail at Clayton, has made no statement. He is 22 years old and has been living in the 1400 block of North Euclid avenue.

Creason's eagerness to spend his share of the loot led to the arrests. In buying a used automobile here for $235 cash and immediately trading it off in Paducah, Ky., for a new machine, with more cash involved, he aroused the suspicions of an employe of the Fox Motor Co., 4638 Easton avenue, where the first car was bought. After the Paducah dealer had telephoned the company here for information about the used car, the local dealer notified police, who had Creason and two companions arrested in Paducah early Friday.

Fifth Young Man Held.

After being identified in Paducah by Robert F. Bloom, cashier of the bank, Creason waived extradition and was returned to Clayton with his companions, who he said had known of the robbery. As a result of his confession detectives arrested Harrison and a fifth young man Creason named as having knowledge of the holdup.

A poolroom acquaintance with Harrison during the last year brought about plans for the robbery, the mechanic said. "Harrison told me he had been reading the meter at the Creve Coeur Bank and said it would be easy to rob the place," he related. "He suggested I do the job and we dropped by the bank at night so he could show me the door to use and where the money was, in the cash drawer and vault.

"Last Sunday night he came by my boarding house and told me how to go about robbing the bank. We drove out to the bank in his green Nash sedan and when we got beyond it, turned around and came back toward the city. He said for me to take another look at the bank, that we were going to 'get it' the next day."

Creason said they met by appointment at Harrison's garage at 6:30 o'clock last Monday morning and that he rode with Harrison to his work in Maplewood. Separating then, according to his confession, they met in Maplewood at noon and drove to the Union Electric branch in Webster Groves.

Tells of Getting Pistol.

"He gave me the cap to wear and pointed out the company coupe I was to use, which he said already had the keys in it," the mechanic recounted. "I got it and followed him to Lindbergh boulevard, then a mile out on Ladue road. He gave me an automatic pistol with two shells in it and said he'd meet me at Blackberry lane and Bonhomme road, in University City.

"I drove near the bank and went into a hardware store to get a sack for the money. I told the man I wanted a sack to put some meters in. He didn't have any, so I went to a grocery store and bought a salt sack for 5 cents. Then I drove in front of the bank, left the motor of the car running, and went in.

"I told the cashier I wanted to recheck the light meter and he let me in the banking room. I took down some figures on the meter and then asked him to look at the meter for me, to get him away from his desk, where a revolver was lying. I then got his gun and marched him and a scrubwoman into the washroom, locked them in and told them to keep quiet. I hadn't seen any money in the vault as I went by so I took what was at the teller's window and in the cash drawer."

Interrupted by Mrs. Rausch.

As he was putting the money in the sack, Creason said, he was interrupted by the assistant cashier, Mrs. Bertha D. Rausch, coming back from lunch. He related that he opened the door for her, then marched her to the vault and pushed the vault door to without locking it. Finishing the robbery, he said he got into the automobile

WARRANTS ACCUSE TWO IN HOLDUP OF CREVE COEUR BANK

Confession of Youth on Spending Spree Leads to Arrest of Second Man in $5793 Holdup.

Warrants issued at Clayton yesterday charge Norman Wilson Creason, an unemployed mechanic, and Charles W. Harrison, a meter reader for the Union Electric Light and Power Co., with the $5793 holdup of the Creve Coeur Farmers' Bank last Monday. The specific charge is robbery under the Henry law, a capital offense.

Creason, who is 19 years old and has been living in the 5000 block of Page boulevard, has confessed he was the holdup man and has said Harrison gave him a meter reader's cap to wear into the bank as a ruse and a company automobile in which to escape, sharing in the loot afterward. Harrison, who, with Creason, is in jail at Clayton, has made no statement. He is 22 years old and has been living in the 1400 block of North Euclid avenue.

Creason's eagerness to spend his share of the loot led to the arrests. In buying a used automobile here for $235 cash and immediately trading it off in Paducah, Ky., for a new machine, with more cash involved, he aroused the suspicions of an employe of the Fox Motor Co., 4638 Easton avenue, where the first car was bought. After the Paducah dealer had telephoned the company here for information about the used car, the local dealer notified police, who had Creason and two companions arrested in Paducah early Friday.

Fifth Young Man Held.

After being identified in Paducah by Robert F. Bloom, cashier of the bank, Creason waived extradition and was returned to Clayton with his companions, who he said had known of the robbery. As a result of his confession detectives arrested Harrison and a fifth young man Creason named as having knowledge of the holdup.

A poolroom acquaintance with Harrison during the last year brought about plans for the robbery, the mechanic said. "Harrison told me he had been reading the meter at the Creve Coeur Bank and said it would be easy to rob the place," he related. "He suggested I do the job and we dropped by the bank at night so he could show me the door to use and where the money was, in the cash drawer and vault.

"Last Sunday night he came by my boarding house and told me how to go about robbing the bank. We drove out to the bank in his green Nash sedan and when we got beyond it, turned around and came back toward the city. He said for me to take another look at the bank, that we were going to 'get it' the next day."

Creason said they met by appointment at Harrison's garage at 6:30 o'clock last Monday morning and that he rode with Harrison to his work in Maplewood. Separating then, according to his confession, they met in Maplewood at noon and drove to the Union Electric branch in Webster Groves.

Tells of Getting Pistol.

"He gave me the cap to wear and pointed out the company coupe I was to use, which he said already had the keys in it," the mechanic recounted. "I got it and followed him to Lindbergh boulevard, then a mile out on Ladue road. He gave me an automatic pistol with two shells in it and said he'd meet me at Blackberry lane and Bonhomme road, in University City.

"I drove near the bank and went into a hardware store to get a sack for the money. I told the man I wanted a sack to put some meters in. He didn't have any, so I went to a grocery store and bought a salt sack for 5 cents. Then I drove in front of the bank, left the motor of the car running, and went in.

"I told the cashier I wanted to recheck the light meter and he let me in the banking room. I took down some figures on the meter and then asked him to look at the meter for me, to get him away from his desk, where a revolver was lying. I then got his gun and marched him and a scrubwoman into the washroom, locked them in and told them to keep quiet. I hadn't seen any money in the vault as I went by so I took what was at the teller's window and in the cash drawer."

Interrupted by Mrs. Rausch.

As he was putting the money in the sack, Creason said, he was interrupted by the assistant cashier, Mrs. Bertha D. Rausch, coming back from lunch. He related that he opened the door for her, then marched her to the vault and pushed the vault door to without locking it. Finishing the robbery, he said he got into the automobile and drove to University City, meeting Harrison there.

"I left the coupe parked across Bonhomme road and we drove away in Harrison's sedan," he said. "I threw the cashier's revolver away in a stream back of University City High School. We first hid the money sack under the floor boards of the sedan, then locked it in the trunk on the back end.

"At 7:30 o'clock that night I went to his house and we divided the money. He said he was going to put his in a safe deposit box. I took mine and went over to the Fox Motor Co. to buy a car."

It was scarcely half an hour later, Creason said, that he completed the negotiations, paying $235 for a used car in $5, $10 and $20 bills that were taken from the bank. He said he arranged to have "airwheels" put on the machine, a convertible coupe, and returned for it the next morning.

At a clothing store in the 2600 block of Franklin avenue, according to his confession, he bought two suits, two topcoats, two hats, two pairs of shoes, jackets, separate trousers, underwear, shirts and neckties. Later he bought a third suit of clothes downtown.

Told Friend of Robbery.

"I met an unemployed bellboy I knew," Creason said, "and told him I had robbed the Creve Coeur Bank. I said I was going to Paducah, my home town, and asked him to come along. Just before we started I met another fellow and gave him $50. The bellboy and I went down through Illinois and got into Paducah at 2 a. m. Wednesday, registering at the Irvin Cobb Hotel.

"The next day we did a lot of riding around and drank a lot of 'Paducah ink.' That night we went to a show at Mayfield, Ky. The next day I went to see about having a heater taken out of the car, as it was about to burn us up, and a salesman sold me a new Ford coach, taking my car and $461, which I gave him in fives, tens and twenties. I had him put a $50 radio in the car.

"Then the fellow to whom I had given $50 got in town by bus and we all went to Mayfield again. We got in bed about 2 a. m. Friday, and the police came to our room at 6:30 o'clock and arrested us."

The police found $700 in the room and were assured by Creason's two companions that it was his and that he was paying all expenses.

Late Friday Sheriff Deuser, Deputy Litzinger and Prosecuting Attorney Anderson of St. Louis County, the bank cashier and two women employes of the Union Electric branch at Webster Groves arrived in Paducah. Cashier Bloom identified Creason immediately. After a futile story of finding the money, the mechanic agreed to return to Clayton.

COLORADO TO FREE MAN WHO WENT BACK TO PRISON

Governor Commutes Term of Glenn Smeeman, Wanted in St. Louis Under 2-Year Sentence.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Jan. 28.—Glenn Smeeman, who as Harry Stanley became a successful Cleveland business man after his escape from a Colorado convict road gang, will walk from the State penitentiary next week a free man, so far as Colorado is concerned.

Gov. Edwin C. Johnson issued an executive order commuting Smeeman's three years and one month sentence for motor car theft to six months. Smeeman probably will be released from prison early in the week. "Good time" allowances mean he will leave the penitentiary as soon as necessary formalities are completed.

In granting executive clemency to Smeeman, Gov. Johnson exercised his executive powers relative to prisoners for the first time since he took office Jan. 10.

Gov. Johnson first planned to commute Smeeman's sentence to 11 to 37 months. A prison expert figured that Smeeman, who faces a two-year sentence in St. Louis, could not be released in less than 60 days, considering all good-time allowance. The amended executive order was issued late today. Smeeman surrendered to Colorado authorities after being a fugitive for 15 years.

Smeeman escaped from a Colorado prison road gang in 1918 and later went to Cleveland, where with his brother, George A. Bronson, he built up the music business. He married Miss Margaret Stutz, a member of a prominent Cleveland family. Evidence was submitted at his pardon hearing to show that he had led the life of a good citizen after his escape.

SUPREME COURT TAKES OVER RICHARDS DISBARMENT CASE

Decides It Has Jurisdiction and Announces It Will Appoint Commissioner.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 28.—The supreme court today assumed original jurisdiction in the disbarment proceedings against Paul A. Richards, St. Louis attorney, and announced that a commissioner would be appointed to take testimony in the case.

Don Purteet, former assistant attorney general, who appeared with Richards, asked for dismissal of the proceedings on the ground that the supreme court was "wholly without original jurisdiction in disbarment proceedings."

Glendy B. Arnold, former circuit judge, who with J. W. McAfee, also of St. Louis, is representing the grievence committees of the St. Louis and State Bar Associations, asked for the appointment of a commissioner.

When the court, sitting en banc, agreed to this, Purteet asked that the commissioner not be a member of either the St. Louis or State Bar Associations. Chief Justice Ernest S. Gantt said the request would be considered.

The disbarment petition charges that Richards has been guilty of conduct which makes him unfit to continue to practice as an attorney.

Richards was acquitted in May, 1932, in St. Louis of charges growing out of the kidnaping of the late Alexander Berg, wealthy furrier.

MAN STABBED BY BROTHER IN DINNER TABLE QUARREL

Earl Cox, 25, in Serious Condition With Three Wounds in Chest; Assailant Held.

Earl Cox, 25-year-old clerk, was stabbed three times in the chest and back by his brother, Louis, 38, following a dinner-table quarrel yesterday evening in their home, 4231 Pleasant street. Earl was taken to City Hospital, where his condition was said to be serious.

Police found Earl on the kitchen floor of the house next door, where he ran after the stabbing. His mother, Mrs. Abbie Cox, told them Louis, an unemployed auditor, had fled after the attack. He was arrested when he returned home several hours later. He said he had been excited and "just ran around awhile."

"Earl brought this all on himself," Louis told police. "He's been picking on me for several years, because I'm on the outs with the family—I eat with the others, but sleep in the garage. I just couldn't stand it any longer."

SAYS 'ANARCHISTS' BOMBED HOME OF U. S. FASCIST CHIEF

Brother of John M. di Sylvestro, Friend of Mussolini, Lays Outrage to Politics.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28.—Police tonight were seeking clews to the identity of an "inspector" who is suspected of placing a bomb in the home of John M. di Sylvestro, national head of the Sons of Italy, destroying the house, killing Mrs. di Sylvestro and injuring 16 persons. The house was blown to pieces early today.

The man, since learned to have been an impostor, made an "inspection" in the basement yesterday.

Mrs. Elizabeth di Sylvestro apparently was killed outright. Four children and their governess fell from the third story to the first, and were injured, as were also 11 other persons in the neighborhood.

Di Sylvestro was not at home at the time. Legal adviser to the Italian Consul in Philadelphia, he had been conferring with an Assistant United States District Attorney and was nearing his home when the blast shook Southern Philadelphia.

Police, recalling a bombing at the same place in 1927, favored the theory that political enemies or radicals attempted to destroy the Di Sylvestro family. The father, a friend of Premier Mussolini, has been an active supporter of Fascism.

Outrage Laid to "Anarchists."

Di Sylvestro was in no condition to be questioned, authorities declared, but a cousin, John J. Sabatino, talked with him. Sabatino said Di Sylvestro believed the bombing to be the "work of anarchists who oppose his support of Mussolini."

The first policemen on the scene went through holes in the wall of an adjoining house to get out the victims. They found the children and the governess, but it was more than seven hours before firemen recovered Mrs. di Sylvestro's body.

Marie Guerino, 37 years old, the governess, was the most seriously hurt, suffering skull injuries. Helen di Sylvestro, 14, has an injured ankle as well as cuts and bruises. Anita and Gloria, 10-year-old twins, and Arnold, 19, suffered superficial injuries. Three other Di Sylvestro children are in school in Florence, Italy.

Susie Green, a domestic, told police that a man came to the house at 1619 South Broad street yesterday and said he was an inspector for the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. Because of subway construction under the street, she said he told her, he wanted to inspect the cellar for cracks. He was in the cellar for some time. A check of all such inspectors showed that none was sent there, the transit company said.

"Some Political Implications."

Judge Eugene V. Alessandroni of Common Pleas Court, whose father was one of the 11 neighbors slightly injured, said: "We are perplexed as to the motive, but cannot help feeling it has some political implications. There was nothing in Mr. di Sylvestro's private or business affairs which would have goaded anyone to such violence."

Five thousand dollars reward will be paid, Judge Alessandroni said, by the Grand Lodge of the Sons of Italy of Pennsylvania for the conviction and sentence of the perpetrators of the outrage.

Di Sylvestro, who has had several audiences with the Italian Premier, received the rank of commander of the Order of the Crown in 1924. On March 9, 1927, a bomb exploded on the doorstep of Di Sylvestro's home 15 minutes after one had been detonated at the home of his brother, Joseph. Neither did serious damage.

The funeral is in charge of the American Women's Council of Justice. Burial will be in Sunset Hill Burial Park, where the management has donated a lot and a bronze grave marker.

SEEKS TO INDICT TWO EX-OFFICERS OF ILLINOIS LIFE

State's Attorney Says He Will Lay Accusations Against E. J. Stevens and Father Before Grand Jury

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney announced today the graind jury would be asked next week to indict two former officers of the Illinois Life Insurance Co., now in receivership, on criminal charges.

Courtney indicated the charges on which the indictment would be sought would include conspiracy to defraud the insurance company of $1,000,000. It was that charge on which Ernest J. Stevens, former president of the company, was arrested last night.

Stevens appeared at the Federal Building today and surrendered a recently obtained passport to United States Attorney Dwight Green. He told Green he was "merely planning a vacation abroad and meant nothing wrong."

In addition to Stevens, Courtney said, an indictment would be sought against James W. Stevens, his father, formerly chairman of the board of the company.

Attorneys for intervening policy holders in the Illinois Life Insurance Co. asked the Federal Court to direct the receiver for the company to take steps toward devising a mutualization plan.

The policy holders' petition requested that a New York firm be employed to devise the plan. Attorney William M. Klein, counsel for the receiver, said he expected to file next Thursday an analysis of reorganization and reinsurance proposals already filed with the receiver.

LEBRUN SEEKING STRONG MAN TO FORM CABINET

Delicate Parliamentary Situation Created in France by Overthrow of Premier Paul-Boncour.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—President Albert Lebrun is looking for a strong man to handle the delicate parliamentary situation following the overthrow early today of Premier Joseph Paul-Boncour.

Former Premier Edouard Herriot looms as potential head of the Government, although his strong stand on the war debt momentarily appears to eliminate him. Asked about his attitude on forming a Cabinet, he said: "It is too early. The lines are not clearly drawn." Herriot was overthrown because he insisted that France make the debt payment to the United States Dec. 15.

Not only is the Chamber of Deputies upset because of a split in the Left majority, resulting in a Socialist defection, but there have been numerous disorderly demonstrations against heavier financial burdens. The latest was a manifestation of taxpayers who shouted in the boulevards: "No more taxes!"

Paul-Boncour, who had been Premier only 40 days, was defeated 390 to 193 this morning on the taxation issue. The combination of Radical Socialists and Socialists which had supported him broke over proposals for a 5 per cent increase in income and other general taxes.

Friends of Edouard Daladier, War Minister in the Paul-Boncour Government, are presenting him as the man for Premier, favoring the decree method to balance the budget. Others prominently mentioned are Camille Chautemps, Minister of Interior under Paul-Boncour, and Senator Jules Jeanneney, with former President Gaston Doumergue as a possible neutral commanding figure.

Taxpayers from various regions of France, carrying placards, held a demonstration in streets of the American quarter, causing nervous merchants to pull down their iron shutters. Many temporary arrests were made, but charges by Republican guards dispersed the demonstrators who previously had adopted resolutions opposing higher taxes.

President Lebrun will continue his consultations with political leaders tomorrow.

CANDIDATE FOR COMPTROLLER HAS PLATFORM PRINTED

J. Rhey McCord Says 100,000 Copies Will Be Distributed in Homes.

Distribution of the platform of J. Rhey McCord, 4241 Maryland avenue, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Comptroller, will begin tomorrow. One hundred thousand copies of the leaflet will be delivered to homes.

McCord describes his platform as conforming exactly with the Democratic State and national platforms on the issue of "vastly greater economy in government." He says the Comptroller can lighten the taxpayers' burden by efficient budgeting and unremitting watchfulness over disbursements. There are various other ways in which the Comptroller can conserve public money, McCord adds.

Republican partisanship has created a City Hall autocracy which has devoted its efforts mainly to self-perpetuation, McCord charges. He says he does not have a large campaign fund.

MRS. AGNES BURNS WIECK,
President, Women's Auxiliary of the Progressive Miners of America.

Wives of Illinois Miners New Force in Their Struggle

Belleville Woman Who Is President of Progressive Auxiliary Traces Growth and Tells of Fight to Feed Families

Out of the drab mining town of the Illinois coal fields, has arisen a new warrior to help the diggers and their families in their losing fight against poverty, the advances of the Machine Age, and the ruthlessness of certain of the mine operators.

The newcomer in the arena where a great industrial battle is being fought, is the Women's Auxiliary of the Progressive Miners of America which last Thursday carried to the capital at Springfield a throng of its white-garbed members variously estimated at from 6000 to 10,000 to march in silent protest against the conditions confronting all but a few of the Illinois miners.

Born in despair, nurtured in penury, the women's organization has not only reached the point where its protest is a powerful voice, but by devious means has been able to place food within the reach of the miners and their families whose plight most nearly approaches desperation.

Ballots Reported Stolen.

The newest war in the Illinois field began last spring after the United Mine Workers of America had rejected a proposal to take a cut in wages to the so-called $5 wage scale. After a second referendum was taken among the union miners the ballots were reported mysteriously stolen, and the officers of the union, headed by its president, John L. Lewis, thereupon declared the reduced wage scale in effect.

Hundreds of diggers doubted the authenticity of the holdup story, wondered why duplicates of the ballots were not obtained from the locals at once. Thus sprang up the Progressive Miners of America, who now claim in their membership two-thirds of the 45,000 diggers in the State, and who are employed under contract in every county save Christian, near the Capital, and Franklin, in the southern part of the State.

Five men and a woman were killed, many were injured in the fight to establish the union. The National Guard was called to Christian County last August. It is still there, after a brief interlude. In the midst of the turmoil the women's auxiliary began to grow. A unit was formed here, another there, and the organization took definite shape in a convention at Gillespie in November.

"We can make as effective a fight for our rights as our men," Mrs. Agnes Burns Wieck of Belleville, president, said yesterday in discussing the growth of the movement. "We know the hardship of the miner's life better than he does, because we fight it in the home more than he does.

"The miner has lived a slim life for years. Even in good times there was not work for all and in the depression the miner who works two days out of the week is lucky. That is why we were unqualifiedly against the so-called $5 scale. That is why we urged our men to stand against it.

"I am the wife of a miner and the daughter of a miner. Like every woman in the coal field I have seen and felt the privation that is our certain lot. Today, with thousands of men out of work, our plight is aggravated by the terrorism of a reign by mine guards and by the Sheriffs who commission them as their deputies.

Example of Hardship.

"Here is a letter in my mail today from a woman in the Franklin County Field. 'My husband has worked only six days since Nov. 15,' she writes. 'We get $3 a week State aid. Of our five children all but two are barefoot. They tell us it is a great life if we don't weaken, but I am already weakening. The struggle is too great.'

"This woman's husband still clings to the United Mine Workers. Her eldest son was killed in a mine disaster. Her case sounds like an unusual one, but there are thousands like her in the coal field, wondering where the next meal is coming from, wondering how long they can stay in their homes with rent long past due.

"When my boy was born—he's now 11—I decided to make a study of the care and diet of children, so that I could be of help to the mine mothers. I wrote articles about the necessity of milk, oranges and cod liver oil in a child's diet.

No Milk for Children.

"It was a waste of time. I can show you children in the mining towns who have not had milk for four years, whose only drink, save water, is coffee, without cream or sugar. Cod liver oil is unknown, oranges are a delicacy that comes only with Christmas.

"To do what we could, the auxiliary decided to devote part of its activities to providing food for the miners, particularly in Christian County, which is closed to the Progressive Miners as far as work is concerned.

"We opened a soup kitchen there, begged food from farmers and merchants, canned vegetables and fruit and prepared to take care of the men, women and children who are starving there. What happened? The kitchen was raided, the stock was destroyed. Even the pitiful little soup bowls that we bought were smashed, every one of them.

Excuse of Raiders.

"The excuse of the raiders, deputy sheriffs, was that there was a bootlegging joint in the same building. Whether that was true or not, I don't know. I do know that it was a heart-breaking loss.

We have had to fight against our enemies, the coal operators, on the outside, and on the inside the Communists who tried to get into our membership. With the Communists we cannot deal, since we still have confidence in our government, and since we have learned too that the promises of the Communist agitators are not to be believed.

"Since Gov. Horner has taken office things have improved somewhat. We are now allowed to dispense food in Christian County and we are allowed our constitutional right of free speech and peaceful assembly.

"But that is only a slight improvement. We want now, by peaceful means such as we employed at the Springfield demonstration, to show that the new miners' group has the sympathy and support of the rank-and-file miner. We want to be recognized, and we want to be allowed to work peaceably."

Mrs. Wieck and her husband, Ed Wieck, a veteran miner, have been leaders in wage discussions in the mine field for years. Both write for miners' publications and occasionally for magazines of general circulation.

Mrs. Wieck, a small, dynamic woman with a gift of leadership, conceived and directed the demonstration at Springfield, which was concluded with presentation to Gov. Horner of the auxiliary's four-point petition, asking for restoration of civil liberties, more efficient distribution of State aid funds, defeat of the proposed State sales tax, and enactment of an unemployment insurance measure.

Legion Commander Coming.

Plans are being made by local American Legion officials for the visit of Louis A. Johnson of Clarksburg, W. Va., national commander of the legion, who will be here Feb. 25. He is expected to speak on proposals for cutting Federal appropriations for disabled veterans.

WANTS CLAIMS FIXED ON LITTLE RIVER BONDS

Investor Sues to Block Preferred Payments by Drainage District.

Suit to determine the interest of certain bondholders in a $78,000 sinking fund of the Little River Drainage District in Missouri was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Richard T. Shelton, holder of a $5000 bond of the district.

The suit asks that the supervisors of the district and other bondholders be enjoined from executing judgment in a mandamus action to obtain preferred claims on the fund.

According to the petition bonds in the amount of $11,100,000 were issued in the district between October, 1912, and October, 1924, of which $8,000,000 is outstanding, with $1,060,500 due and unpaid. About $700,000 interest also is due, it is asserted. All payments were made up to April 1, 1929, the petition sets forth, but since that time the district has collected only part of the benefit taxes and has on hand the sinking fund in controversy. It is alleged suits against delinquent taxpayers in the district have netted little or nothing and the bonds will never be paid in full.

The suit sets forth that the Sturdivant Bank of Cape Girardeau last April obtained a writ of mandamus in the Circuit Court at Cape Girardeau directing the supervisors to pay in full $8516.50 of bonds and coupons held by the bank, although C. A. Vandivort, president of the bank and one of the supervisors, had said that the district would not be able to pay the amount of bonds in full. The supervisors appealed to the Supreme Court, but other bondholders with claims totaling $99,985 have asked similar writs to compel payment of their claims.

Shelton alleges it is unjust for some bondholders to seek preference and he said he and others similarly situated should share pro rata in any payments made. He asks that the Court order the supervisors to issue warrants on the basis outlined in the suit. He is represented by S. Mayner Wallace and T. M. Pierce.

The Little River Drainage District comprises 547,000 acres in Cape Girardeau, Bollinger, Dunklin, New Madrid, Pemiscot and Stoddard counties. The benefits assessed against property owners for expenses in reclaiming swamp lands aggregate about $14,000,000, the petition shows.

NEIGHBOR CARES FOR EVICTED WIDOW, 67, WITH 59 PETS

Humane Society Takes Charge of Animals; Two-Room House Jammed With Odds and Ends.

The collection of furniture and odds and ends with which Mrs. Dora Custer, 67-year-old widow, crowded her dilapidated two-room frame house at 5358 Arlington avenue, stood yesterday on the sidewalk where it was moved Friday night on an eviction order for nonpayment of rent.

Her dog, four rabbits and 54 chickens were taken in charge by the Humane Society, while a Constable and his deputy worked at the task of clearing the house, piled to the ceilings with the accumulation of two and a half years of gathering discards around the neighborhood. Mrs. Custer is now living with a neighbor.

'SIDEWALKS OF NEW YORK' AUTHOR TO BE AIDED FOR LIFE

Composers' Society Votes to Give $25 a Week for Rest of Career to J. W. Blake, Now 78.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers announced today it would pay James W. Blake $25 a week for the rest of his life in recognition of his best known contribution to the popular song industry—the words of "The Sidewalks of New York."

Two weeks ago it was discovered that Blake, out of a job for a year, was penniless. He was immediately given assistance by the Emergency Unemployment Relief Committee.

Blake wrote his song more than 30 years ago and the composers' society was not organized until 1914. But today the board of directors elected him a member and voted to care for him the rest of his life. He is now 78.

MME. HELEN TRAUBEL SINGS WITH SYMPHONY

St. Louis Soprano Soloist at Final Popular Concert by Orchestra.

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, under the directorship of its concertmaster, Scipione Guidi, gave the third and final popular concert of its series at the Odeon last night with Helen Traubel, St. Louis soprano, as soloist. The enthusiasm of a large audience mounted as the evening progressed and at the close the listeners refused to leave the theater until an extra number had been added to the program.

Mme. Traubel appeared at her best in the second and heavily Wagnerian half of the program in which she sang Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," and met an insistent demand for more with Wagner's "Traume," and two selections by Strauss. Previously she had offered the "Ritorna Vincitor" aria from "Aida."

Perhaps it was the popular nature of the program that made Tschaikowsky's well-worn "Marche Slave" inevitable as the orchestra's opening number. It served very well as an opener, however, and was followed by the "Merry Wives of Windsor" overture of Nicolai and Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C-Sharp Minor."

The Wagnerian group included, besides the soloist's number, the prelude to "Lohengrin" and Overture to "Tannhauser." The Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walkure" was offered as the orchestra's response to one of the warmest receptions it has received this season. —G. F.

ANOTHER WEEK OF HEARINGS ON FARM ALLOTMENT BILL

G. F. Swift Will Oppose It for Packers—Farm Union Head States His Views.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — The domestic allotment farm relief bill tonight faces another week of hearings before the Senate Agriculture Committee can get to work on it with a view to reporting it to the Senate.

On Monday the packers will open up against the measure with G. F. Swift of the Institute of American Meat Packers.

Prediction of failure for the price boosting plan unless it is accompanied by measures for currency and credit expansion was given a House committee today by John A. Simpson, president of the National Farmers' Union, during hearings on inflation legislation.

Before the Senate committee objections came from a college professor, a hog raiser, a farmer and livestock man and the publisher of an agricultural journal.

"This bill seems to be a novel experiment that some people want to try out on the farmer," said Henry Wood, who raises hogs near Moville, Ia.

mum requirements for its contract purchases each year, and in the three years has purchased 612,851 tons of surfacing gravel from its pits, aside from a large quantity of sand and coarse aggregate for cement paving. Most of this surfacing gravel has been purchased at the maximum price of 54.3 cents a ton for the best grade.

Engineer Cutler's Defense.

In defense of the lease and the commercial sale clause which would permit depletion of the State-owned gravel deposit through sales to outside buyers, Chief Highway Engineer T. H. Cutler said the department held an agreeemnt from the company ultimately to convey to the State privately-owned gravel deposits, or deposits on which the company holds options to offset the depletion.

No detailed records of the commercial sales by the company from the State pits are kept by the department here. Cutler said the department kept one inspector or more assigned to the State pits to check operations of private lessee, and that a department auditor audited books of the company at least once a year to determine if requirements of the contract were met. The royalties due the State on commercial sales are paid annually.

The contract, which is for a five-year period from Jan. 1, 1930, contains provisions making it subject o he needs of he deparmen for construction contracts, and to the Legislature appropriating funds for continuance of the State road program.

Nearly half of the State's acreage of gravel deposis near Lagrange were acquired from the Moline Consumers Co., parent company of the lessee, after execution of the contract with the Missouri Gravel Co.

Condemnation Suit Abandoned.

In 1928 the department sought to condemn 270 acres of land with underlying gravel deposits, owned by F. T. O'Dell of Hannibal, anc adjacent to the State's holdings. The State abandoned the proceeding after condemnation commissioners recommended an award of $800 an acre.

The Highway Commission then made an arrangement with the Moline company to buy the tract, Cutler said, and the company purchased the tract from O'Dell on Jan. 4, 1930, for $54,000. Records of realty transfers in Lewis County show a consideration of $15,000 in purchase of the tract by O'Dell from William Sturban in September, 1923.

The $54,000 paid O'Dell by the Moline company, according to information it furnished the Highway Department, included $40,000 cash, payment of a $6000 mortgage and $8000 in stock of the Missouri Gravel Co.

The contract by the department with the Missouri Gravel Co. for operation of gravel deposits already owned by the State and any adjacent ones subsequently acquired, was effective Jan. 1, 1930.

On Feb. 20, 1930, the Moline Consumers' Co. conveyed the tract acquired from O'Dell to the State Highway Department for $54,000, the same price reported paid to O'Dell, and the State warrant for payment of the Moline Co. was issued in May, 1930.

The La Grange gravel pit is the only State-owned one operated on a commercial basis by a private lessee, although the department at times has permitted private operation of leased deposits in Southern Missouri for a single construction project. Cutler said prices now paid by the department to operators of privately owned deposits for surfacing gravel vary from 50 cents to 80 cents a ton.

This is the first official inquiry into a Highway Department contract since 1925, when a Senate committee, headed by the late Senator Farris, questioned officers of the department about an investment of $250,000 of State funds in a rock quarry near Smithville, Mo., to be operated privately and to be purchased by the private operator after five years. This investigation, which had wide publicity at the time, resulted in a severe denunciation of the transaction by Senator Farris.

Officers of Missouri Gravel Co. Give Version of Negotiations.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOLINE, Ill., Jan. 28.—Negotiations of the Missouri Gravel Co., and its parent corporation, the Moline Consumers, with the Missouri Highway Commission were discussed for publication today by officers of the two companies.

James P. Pearson, president of both concerns, Charles C. Loptien, secretary of both and G. A. Shallberg, a Moline attorney who is vice-president of the Missouri Gravel Co., gave their version of the transaction.

According to the three, the Moline Consumers was the pioneer in the LaGrange, Mo., district back in 1924. It first discovered gravel there and discovered the gravel under much of the land which the State subsequently bought.

Charles C. Loptien Explains.

"We had some property, and the State, at about the same time, bought 109 acres of gravel land," Loptien said. "Then we got an option on another 80 acres and about that time the State stepped in and threatened us with condemnation proceedings. They didn't file suit against us, as they did against Firmin T. Odell, who also had land, but we realized that the State could take the land under condemnation.

"The State only wanted to pay $100 an acre. That was the offer they made us and the offer they made Odell.

"Odell fought them in court and when commissioners were appointed, they found a valutaion of something like $800 an acre and the State backed down. But, of course, as Mr. Shallberg told us, the State could institute proceedings again at any time."

"Shallberg then took up the narrative. That was the situation prior to August, 1929, when we signed our contract with the State," Shallberg said. "The contract was to lease certain gravel lands from the State. That did not refer to the Odell property, which then still belonged to Odell, but to the 109 acres that the State owned, and certain land that we owned. We contracted to turn over our options and the land we owned to the State and the State contracted to lease them to the Missouri Gravel Co., as an operating concern.

"A Matter of Mutual Benefit."

"That, you see, was a matter of mutual benefit. The State wanted to deal with us because we were large operators, and we had wanted to be in the gravel business, selling to everybody, but with the State threatening us with condemnation, a contract and lease was the best for us as well.

"So then we bought Odell's 270 acres, and turned it over to the State. We paid $46,000 for the land and sold it to the State for the same price.

"Yes," Loptien interjected, "and we lost money on it, too, because the interest on our money tied up in that land for six months has never been paid to us."

Shallberg said the Moline Consumers gave Odell 206 shares of stock in addition to the $46,000. This he explained, was for certain equipment of Odell which they acquired, a pump boat, two barges, a pipe line, crusher, screens and other equipment.

Loptien declined to discuss how much gravel the company had shipped from the State-owned land. "That," he said, "is merely a detail of our business.

"All an Open Book."

"However," he added, "our transactions with the State of Missouri and all our books, for that matter, are an open book. If the Senate wishes to scrutinize them, they may. There is nothing to conceal."

The Missouri Gravel Co., despite its name, is largely owned outside the State. Odell, who now is a road contractor, has the 206 shares he received for his equipment. The Moline Consumers Co. has 294 shares. Other large holders are Pearson, with more than either; Loptien, Oscar W. Ellis, treasurer of the company; D. O'Brien, manager of the company's plant near Louisiana, Mo., and C. D. Harvey, manager of the La Grange plant.

Office employes and residents of Moline and Rock Island comprise the majority of the remaining stockholders. Of the 41 who hold 1920 shares of the company's 2500-share no par value issue 13 live in Missouri, and Odell is the only one of the 13 who has a consequential amount of stock.

In this connection Shallberg explained that the Missouri Gravel Co. was formed "because we wanted it to be Missouri. The Moline Consumers wouldn't mean anything. The Missouri name would."

THREE INSURGENTS REPORTED KILLED IN NICARAGUAN FIGHT

Peace Delegates Ready to Go to Sandino Rendezvous to Complete Truce Terms.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 28.—National Guard officers tonight stated that last Thursday afternoon guardsmen had engaged 100 insurgents in a skirmish near Achuapa in which three irregulars were killed and many were wounded.

The guardsmen suffered no casualties, the officers reported. The enemy fled after 30 minutes of fighting. Another contact subsequently was made between the two forces near El Sauce. Two insurgents were killed in that fight. The battles followed by a few hours peace overtures of the insurgent leader Augusto Sandino. A protocol signed by Sandino asking for an "honorable" peace was brought here.

Tonight "peace" delegates were ready to go to a Sandino rendezvous, presumably to complete the truce negotiations. The battles earlier this week indicated the proximity of irregulars despite an announced armistice.

RAILROAD SURVEY GROUP PROMISES REPORT BY FEB. 22

Date Announced After Citizens' Committee Confers in Washington on Carriers' Financial Problem.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — The results of a brief but thorough inspection of the Government's end of the railroad problem, were carried back to New York tonight by a voluntary citizens' committee with the promise of a definite plan for righting the country's transportation troubles by late February.

The National Transportation Committee, of which Calvin Coolidge was chairman until his death, left behind in the capital a quickened activity on various angles of the rail problem which forecast action in several directions before the committee report is issued, by Feb. 22.

The members, Bernard M. Baruch, acting chairman, Alfred E. Smith, Clark Howell of Atlanta, Alexander Legge of Chicago, conferred at the Capitol with Representative Rayburn, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, examining pending legislation, then held a lengthy discussion with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Smith, acting as committee spokesman, set the date for the report, said the committee was in sympathy with the rail bankruptcy plan of the La Guardia-McKeown bill but declined to indorse it specifically. He did approve Rayburn's pending bill to repeal the recapture clause under which the Government is authorized to take a portion of excess railroad profits.

New Energy for Legislation.

New energy was put behind this and other legislation, although the bankruptcy act was the only one appearing to have distinct chances of passage at the present session.

Another attack on rail problems, however, was started by Senator Couzens who as chairman of a banking subcommittee, started investigating Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans to determine whether his resolution to forbid any more such credits for a time, should be adopted. Hearings will begin Tuesday.

Couzens said the committee would require estimates of the present value of collateral put up for such loans; would demand the names of roads likely to have to borrow within the next six months; and would call on the Reconstruction Corporation to give a complete summary of the loans made, and where the money went.

"It is not to the interest of the security holders or the public," the Senator said, "that the government continue using the tax payer's credit to save an already hopeless condition." He emphasized the remark did not mean all railroads, but that many had borrowed "that can't hope to have their over-inflated capital structure maintained."

Smith on Bankruptcy Bill.

Smith announced the date of the forthcoming report after the conference with Rayburn. He declined to indicate what the recommendations would be.

"The sole and only purpose of our visit," he said, "is to get ideas and to check up on some things relative to a comprehensive report and plans in respect to the railroad situation and what can be done about it."

Discussing the bankruptcy revision bill, he said that "while naturally in sympathy" with the measure's purpose, he could not say whether the committee would approve of the bill "after it comes from the laundry," meaning when the House has finished amending it.

Smith also refrained from expressing an opinion on pending bills by Rayburn to place railroad holding companies and bus lines under Interstate Commerce Commission regulation. Both plans will be dealt with in the report, he said.

The committee did not call on Couzens, chairman of the Senate's Interstate Commerce Committee, because his view already had been obtained by Baruch and the committee's time was limited. It assembled in Washington this morning, at Smith's hotel room, went directly to Rayburn's office and, after a lunch-time recess, met again with the Interstate Commerce Commissioners. After this meeting the members separated, most of them heading for New York, where the next meeting will be held.

Couzens Outlines Inquiry.

Couzens said the Senate subcommittee's investigation beginning Tuesday would be a "comprehensive inquiry into the financial conditions of the class one railroads."

"We will require the Reconstruction Corporation to furnish a complete list of all railroad loans and the purposes for which the money was used," he said. "The committee also will ask for estimates of the value of the collateral at the time of the loans and the present value. And we will make an inquiry into the changes that may have occurred in the general condition of each borrower.

"We also will require the railroad executives, who were the prime movers in getting the roads included under the law, to tell us the names of the class one roads that are likely within the next six months to call on the R. F. C. for money, and in conjunction therewith to inform us of the amount of losses, if any, during the past year.

"These developments will undoubtedly suggest further inquiries. In other words, it is not to the interest of the security holders or the public that the Government continue using the taxpayers' credit to save an already hopeless condition.

"This is not meant to apply to all railroads; I do not think that they are all hopeless, but many have secured money or applied for loans that can't hope to have their over-inflated capital structure maintained."

TREASURES OF 'SILVER QUEEN' SELL FOR SONG AT AUCTION

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 28.—Auction buyers have stripped the famed estate of Mrs. Susana Emery-Holmes-Delitch of the treasures which the Utah "Silver Queen" gathered from the tables of royalty and households replete with history.

For eight days this month thousands visited her mansion, on a two-acre plot of ground in one of the city's most exclusive districts, buying for a song the prizes of the 74-year-old society matron A triple-framed iron once possessed by Grand Duke Boris of Russia, brought $400. A set of 18-jeweled goblets from which the Czar Nicholas of Russia had sipped wine sold for $65 a glass.

A collector bought for $1100 the sterling silver tea and coffee service which the American people presented to Admiral George Dewey in recognition of his historic services to the country. For $1000 another obtained the Amelia bed on which Brigham Young had slept. An oil by de Longpre was bid up to $1500.

Mrs. Delitch, who made her fortune out of Utah silver mines and from which she became known as the "Silver Queen," was for many years a prominent figure in the royal courts of Europe. Her third husband, Dr. Radovan Delitch, Paris surgeon, committed suicide last December aboard a ship at sea.

BEQUEATHS SUMS CONTINGENT ON SUIT AGAINST GOVERNMENT

Philip Bartholomay of Buffalo, Inventor of Telephone Device, Provides for Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Philip Bartholomay, descendant of the founder of a famous Rochester (N. Y.) brewery, willed large sums to the Rochester General Hospital and to his widow and son in Los Angeles, Cal., it was disclosed with filing of the will here today. Bartholomay formerly lived here.

The will notes that "the bequests exceed by a large sum the present value of the estate," but Bartholomay explained they were based on a claim against the Federal Government now pending in the Court of Claims.

The widow, Mrs. Rosie C. Bartholomay of Los Angeles, was bequeathed half the estate. David Klenk of Buffalo, named executor, is to receive $200,000; a third of the remainder was left to a son, Frank H. Bartholomay of Los Angeles; another third to a daughter, Clara Van Couter of Munich, Germany, and the final third to the Rochester General Hospital as a memorial to his parents.

Klenk, the executor, said Mr. Bartholomay was the inventor of a device making possible rapid long distance telephone calls and that the suit against the Federal Government was based on his claims to this invention. He did not explain the exact nature of the suit, although he said Mr. Bartholomay had a verbal agreement with the late Theodore N. Vail when Vail was president of the New York Telephone Co. and that the company obtained the patent in 1916.

MARY MILES MINTER SUED

Actress Named in Action to Recover $41,008 on Note.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28.—Juliet Riley, known on the screen several years ago as Mary Miles Minter, has been named defendant in a suit for $41,008 filed in Superior Court by the Mortgage Guarantee Co. and the Security First National Bank of Los Angeles, who say they hold a note given by her in 1929.

The suit says the note is secured by a trust deed covering Los Angeles real estate. When Miss Minter defaulted in payment of interest last April foreclosure proceedings were begun and the property was sold. The note was for $75,000 and the proceeds of the real estate sale were not sufficient to satisfy the trust deed, the complaint stated.

G. O. P. WINS FIGHT FOR HOUSE VOTE ON TARIFF RISES

Consideration Assured for Proposal for Increases to Meet Depreciated Currencies.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Administration Republicans today tossed into the closing weeks of the "Lame Duck" Congress a tariff issue with a view to turning foreign nations toward exchange stability.

Resorting to the drastic discharge petition after Democrats had bottled up the plan in committee, House Republicans insured a vote Feb. 13, on legislation to increase import duties against nations with depreciated currencies.

Meanwhile, the Senate adopted a resolution by Costigan (Dem.), Colorado, calling on the tariff commission and other governmental agencies to supply all the tariff information that might be helpful to the incoming administration in bargaining with other nations for reciprocal import duties. A second measure also approved asked the commission for an analysis of foreign trade.

Both were adopted without debate or roll-call votes, but Senator Reed (Rep.), Pennsylvania, announced he was opposed to them, although he gave no reasons.

Plan Called "Powerful Whip."

Administration spokesmen have labeled the plan to increase import duties against nations with depreciated currencies a powerful whip in the hands of this government during coming debt discussions and the world economic conference. Sponsors declare it will induce leading commercial nations to return to a gold standard.

Though intended to deal only with tariff problems born of cheapened money, the legislation embraces indirectly the issue of the Hawley-Smoot tariff which raged between President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt. It is constructed on the principle this Government should maintain the protection intended when the 1930 act was written, a tariff wall Democrats have assailed as too high. Acting accordingly, they had refused to let such a bill out of the Democratically-controlled Ways and Means Committee

But representative Schafer (Rep.) of Wisconsin filed a discharge petition. The White House indicated such action may be necessary if foreign exchange was not stabilized. House Republicans conferred and unanimously voted to support the movement.

Today the necessary 145 signatures were obtained and a vote on discharging the Ways and Means Committee will be taken Monday, Feb. 13. A majority vote then will place the bill before the House for consideration.

Proposes Automatic Increases.

The measure petitioned is by Representative Crowther (Rep.), New York. It would make the tariff increases automatic in a ratio based on the percentage of depreciation of the currency.

"It levies a countervailing surtax," Crowther explained, "so that we will collect in duties exactly what we intended to collect when we wrote the tariff of 1930."

The plan would be administered by the Treasury and follows closely the bill by Representative Hill (Dem.), Washington, on which a subcommittee has been holding hearings. The Treasury opposed the Hill bill, preferring a plan to be administered by the Tariff Commission through a broadening of its flexible powers.

Representative Rainey, the Democratic leader, said that if the Republicans vote solidly, the necessary majority probably would be obtained by them to get the bill on the floor.

That it will get some Democratic votes already was clear. Hill of Washington has sponsored such a plan, Connery of Massachusetts and Boland of Pennsylvania have testified for it, and three others—Patman of Texas, Martin of Oregon and Keller of Illinois—signed the Republican discharge petition.

Farm Leader Assails Plan.

Most of the testimony before the Ways and Means Subcommittee has favored the plan, but today John A. Simpson, President of the National Farmers Union, assailed it as useless without currency expansion.

"You can pass this bill and three months from now the army of unemployed will be greater in numbers, more banks will have closed their doors, more farms have been foreclosed and the price of farm crops will be cheaper than today," Simpson said. "In other words, this bill is not a remedy.

"If we were to reduce the value of our dollar as measured in commodities to the value it had Jan. 1, 1920, we would increase the cost of production in every foreign country to such an extent that with our present tariff rates and their present tariff rates the advantage in trade would be favorable to this country."

Swing Urges Bill's Passage.

Plea for passage of the Hill bill to protect Pacific Coast industries from Japanese competition, made sharper by depreciated currency, was made to the subcommittee by Representative Swing (Rep.), California.

"I am speaking for the Democratic State of California, which gave your party a 450,000 majority," Swing told the Democratic-controlled committee. "There is no question of the effect upon the business and labor of this country of foreign depreciated currencies,

G. O. P. WINS FIGHT FOR HOUSE VOTE ON TARIFF RISES

Consideration Assured for Proposal for Increases to Meet Depreciated Currencies.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Administration Republicans today tossed into the closing weeks of the "Lame Duck" Congress a tariff issue with a view to turning foreign nations toward exchange stability.

Resorting to the drastic discharge petition after Democrats had bottled up the plan in committee, House Republicans insured a vote Feb. 13, on legislation to increase import duties against nations with depreciated currencies.

Meanwhile, the Senate adopted a resolution by Costigan (Dem.), Colorado, calling on the tariff commission and other governmental agencies to supply all the tariff information that might be helpful to the incoming administration in bargaining with other nations for reciprocal import duties. A second measure also approved asked the commission for an analysis of foreign trade.

Both were adopted without debate or roll-call votes, but Senator Reed (Rep.), Pennsylvania, announced he was opposed to them, although he gave no reasons.

Plan Called "Powerful Whip."

Administration spokesmen have labeled the plan to increase import duties against nations with depreciated currencies a powerful whip in the hands of this government during coming debt discussions and the world economic conference. Sponsors declare it will induce leading commercial nations to return to a gold standard.

Though intended to deal only with tariff problems born of cheapened money, the legislation embraces indirectly the issue of the Hawley-Smoot tariff which raged between President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt. It is constructed on the principle this Government should maintain the protection intended when the 1930 act was written, a tariff wall Democrats have assailed as too high. Acting accordingly, they had refused to let such a bill out of the Democratically-controlled Ways and Means Committee

But representative Schafer (Rep.) of Wisconsin filed a discharge petition. The White House indicated such action may be necessary if foreign exchange was not stabilized. House Republicans conferred and unanimously voted to support the movement.

Today the necessary 145 signatures were obtained and a vote on discharging the Ways and Means Committee will be taken Monday, Feb. 13. A majority vote then will place the bill before the House for consideration.

Proposes Automatic Increases.

The measure petitioned is by Representative Crowther (Rep.), New York. It would make the tariff increases automatic in a ratio based on the percentage of depreciation of the currency.

"It levies a countervailing surtax," Crowther explained, "so that we will collect in duties exactly what we intended to collect when we wrote the tariff of 1930."

The plan would be administered by the Treasury and follows closely the bill by Representative Hill (Dem.), Washington, on which a subcommittee has been holding hearings. The Treasury opposed the Hill bill, preferring a plan to be administered by the Tariff Commission through a broadening of its flexible powers.

Representative Rainey, the Democratic leader, said that if the Republicans vote solidly, the necessary majority probably would be obtained by them to get the bill on the floor.

That it will get some Democratic votes already was clear. Hill of Washington has sponsored such a plan, Connery of Massachusetts and Boland of Pennsylvania have testified for it, and three others—Patman of Texas, Martin of Oregon and Keller of Illinois—signed the Republican discharge petition.

Farm Leader Assails Plan.

Most of the testimony before the Ways and Means Subcommittee has favored the plan, but today John A. Simpson, President of the National Farmers Union, assailed it as useless without currency expansion.

"You can pass this bill and three months from now the army of unemployed will be greater in numbers, more banks will have closed their doors, more farms have been foreclosed and the price of farm crops will be cheaper than today," Simpson said. "In other words, this bill is not a remedy.

Swing Urges Bill's Passage.

Plea for passage of the Hill bill to protect Pacific Coast industries from Japanese competition, made sharper by depreciated currency, was made to the subcommittee by Representative Swing (Rep.), California.

"I am speaking for the Democratic State of California, which gave your party a 450,000 majority," Swing told the Democratic-controlled committee. "There is no question of the effect upon the business and labor of this country of foreign depreciated currencies, especially on the Pacific Coast where we feel it from Japan."

Swing cited the tuna fish industry which he said had $50,000,000 invested in packing plants and $8,000,000 in fishing boats which employ 8000 men in fishing alone.

"We no longer can compete," Swing said. Japan can offer wholesalers tuna fish at $4.35 a case. The wholesale price of the same grade of domestic tuna fish is $5.75 a case. Japanese exports of tuna fish to the United States have increased 530 per cent over 1931. In the first 10 months of 1932 imports were nearly 5,000,000 pounds in excess of 1931. The industry can't live this way and unless we act it will be added to others already on the rocks."

Swing said much the same arguments applied to fruit and vegetable shipments from Mexico and other lines of Japanese goods.

ALLEGED LIQUOR-RUNNING BOAT PUT TO SECOND SPEED TEST

Gagome Loaded With Sand This Time; Jury to Decide if Seizure Was Legal.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 28.—With 24,000 pounds of sand aboard, equivalent of a load of 518 caces of liquor, the alleged liquor runner, Gagone, was run at top speed here today and averaged 13.5 knots. A jury will have to figure out what that proves.

Albert E. Bagshaw, Assistant United States Attorney, attorneys for Capt. Arthur Lilly and the crew of the Vancouver (B. C.) boat, and engineers of the Coast Guard supervised the test.

Over the same course yesterday the boat averaged 16.5 knots without any load. Bagshaw and Attorney Harold Faulkner, representing Capt. Lilly, signed a statement that the boat, loaded, would make 11 knots in an hour's run. The speed tests resulted from the seizure of the boat at a point the Government admits was 16.3 nautical miles from Cape Mendicino, the nearest land of the United States. Faulkner has contended the seizure was illegal, both because the boat was more than 12 miles from shore and because the boat was seized outside of its cruising distance in one hour.

Bagshaw said the Government still contends the seizure was legal because of the unloaded test yesterday. If a jury decides the United States has jurisdiction, then Capt. Lilly and his five men will go on trial on smuggling charges.

PERU SAYS IT HAS AGREED TO BRAZIL'S PEACE FORMULA

Brazil, However, Has Not Yet Made Answer to Counter-Suggestion on Leticia.

By the Associated Press.

LIMA, Peru, Jan. 28.—It was officially repeated tonight that Peru has accepted Brazilian offers to help settle the controversy between Peru and Colombia over the port of Leticia, on the Upper Amazon. Brazil, however, has not yet replied to the Peruvian counter-suggestion that Leticia be taken over by Brazil, pending negotiations.

Conferences were conducted throughout the day by Cabinet members and other high officials regarding Leticia, which Peruvian Nationals seized a few months ago from Colombia. Earlier, the Peruvian Government, replying to a note from Secretary of State Stimson, said it had not violated the Kellogg peace pact. Stimson said any Peruvian armed opposition to Colombia's efforts to re-establish sovereignty would be a violation of the pact.

Peru's reply asserted that, while Peru desires peaceful solution of the trouble, Colombia "preferred to establish its authority by violent means."

Details of the so-called Brazilian formula for settling the controversy have not been learned here.

MOTHER-IN-LAW IS SHOT DEAD NEAR CAPE GIRARDEAU

Albert Schwach, Son-in-law, in Jail Accused of Killing Mrs. Henry Hoffmeister.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Jan. 28.—Mrs. Henry Hoffmeister, 40 years old, who lives near Jackson, died in a hospital here late today, three hours after she was shot when leaving the home of her son-in-law, Albert Schwach, 10 miles west of here. Schwach, held in jail at Jackson, was said to have admitted shooting her.

Schwach and his wife are estranged. Mrs. Schwach went to the Schwach home today to get a phonograph, accompanied by her parents and a stepbrother, Walter Slemmer. Schwach ordered them from his property, Hoffmeister said. Hoffmeister said that as they were leaving Schwach fired a shotgun, the load striking Mrs. Hoffmeister in the right side. Slemmer then overpowered Schwach.

DOWNWARD TREND IS CONTINUED IN DECEMBER TRADE

INDUSTRIES FEEL PINCH ESPECIALLY

Christmas Shopping Centered on Necessaries—Retail Trade Here Off 23.3 Pct. in 1932.

The downward trend of commerce and industry in the Eighth Federal Reserve District, almost unbroken since the fall of 1929, continued during December with a majority of indices recording decreases in business as contrasted with the preceding month and with December, 1931, according to the current report of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, made public yesterday.

All lines of merchandising investigated, except for drugs and chemicals and for retail business, affected by Christmas trade, showed decreases from November to December, the report says. The December volume in most cases was considerably smaller than that in the corresponding month of 1931, or the average for several years.

At industrial plants, particularly in the heavier industries, such as iron and steel, operations in December fell below the low levels of last summer and in numerous instances were at the lowest point of the depression, the report says.

The record of production and distribution for 1932 compared unfavorably with the record for 1931 and with the average for the past decade.

Little change from dull conditions was noted during the first half of January, the report continues. Many plants which had closed for inventory during the holidays had not reopened by the middle of January and where operations were resumed, reduced schedules were the rule.

One Favorable Factor.

A favorable factor in the situation, the report notes, is the generally low state of commodity inventories, with recently increased inquiries indicating an urgent need for the merchandise specified. Holiday trade, however, got under way later than is usual and the volume was below expectations, with Chrismas shopping centering on necessaries.

The volume of retail trade in December, as reflected by department store sales in the district's principal cities, is reported as having been 38 per cent greater than in November but 26 per cent less than in December, 1931. Sales for 1932 decreased 23 per cent from those in 1931. In St. Louis the December volume declined 26.7 per cent from that in the corresponding month of 1931 and for the entire year declined 23.3 per cent.

Combined sales of reporting wholesale and jobbing firms were 37 per cent smaller in December than the sales in November and were 38 per cent less than the total in December, 1931. For the year aggregate sales were about one-fourth smaller than in 1931.

The value of permits for new buildings in the district's largest five cities in December was 46 per cent smaller than the value in November and 96 per cent less than the value in December, 1931. The total for the year was two-thirds less than in 1931 and 89 per cent below the average for the last 10 years. In St. Louis the December permits totaled $33,000 as against $209,000 in the corresponding month of 1931.

The closing weeks of December were marked by a continuance of the irregular decline in freight traffic handled by railroads in the district, the report says, with the result that total car loadings for 1932 receded measurably below those of the preceding several years.

The St. Louis Terminal Railway Association, handling interchanges for 28 connecting lines, interchanged 112,123 loads in December against 109,661 in November and 127,331 in December, 1931. Estimated tonnage of the Federal Barge Line, between St. Louis and New Orleans, was 92,000 tons in December as against 112,969 in November and 168,021 in December, 1931.

Weather conditions were varied, but on the whole favorable for cereal crops and general farm activities, the report says. While showing some improvement since the first week in January, prices of wheat, corn, oats and livestock continue at low levels.

Individual Industries.

Conditions in individual industries are reported as follows:

Boots and shoes—Sales for December were smaller than for any other month in more than 10 years. They declined 55 per cent from the November total and 28 per cent from the total in December, 1931.

Clothing—Sales were 39 per cent below those for November, with prices lower and demand chiefly for cheaper merchandise.

Drugs and Chemicals—With colder weather stimulating demand for seasonal merchandise, sales were 8.5 per cent larger than those in November and 1 per cent larger than those in December, 1931.

Dry goods—Sales were about one-half less than those in November and about 30 per cent less than those in December, 1931.

Electrical supplies—Following the usual seasonal trend, December sales showed a gain of 9 per cent over those in November, but declined 44 per cent from the total in December, 1931.

Flour—Production at the 12 leading mills of the district was 255,011, as against 247,208 in November and 262,892 in December, 1931.

Furniture—December sales were 26 per cent smaller than in November, but only 1.4 per cent smaller than in December, 1931. Moderate improvement took place after Jan. 1.

Groceries—Belated orders for holiday goods helped the December sales, so that the usual seasonal decline was smaller than the average for several years.

Hardware — Decreases in sales from those in November and December, 1931, were 19 and 14 per cent, respectively.

WOMAN TELLS OF SUICIDE OF ADMIRER NEAR HER HOME

Miss Delia Evett Had Just Left Auto of Frank Hopkins When He Killed Self.

A verdict of suicide was entered by Deputy Coroner Sweeney yesterday after an inquest into the death of Frank Hopkins, who killed himself Friday in front of the home of Miss Delia Evett, 3521 Cook avenue.

Miss Evett, who had told Hopkins she no longer wished to see him, wept as Sweeney questioned her about the occurrence. She and Hopkins, she said, had been acquainted since last July, and were "not exactly engaged." A month ago she had told him she wished to end their friendship and twice since then Hopkins had spoken of killing himself.

Neighbors verified her account of the shooting. She had left Hopkins' automobile, they testified, and was returning to the house, when he shot himself with a pistol. He was a filling station attendant, 29 years old, and lived at 5112 Kensington avenue.

PLAN SOUGHT TO SAFEGUARD ROLLER SKATERS IN STREETS

Lack of Ice Causes Many Children to Take Up Sport, Council Says.

The Safety Council is considering what may be done to safeguard children who engage in roller skating on the streets during the mild winter weather, which has kept them from the comparative safety of ice-covered lakes in the parks.

Thousands of children have taken to use of roller skates in the streets for lack of ice skating, the council reports, and the possibility of accidents has increased as a result.

City Traffic Engineer Gonter has told the council's Executive Committee it would be illegal to close streets for the benefit of roller skating, although the Street Department did close some thoroughfares for coasting, when there was snow, on petition of adjacent property owners.

Frequent reports of accidents resulting from riding bicycles on sidewalks or riding bicycles at night without the lights required by ordinance have been received by the council.

OKLAHOMA ATTORNEY FREED

He Had Been Accused of Receiving Stolen Property.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Jan. 28.—James H. Mathers, widely known Oklahoma attorney, was freed today of a charge of receiving stolen property, on the State's motion. The charge was dismissed by Justice of the Peace Carl Traub during the attorney's preliminary hearing, and followed by a day the dismissal of a similar charge against his son, James C. Mathers, also an attorney.

The charges now voided accused the father and son of receiving part of the $16,000 loot taken by robbers of the First National Bank at Lindsay, for which several men have been arrested.

2,000,000 IN THREE YEARS HAVE GONE BACK TO FARM

Agricultural Population Now 32,000,000, Within 77,100 of Peak in 1910.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The present back-to-the-farm movement the Department of Agriculture estimates has increased farm population to 32,000,000, very close to the peak of 32,077,000, which was reached on Jan. 1, 1910.

Three years ago the total farm population was estimated at 30,169,000. Thus the increase was almost 2,000,000 during the last three years, indicating that several hundred thousand families had moved from city to country.

The farm communities in several places object to the growing back-to-the-farm movement on the ground that influx will require provision for additional school facilities and relief for those in distress in addition to increasing competition.

City officials, welfare agencies and Chambers of Commerce are encouraging the movement. The compensations offered by it include providing a market for farms, many of which are in the hands of banks, insurance companies and other loan agencies, and tenants for farms which were unoccupied.

GROCERY BILL FOR RELIEF HERE LAST YEAR $2,460,000

Sum Spent Through 2100 Local Stores to Supply Food to 89,441 Families in Need.

STEGER DEFENDS RETAIL BUYING

Fears Some Merchants Would Fail if Commissary Plan Should Be Adopted by Agencies.

The grocery bill of Citizens' Committee relief agencies last year was $2,460,000, it was said last night by E. G. Steger, director of the committee. That was spent through 2100 retail stores in supplying food for the 89,441 families who, at one time or another, were helped by the relief agencies.

"There has been considerable agitation in the past for establishing a commissary here," Steger said. "Entirely aside from the problem of dealing with the 35,000 families now receiving relief and the effect such a plan might have on their morale, is the demoralizing effect the loss of $2,460,000 in trade would have on St. Louis business.

"The operation of a commissary means that goods are bought in bulk direct from manufacturers, which, in most cases, would mean sending the money out of St. Louis. Take more than $2,000,000 in business away from St. Louis retail grocers and I believe it would mean failure for many, and additions to the relief rolls."

Good In Any Store.

Grocery orders issued to the unemployed by relief agencies, Steger explained, are good at any store selected by the recipient. It is suggested to each of them that they take them to the stores with which they have been accustomed to deal.

The result was that nearly half of the 5000 retail groceries in St. Louis obtained some of the business. The committee's figures indicate $688,800, or 28 per cent of the total spent for food, went to chain stores, and $1,771,200, or 72 per cent, to small independent merchants. The monthly bills submitted by each of the stores ranged from $15 to $3000.

The money went for all daily food necessities except flour, which, with cracked wheat for cereal, was supplied by the Red Cross out of the Farm Board surplus.

Commissaries Abandoned.

"Our job," Steger said, "is the feeding of a great number of people at the lowest possible cost. Exponents of the commissary plan claim that it means a saving. That contention never has been definitely proved. It is a fact that in a number of cities where a commissary has been set up, it has been abandoned, after months of trial, because it increased the cost.

"The St. Louis plan meant $2,460,000 in grocery business alone that under other plans would have gone elsewhere. It is St. Louis money that is spent for relief, and we have believed it a wise policy to spend it with St. Louis merchants."

CREDIT UNION PLAN COULD AID WORLD FILENE DECLARES

Boston Merchant Thinks It Could Be Used to Settle Problem of International Finance.

A universal conception of credit as a medium of the exchange of goods and services would "just about settle the whole problem of international finance," Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant and president of the Credit Union National Extension Bureau, said last night at a dinner at Hotel Jefferson at the fourth annual convention of the Missouri Credit Union League.

Filene, whose credit organization includes 1800 unions in this country, representing a wage earners' co-operative banking system, said foreign debt cancelation would be unnecessary if there were "an understanding of where money and credit are needed most and an allocation of money and credit to those parts of the world which then would be best able to facilitate the exchange of goods and services."

Other dinner speakers were Fred P. Kenkel, managing-director of the Central Catholic Central Verein of America, and Roy F. Bergengren, executive secretary of the Credit Extension Bureau, who discussed mass credit.

While world financial problems were so complicated "that it will be no simple task to administer credit throughout the world on the basis of the world's needs," Filene said, the job must be done and could be done "only by an understanding of the principles of the use of money."

"Theoretically today, money has a fixed value throughout the world and should draw the same rate of interest," he continued, "but everybody recognizes that this is not the fact, for higher rates of interest are charged to those who need help most because of the insecurity involved.

"But this situation only repeats on a large scale the credit situation in the small-loan field which the credit unions were born to correct. The credit unions have not only proved the value of co-operative credit, they have proved its security.

"It is not too much to ask of the great world of international finance that it apply the principles which the credit unions have demonstrated to be correct. That is the only way the debts throughout the world may be paid."

Why Europe Doesn't Pay.

Filene said Europeans nations could not pay their debts to the United States because they could not manufacture and sell goods profitably because we would not allow payment in goods and "they could not get the necessary gold."

Stressing the point that the purpose of international money and credit is to facilitate the exchange of goods and services he said the international debt problem "was bungled by all sides from beginning to end."

"When principles of credit are understood," he said, "we shall doubtless have an international currency. In the meantime the most we can hope for is an understanding that trade has brought the whole world together, that no nation can be independent of the rest of human society, but that every nation and every section within every nation has something to contribute to the world's well being."

Mexican Sends Garner Food Fit for Brush-Raised Texan

Client He Once Defended Ships Materials for Making Tamales and Tortillas and Dwells Upon Their Virtues.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—On tortillas and tamales, dried goat meat and the garbanzos that have highest vitamin content among beans, Speaker John Garner can now feast to his heart's content. All these Texas border delicacies, and many more, came to him today from Juan Mora, 70-year-old Mexican, who, looking at pictures in the paper, had become much worried over the diet of the Vice-President-elect.

Unable to write English, Juan got Sam Robertson, San Benito (Tex.) engineer, to send the letter that accompanied his gift.

"He brought me a picture cut from a newspaper showing Mrs. Garner cooking in your office," Robertson wrote Garner. "He was feeling very sad because you live so far away among the Yankees in the snow and ice where there is nothing fit for a brush-raised Texan to eat.

"He said many years ago he was 'framed' by another Mexican on a goat stealing charge, and you defended him, proving his innocence, and that he loves you as a father and many times has cooked for you on hunting and fishing trips.

"Therefore, he has prepared for you some Mexican ranch food. I have been deviled by him for months to send these things to you, and finally promised to do so."

Annotations that would delight an epicure, Robertson's translations of Mora's instructions, accompanied the big box filled with such odd articles as shucks to wrap tamales in, cracklins to make craklin's bread, camino seed for flavoring, and peloncilla, a crude sugar in the form of a cone.

One read: "The masa (corn for tortillas) was made on a metate (hand mortar) because masa made in a tortilla mill is not fit for a brush-raised Texan to eat."

Another: "He states fresh meat is unfit for chili con carne. He butchered a goat, fed on wajia brush, which gives the goat meat the proper flavor. He dried it on a wire stretched above good mesquite coals and a mosca (fly) never roosted on it."

Juan sent along a clay jarro in which to cook the chili because if it were cooked in iron it would ruin the delicate flavor of the wajia brush contained in the meat.

The chili, home-grown and dried was accompanied by a bottle of green chile capine (hot peppers).

For Mrs. Garner, Juan's wife sent nopales and calavasos (sweet meats) and raisins to be stewed with the cone sugar which was pronounced much finer sweetening than American white sugar. Mrs. Mora thought Mrs. Garner had been away for so long she might have forgotten to prepare garlic the right way, so some of that came, too.

For smokes, the Speaker was sent slim cigarettes of corn shuck wrapping, containing caballo negro leaf tobacco pronounced by Juan "the only tobacco fit for a human being to smoke."

But the old Mexican's supreme contribution has not yet arrived.

Robertson related it thus: "He said he had a liter of pure San Carlos mescal for you which has been for months in the pig skin curing. I told him if I attempted to send it, we would all find our way to Frank Brown's jail. He will hold the mescal in the pig skin until it is no longer contrabando at which time I have promised to forward it to you."

St. Louis Driver Hurt in Illinois.

By the Associated Press.

VANDALIA, Ill., Jan. 28.—William Jackson, driver for the Illmo Transfer Co. of St. Louis, is in Mark Greer Hospital here with a fractured skull and severe face lacerations as a result of an accident here today when he failed to make a turn and drove his truck into a tree.

30 BOY CLUBS IN CITY LED BY Y. M. C. A.

Business Men and Police Encourage Activities to Prevent Delinquency.

Unemployed boys have formed clubs or "gangs" and secured the use of garages, barns or basements where they can spend their leisure time with others, according to Harold S. Keltner, secretary of the South Side Y. M. C. A. The Y, he said, has obtained business men as counselors for some of these groups.

Keltner estimated there were about 200 such "gangs" in South St. Louis and said 30 of them have turned to the Y for leadership. The Y. M. C. A. is one of 20 Community Fund character building agencies which will conduct a campaign for $600,000 next month.

"More than half of these boys," Keltner said, "are jobless and have drifted into gangs largely because they know no better way to spend their time. Thousands of them are being directed into wholesome activities by the character building agencies of the city and without the help of these organizations there is no doubt but that there would have been a serious increase in delinquency and crime during the years of the depression.

Business Men Outline Programs.

The business men whom the Y. M. C. A. has secured as counselors outline programs to attract the interest of boys. They provide speakers, moving pictures, instruction in parliamentary law, and help to raise funds necessary for rent, fuel and miscellaneous expenses through dances and other activities.

Parents' nights are promoted so that fathers and mothers may learn what their sons are doing. Athletic teams are organized and entered in the municipal leagues. The public schools have co-operated by making gymnasiums available.

In areas of the city where delinquency is high and proper leadership lacking, Keltner said, some clubs have resorted to questionable activities to raise funds. He told of one which had quarters in a building of ill repute which now has clean, well-lighted clubrooms and an electrically lighted lot adjoining, which is used for ping-pong, volley ball and basketball games.

Police Encourage Movement.

Police captains and lieutenants have encouraged the movement, he said, and have made talks to boys at their club meetings. "These boys do not go into the police courts." he said, "although all about them delinquency and crime seethe."

Not long ago, Keltner recalled, he had gone by invitation to the headquarters of one club not then participating in the Y. M. C. A. program. He found a small brick building in the railroad yards on the levee, and in it about eight boys, who told him they had rented it for $10 a month "just so they would have a place to sit around and play cards." They welcomed the opportunity, he said, to accept the leadership offered by the Y. M. C. A. in a program which would give them something better to do.

MADISON SCHOOL CLASS OF 1908 HOLDS REUNION

12 of 16 January Graduates Answer to Roll Called by Their Teacher.

The January, 1908, graduating class of the Madison School, 1118 South Seventh boulevard, held a reunion at the school Friday night. Miss Ida Lee Woody, who taught the graduates of 25 years ago, called the roll and 12 of the 16 members of the class responded.

Those who attended were: Miss Frieda Andreas, Miss Mary Raidt, Miss Norma Schnaidt, Miss Flora Waith, Mrs. Clara Kaup Dodge, Mrs. Lillian Rau Huseman, Mrs. Anna Rosen Dawidoff, Mrs. Amelia Suess Krampsert, Edwin Balsing, Edward Fields, Fred A. Foeste and Edwin Weder.

The distance from St. Louis prevented Clarence Jacobi of La Plata, Argentine, and Mrs. Vera McRoberts Long of North Hollywood, Cal., from attending, but they sent their greetings. Two of the class members, Alex Risch and Miss Louise Blansette, died within a year of graduation.

Fred A. Foeste presided over the meeting and informal addresses were made by J. C. Hickey, principal of Madison School, A. J. Kuepsert, secretary of the Madison Patrons Association, and Louis Fisher, a member of the executive board of the association. Plans were discussed for a permanent organization and for future reunions. Entertainment was furnished by the school band.

FUNERAL SERVICES TOMORROW FOR CHARLES MARSCHUETZ

Veteran Employe of Police and Fire Signal System Killed by Automobile.

Services for Charles Marschuetz an employe of the police and fire department signal system for 37 years, who died Friday of injuries suffered in an automobile accident, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. from Leidner mortuary, 2223 St. Louis avenue. The body will be cremated.

Marschuetz was 67 years old, and lived at 2312 St. Louis avenue. Thursday night he walked from an alley back of his home into Twenty-third street and was struck by an automobile operated by Alfred Lefers, 2317A North Market street. Witnesses said the headlights on the machine were not burning.

Surviving are the widow, two sons and a daughter.

ESTIMATE OF 3600 CANCER CASES HERE

Society for Control Reports It Caused 1187 Deaths in City and County in 1930.

The existence in St. Louis of many unrecognized cases of cancer, which doctors say is curable only by early and adequate treatment, was indicated in a survey of St. Louis and St. Louis County by the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

It was computed that 3600 persons suffering with cancer cases existed here in 1930 in addition to the 1187 fatalities from that disease in that year. The survey failed to disclose 3600 under treatments. On the contrary, it indicated that the average St. Louisan under treatment had waited from six months to two years after the first symptom appeared before consulting a physician. Such delay was described as the main factor in fatal cases by surgeons who reported 4484 cures by "early and adequate treatment" in the American College of Surgeons cancer symposium here last October.

The survey was made by Dr. Clarence Cook Little of New York, managing director of the society, at the joint request of its St. Louis Committee, the St. Louis Medical Society, and Health Commissioner Starkloff. Dr. Little's report emphasized the need of educating both the public and the general practitioner, a work conducted by the St. Louis committee through a volunteer group of physicians and laymen. The committee is one of 20 agencies that will participate in the $600,000 Community Fund campaign next month.

Early Treatment Necessary.

Advocating periodic examination as a safeguard, or at least immediate examination of any unexplained lump, sore or unusual bleeding, the report stated: "Cancer is the most lethal of all diseases. It never terminates in recovery as do acute and contagious diseases. Unless treated early and adequately the chances of a fatal termination are almost 100 per cent."

While the general death rate of the city was declining, Dr. Little found, the cancer rate rose from 3.1 per cent of the total mortality rate in 1900 to 10.3 per cent in 1930. Of every 100,000 population here, 86 persons died of cancer in 1910, 109 in 1920 and 144 in 1930.

The rates were shown higher here than elsewhere in a table giving cancer deaths to the 100,000 population in 1929 as 96 for the United States, 108.93 for Missouri and 132 for St. Louis. Since 1927 cancer nationally has stood second only to heart disease in mortality figures. Deaths from cancer in St. Louis increased twice as much as the population between 1910 and 1920, and five times as much as population between 1920 and 1930.

Favors Clinic in County.

St. Louis County cancer death rates were shown as slightly higher than those for the State, and slightly lower than those for St. Louis. Dr. Little recommended a joint organization of the St. Louis County Medical Society, the County Health Department and the County Cancer Control Committee, and suggested organization of a cancer service in the County Hospital, to function primarily as a diagnostic clinic.

A similar organization, representing the Medical Society, Health Department, and the St. Louis Committee, was recommended for cancer control in St. Louis. A Health Department cancer division was advocated. Other recommendations included enlargement of Barnard Free Skin and Cancer Hospital, with a working connection with the medical schools and organization of a cancer staff at city hospital.

OBJECTS TO MAIL PAY CUTS

Telegrams of protest against reduction of mail pay contracts, proposed in the pending Postoffice appropriation bill, were sent by the Mississippi Valley Association yesterday to Senators of the 25 Valley states.

The reductions, the association declared, would bankrupt American ship lines on which this country must depend for its share of world trade.

PROF. SAINTSBURY, NOTED SCHOLAR, DIES

English Critic and Essayist One of Greatest Literary Figures of His Time.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Prof. George Edward Bateman Saintsbury, noted English scholar, educator, critic and essayist, died today at his home in Bath. He was 87 yearsold.

Prof. Saintsbury was one of the outstanding English authorities on French literature.

He was a voluminous writer. Among his more important works are "Short History of French Literature," "A Short History of English Literature," an edition of "Minor Caroline Poets," "A History of Criticism," "A History of English Prosody," "The History of English Criticism," and "A History of the French Novel."

Literary Scholar With Encyclopedic Mind and a Sense of Humor.

George Saintsbury was one of the most remarkable men of his time. He was an eminent literary scholar with an encyclopedic mind and a Fellow of the British Academy. He had read, it is believed, everything of consequence written in the five greatest languages of the world — of which he held English to be the first and ancient Greek the second. He was credited with remembering virtually everything he had read.

There was nothing of the professor about him except his knowledge. He was gifted with a sense of humor as well as a generous appreciation of the good things of life. He was as competent a judge of good food and good wine as of ancient Greek writings, as witness his "Notes of a Cellar Book."

Saintsbury was born at Southampton, England, Oct. 23, 1845. His early education was at King's College School in London. After a brilliant career at Oxford, where he gained his M. A., he went schoolmastering for a while in Manchester and Guernsey, and thereafter embarked on journalism in London.

For 20 years he wrote, especially for the Saturday Review, articles which excited the admiration of those interested in incisive and outspoken literary criticism. They also evoked a certain amount of adverse comment, but that never worried Saintsbury.

In 1895 Saintsbury was appointed to the Chair of Rhetoric and English Literature in Edinburgh University, a post which he held for 20 years, meanwhile turning out volume after volume of what have been for years accepted as standard works.

After his retirement from Edinburgh, he chose Bath as a retreat, from which he continued his literary efforts. When, at the age of 74, he had completed his "History of the French Novel," he said that would be his last work. But it was soon to be succeeded by several volumes of "Letter Books" and "Scrap Books" in which he poked a little gentle fun at his critics. What he entitled "The Last Scrap Book" was published in 1924.

In 1922, on his seventy-seventh birthday, he received an address of congratulations and good wishes from his old students and literary admirers, among whom were such leading literary figures as Sir J. M. Barrie, Robert Bridges, the Poet Laureate; G. K. Chesterton, John Drinkwater, John Galsworthy and Rudyard Kipling and Prof. J. E. Spingarm of New York.

Saintsbury was a fine figure of a man, tall and bearded, and he retained until late in life an almost boyish agility and a zest for life which accorded well with his buoyant and generous nature.

As for Saintsbury's own philosophy of life, he said not long ago:

"If God has given you brains and courage and the upward countenance; if you have loved; if you have had your day and lived your life, what more do you want?

Prof. Saintsbury held honorary degrees of Doctor of Literature from Edinburgh, Oxford, Aberdeen and Durham universities.

His wife, who was Emily Fenn King, died in 1924.

FATHER OF TEN GETS TWO YEARS FOR FORGING WARRANTS

School District Clerk Near Springfield, Mo., Says He Intended to Repay Amounts Taken.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 28.—Arthur Cauble, 45 years old, clerk of the rural Phenix School Board, near here, and a widely known farmer, was sentenced to two years in the State penitentiary today after he confessed he had forged more than $400 in school warrants to himself.

He had been clerk of the district for four years. Authorities said his forgeries would be nearer $600 than $400. Discovery of his acts came after he recently certified to the Green County clerk that his district had voted a 65-cent school levy, when it actually voted only 45 cents. Taxpayers protested against tax bills they received and an investigation followed.

Cauble, father of 10 children, the oldest 20 and the youngest only a year, said he resorted to the forgeries because "I needed the money." The first one, for $10 to purchase seed oats, was the hardest of all, he explained, "and after that they were easy to write." The forgeries were accomplished by signing the name of the School Board president in addition to his own.

Asked if he had intended to pay back the money, Cauble replied: "Sure. Everybody does when they do anything like that. I intended to pay every cent back, but you know how times have been with farmers. The money all went for necessary supplies—I didn't just blow it."

AWARDED $5000 IN KILLING OF HUSBAND BY WATCHMAN

A verdict for $5000 damages was returned by a jury in the City Court of East St. Louis yesterday against the Illinois Central Railroad in favor of Mrs. Frank Griggs, Negro, of East St. Louis, whose husband was fatally shot last Sept. 19 by William Bosomworth, an Illinois Central watchman.

Witnesses testified Griggs was not on the railroad's property when he was shot near Eleventh street and Russell avenue, East St. Louis. Bosomworth testified he shot Griggs accidentally when Griggs attacked him as he sought to question the Negro about a sack of coal he carried.

SMITH SAYS HE WON'T ACCEPT CABINET POST

"Head of All the Things I Want to Be Now," He Tells Questioner.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—In no uncertain terms, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York today said he would not hold a Cabinet post in the incoming Roosevelt administration.

At a conference with newspaper men, the Democratic leader and one of the contenders at his party's convention in Chicago last June for the presidential nomination, was asked:

"Are you going to accept a Cabinet post in the incoming administration?"

Removing his cigar from his mouth, he turned toward his questioner and replied: "No, sir."

"What part are you going to play in the next administration?"

Smiling, he replied: "That remains to be seen."

He was asked if there was any foundation in the rumor that Senator Copeland (Dem.), New York, would resign to accept an ambassadorship in order that Gov. Lehman of New York could appoint him as Senator.

"No," he replied, hastily adding, "That is, 'No' for my half of it. I won't accept a seat in the Senate for my part of it, but I don't know what Senator Copeland is going to do."

Questioned as to whether he is to become head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as has been reported, he said: "I am head of all the things I want to be now."

'Bob' Carey Awarded Championship for Auto Racing in 1932

Wins Three of Four Recognized Classic Events on Brick and Dirt Tracks.

Out of the west last spring came a young racing driver who today is recognized as champion on dirt and brick tracks. He is Bob Carey, always driving on Firestone tires and always pushing out in front regardless of circumstances.

Again the "Big Ten of Racing," the highest ranking racing drivers at the close of the season, all used Firestone tires in the major victories upon which their standings were won.

The standings were: Bob Carey, 815 points; Fred Frame, 710 points; Howdy Wilvox, 610 points; Russell Snowberger, 440 points; Bill Cummings, 430 points; Cliff Bergere, 400 points; Mauri Rose, 285 points; Stubby Stublefield, 280 points; Zeke Meyer, 250 points; Ira Hall, 221 points.

Carey, after winning the Pacific Coast championship last winter, came east and in the Indianapolis 500-mile race on May 30, set the hottest pace. After his car hit the wall he pleaded with officials to let him go on, but laps were lost while the officials determined that the bend in the frame of his car would not be a menace to safety. Carey then "burned up the track," pushing from ninth into fourth place in the final laps of the race.

Carey won the 100-mile race June 5 at Detroit, the 100-mile race July 2 at Syracuse, and then the final race of the series, at Oakland.

Fred Frame's victory at Indianapolis, breaking the former record by three miles per hour, gave him most of his points.

Howdy Wilcox finished second in the race at Indianapolis and second on June 5 at Detroit.

Russell Snowberger, great driver of semi-stock cars, finished fifth at Indianapolis and added points during the season.

"Wild Bill" Cummings, a favorite for his intrepid driving, amassed 440 points for the season, finishing strong at Oakland.

The drivers, who did a fine job with the Studebaker stock cars at Indianapolis, Cliff Bergere and Zeke Meyer, did not continue through the season, but rated sixth and ninth respectively in the "Big Ten."

In the annual Pike's Peak climb, Sept. 5, Glen Shultz broke all records with time of 16 minutes and 47 seconds. It was the sixth consecutive Pike's Peak victory on Firestone tires.

Big Ford Driveaway Of Trucks From Plant For U. S. Army Use

The second driveaway within a month of Ford trucks and cars sold to the United States Army left the Ford Rouge plant recently for Camp Holabird, near Baltimore, Md.

A detachment of three officers and 105 men, with Capt. Joseph L. Brooks of the Quartermaster Corps in command, drove away the 80 vehicles. The delivery was in charge of Maj. John A. Nelson of the Detroict Quartermaster Procurement Division Headquarters.

The Ford convoy which was turned over to the Army representatives included 78 cargo trucks and two sedans. From Camp Holabird the trucks will be distributed over the First, Second and Third Corps areas, and several will be shipped to France to be used by the Graves Registration Service, which has care of the cemeteries where American soldiers are buried.

The previous fleet of Ford trucks and cars delivered to Maj. Nelson on Dec. 17 comprised 81 cargo trucks, eight sedans and eight truck chassis with cabs.

Continental Plant Builds 3,500,000 Gas Engines Since 1899

The Continental Motors Corporation, which recently introduced the new line of Continental cars built its first gasoline engine in 1899—a four-cylinder motor. Since then, Continental has built more than 3,500,000 gasoline engines. It is the largest builder of such engines in the world and its engines are to be found in every country.

Some of the outstanding automobile lines in current motor car history started with cars powered by Continental engines. In all, Continental has furnished engines for more than 100 makes of passenger cars.

Continental now furnishes engines to more than 53 per cent of all companies building trucks.

In the year just closed, Continental produced more aircraft engines in its power class than all other manufacturers combined. In addition, its engines have powered buses, motor boats, road machinery, combines, tractors, fire engines and ambulances.

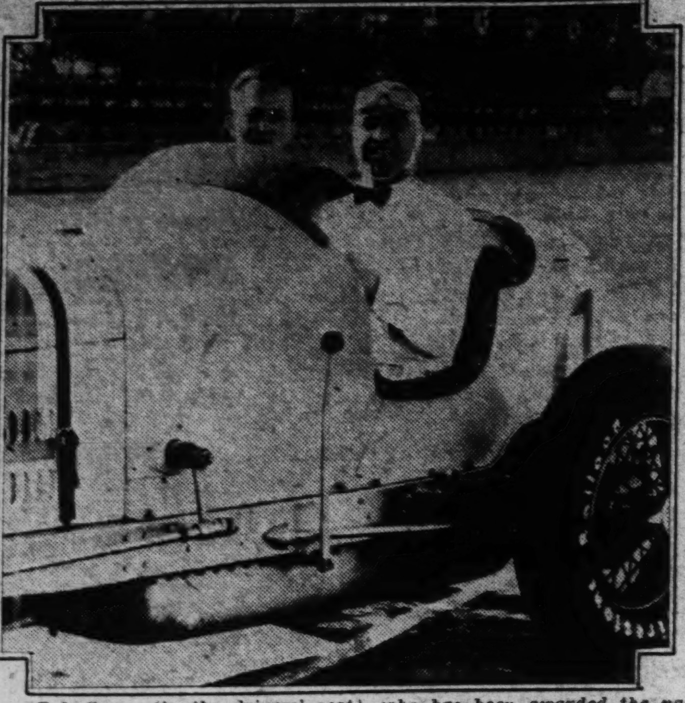
De Soto Dealers' Sales Again Increase

For the fourth consecutive week, automobile deliveries by De Soto dealers exceeded those in the corresponding week of the previous year by more than 100 per cent.

In the week ended Jan. 14, De Soto dealers delivered 859 new cars as compared with 348 in the corresponding period of last year. The figures include Plymouth sales by De Soto dealers in addition to De Soto.

At the same time unfilled orders in the hands of dealers totaled 1184 cars as compared with 465 on the corresponding date of a year ago. Unfilled orders at the factory mounted to 2161.

A. A. A. Racing Champion for 1932



Bob Carey (in the drivers' seat), who has been awarded the national championship of the A. A. A., based on rating in the six major races in 1932, on dirt and brick tracks. Although fourth was the best he could finish at the Indianapolis speedway, due to an accident that bent the frame of his car, he brought his total points for the season to 815. He finished first in three of the championship events—the Detroit race, the Syracuse race and the Oakland race.

Buick Wears Out Nine Sets of Tires In Desert Country

"Martin Michel, who is Western manager for the Texas-Louisiana Power Co. at Pecos, Tex., bought a Buick coupe in November, 1928, and in a little over four years has driven it more than 160,000 miles," W. F. Hugstader, Buick sales manager, Detroit, reports. He writes that he has traveled over every conceivable kind of road, and has gotten into all sorts of difficulties, without ever having to be towed. The car has always been able to pull out on its own power.

"He calls his car 'Old 272' and gives a lively description of what constitutes the daily life of a driver in the great Southwest. 'My Buick,' he writes, 'takes enough punishment to wreck many another car. It fords rivers, creeks and mountain torrents and travels at altitudes ranging from 80 feet to 11,000 feet above sea level. Sometimes we are slowed by torrential rains so heavy that the radiator cap is barely visible. Sometimes the desert sandstorms hold us back, with a temperature that runs as high as 116 degrees. Again we plow through blinding snowstorms where the temperature hovers close to zero. But we always get through.

"The car has never carried chains, though it has worn out nine sets of tires in the rocks and the sand that are sometimes part of the trail. Flying rocks from passing cars have made three new windshields necessary, but you can't blame the car for that.

"Incidents in its trips have included killing one cow, moving a calf off the road, running over several hundred jackrabbits, running down a coyote and catching one hawk on the windshield. We live in a great game country.

"Its regular job is carrying ice water, cement, sand, motors, pumps and all kinds of mechanical equipment and parts used in the company's service. It is common to drive it at 60 miles an hour for as long as 20 hours at a stretch, for there are magnificent distances down here, and the car is on call day and night, in emergencies. The car will still do its 70 miles an hour."

Auburn Record Feat Outstanding, Says A. A. A. Contest Board

The outstanding motor car performance of 1932 to win official certification by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association was the new stock car record for one mile of 100.77 miles an hour set July 9 by a 12-cylinder 160-horsepower Auburn speedster equipped with dual ratio.

This announcement was made by T. E. Allen, secretary of the contest board, following a survey by the board at its annual meeting of all automotive achievements for 1932.

"We regard this new speed record as particularly important because it marks the first time in the history of the automobile that a strictly stock car has ever attained the long sought speed of 100 miles an hour under official supervision," he said. "The new record, 100.77 miles an hour, is nearly nine miles an hour higher than the old mark of 91.79 miles per hour.

"Of particular interest is the fact that this same car, teamed with a 12-cylinder 160-horsepower Auburn sedan broke all stock car records from one to 500 miles, for open and closed cars, under our supervision—a total of 37 marks falling before the speed of these two cars during July.

"These achievements are particularly significant to the public because they demonstrate that the speed, stamina and superior engineering which formerly was associated only with specially built racing cars are now incorporated in private automobiles taken at random from factory production lines by official and impartial observers."

Allen also pointed out that since Jan. 1 the contest board has certified a record of 118.32 miles an hour, for the kilometer, set in December by this same Auburn speedster with its body stripped and its motor tuned for high speed. After setting this record the car went on to set 39 other official records, including 113.57 miles per hour for 500 miles, 109.33 miles per hour for 1000 miles and 1270.12 miles in 12 hours.

U. S. Rubber Co. Increases Newspaper Advertising Space

Greater use of newspapers will feature the tire advertising campaign of the United States Rubber Co. in 1933.

The "tempered rubber" theme, which proved an effective factor in increasing consumer acceptance of United States tires in 1932, will be continued this year.

This campaign was credited with an important part in enabling the company to hold its own in dealer sales, improve its position in the original equipment field, and obtain a higher percentage in the total market.

New Studebaker Trucks Announced, Four Chassis Types

The new Studebaker trucks, just announced, include four chassis ranging from the 1½-ton model to a 3-to-4-ton unit. The addition of a 1¾-to-2½-ton chassis this year rounds out the line to meet every requirement in the medium duty haulage field. A new variable rating, depending on roads, loads and operating conditions, is given these trucks.

There is model S-2 (1½ to 2 tons), with a vehicle gross weight of 8000 to 9000 pounds, listing from $670 to $745; the new Model S-4 (1¾ to 2½ tons), with a vehicle gross weight from 9000 to 10,500 pounds, at $785 to $865; Model S-6 (2 to 3 tons), with a vehicle gross weight from 10,500 to 12,000 pounds, at $945 to $995, and model S-8 (3 to 4 tons), with 14,000 to 16,000 pounds vehicle gross weight, at $1350 to $1425. All prices are quoted at factory. Spare tire and bumper extra.

These new trucks have engines developing 75 horsepower at 3200 revolutions per minute. The cubic-inch displacement is 230, which gives a horsepower for every 3.06 cubic inches of engine.

All Studebaker truck axles are the full floating type with extra heavy ring gear and pinion. The pinion is straddle mounted and carried in a housing of sufficient strength to permit maximum load carrying capacity and still has an ample reserve as a safety factor.

Power brakes are standard equipment on all but the 1½-ton unit. This practically eliminates manual effort in braking. A BK booster connected with the brake pedal automatically assists foot pressure, and deceleration is accomplished smoothly and immediately. Studebaker truck brakes are of the duo-servo, two-shoe type controlled by cable and operating against drums of cast-nickel alloy iron.

The big wide-shouldered radiator, heavy front bar bumper and fenders have a massive look further indicating power and reliability. The cab design departs from the usual custom, having a skirt on the side which is carried down to meet the steps and running board.

Goodrich Credited With Millions Saved Through Tire Process

"Discovery of organic accelerators can be rated as second in importance only to that of vulcanization in the history of the rubber industry," Dr. H. L. Trumbull, director of chemical research of B. F. Goodrich Co., said in a paper read when the Perkin Medal for 1933 was presented to George Oenslager, Goodrich chemist, at ceremonies in New York City.

Oenslager was awarded the medal, one of the highest honors which can be bestowed on an American chemist, by the American section of the Society of Chemical Industry and co-operating scientific societies for his pioneering work on the use of organic accelerators of vulcanization in the rubber industry.

The committee making the award estimated total savings from Oenslager's tire improvements total hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

"Use of organic accelerators has made possible enormous improvements in appearance and quality of rubber goods over those made according to standards of 30 years ago," Dr. Trumbull's paper declared.

"Those who bought tires 30 years ago and discarded them after 3000 miles appreciate the contrast with modern tire performance. A significant part of the improvement must be credited to organic accelerators, although many other developments share this credit."

Auto Fatalities in New York.

There were 1031 motor vehicle accident fatalities in New York City last year, a decrease for the third consecutive year. There were 85 fewer deaths than in 1931, when there were 1116. In 1930 there were 1163 and in 1929, 1220.

WHITE HOUSE CALL BY MRS. ROOSEVELT

Chats With Mrs. Hoover; Sees Mrs. Garner; Rides a Taxi; Takes Plane for Georgia.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — A school teacher and a secretary, both fond of their jobs, today talked over the problem of what to do about those jobs after March 4. The teacher, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who also called alone on foot at the White House, which is to be her home for the next four years, told Mrs. John N. Garner she saw no reason why the latter should not go right on being her husband's secretary after he is Vice President.

They met at the Mayflower Hotel shortly before Mrs. Roosevelt walked to the White House to look over, at Mrs. Hoover's invitation, the second floor rooms that the President and his family use as living quarters.

After a swift walk, during which no one recognized her, Mrs. Roosevelt dodged through the traffic across Pennsylvania avenue and swung up the driveway to the executive mansion.

Where Uncle Theodore Lived.

She stayed an hour, chatting with Mrs. Hoover, conferring with members of the White House staff, and inspecting the second floor, which she had not seen since she visited the place as a girl, while her uncle, Theodore Roosevelt, was President.

She left on foot, but picked up a 20-cent taxicab at the corner, after glancing at her watch and discovering she was late for an appointment with Col. U. S. Grant III, head of the governmental department that has charge of the White House and its furnishings. She had declined a White House automobile bearing the presidential seal which waited outside for her.

"Mrs. Garner told me," Mrs. Roosevelt said later, "that she had been her husband's secretary for 30 years. She said she loved the job and couldn't bear to give it up. She asked me what I thought, and I told her I saw no reason why she should. Nor do I."

"Fifteen Lovely Minutes."

Later Mrs. Garner said: "We were of the opinion that we couldn't cease to lead busy lives after March 4. She was charming—just as natural as a human being could be. Of course, she was besieged by people waiting, but we had fifteen very lovely minutes together."

Mrs. Hoover had offered to send a White House car and an escort to the Mayflower for Mrs. Roosevelt, but Mrs. Roosevelt declined. She wanted to walk, she said.

Warren Delano Robbins, her husband's cousin, who, as chief of the protocol division of the State Department, is master of ceremonies on state occasions, arrived at the Mayflower shortly before Mrs. Roosevelt left. He and Mrs. Robbins also offered to give her a lift to the White House in their car but again Mrs. Roosevelt declined.

On South by Airplane.

Accompanied by her son, Elliott, Louis Howe, the President-Elect's personal secretary, and Gene Vidal, a friend of Elliott, Mrs. Roosevelt left for Atlanta by Airplane early in the afternoon, expecting to arrive at Atlanta airport about 8 p. m. An automobile was to be waiting there to drive them to Warm Springs, where Mrs. Roosevelt will celebrate with her husband his birthday on Monday.

OFFERS BILL TO LIQUIDATE JOINT STOCK LAND BANKS

Senator Dickinson Would Have Holding Companies Take Over Loans and Bonds.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—As a step to ease the agricultural credit situation and prevent foreclosures on farm property, Senator Dickinson (Rep.), Iowa, today introduced a bill to provide for holding companies to take over joint stock land banks and liquidate them.

Dickinson explained that although the bill provided for setting up the holding companies in each of the 12 land bank districts, the purpose was for them to function only for those joint stock land banks as were unable to maintain their position and were threatened with bankruptcy.

The Iowan said he felt that such action would prevent the banks from going into receivership, and would permit liquidation in a slower fashion without requiring foreclosures on farmers' property.

Each of the holding companies would have a directorate of five members, appointed by the Farm Loan Board, and a capital stock equal to 5 per cent of the aggregate value of farm loan bonds issued by the bank it was liquidating.

Offer of a location at Lambert-St. Louis Field, the municipal airport, for the Air Corps Technical School, now at Rantoul, Ill., has been made to the War Department through the Air Board of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

The House Appropriations Committee recently refused to approve a $125,000 appropriation for improvements at Chanute Field, at Rantoul, and this was followed by a report that the school was to be moved to Fairfield, O., to be near the air industries at Dayton. The Belleville and East St. Louis Chambers of Commerce instituted a movement to have the Chanute Field activities transferred to Scott Field. According to a more recent report, a Missouri location was under consideration.

The St. Louis offer, authorized by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, is for 40 acres at the municipal airport, which has the highest obtainable Department of Commerce rating.

TRUSTEE ASKS TO SUE FOR CLOCK FROM STORE'S STOCK

Says $200 Grandfather Model Was Taken Just Prior to Bankruptcy Suit.

Charging that Max W. Kramer, an attorney, removed a $200 grandfather clock from the Bee Thrift Co. last June, shortly before creditors sued the company in bankruptcy, Morris J. Levin, trustee, asked Referee in Bankruptcy Coles yesterday for leave to take legal action to recover the clock.

Kramer testified recently that he had taken the clock, which he valued at $100, as part payment of legal fees due him from Harold Better, one of the partners in the thrift firm. He had represented Better in personal matters, he said, and had been authorized by Better to take the clock, as it belonged to Better personally. He added that he still had the clock and intended to keep it.

Complaints of customers that they had been "stung" by the Bee company led to an investigation of its affairs. The company, formerly at 515 Olive street, was closed last June with an indicated loss of about $28,000 to creditors.

NON-UNION MEN DRIVEN FROM WORK ON POSTOFFICE

Two Hurt in Clash at Morris, Ill.; Sheriff Seizes Eight of Attackers.

MORRIS, Ill., Jan. 28.—A crew of non-union laborers from Chicago were driven from their jobs on the new postoffice here this noon by a group of men. Sheriff John Perucca said he arrested eight of the invading gang, who, he said, were union workers from Joliet.

Two men were slightly hurt in a brief clash.

The non-union workmen, brought from Chicago this morning after labor trouble during construction of the $80,000 building, were put in their automobiles and ordered out of town before order was restored.

The men taken into custody were being held by Sheriff Perucca and State's Attorney S. J. Holderman.

Considerable labor trouble has been encountered since work on the postoffice was started two months ago. The contract is held by Schmidt Brothers' Construction Co. of Chicago.

Carnora arrived at the Bergen County jail this morning and calmly announced, "I am the torch murderer you are looking for. I want to die."

Four employes of the Forbes Market, 1728 Union boulevard, were held up there last night by three armed men who looted the cash registers of $375 and fled.

WABASH GETS AUTHORITY TO SHARE COST OF SUBWAY

Grade Crossing at Lindbergh Blvd. Near Airport Will Be Eliminated.

An order authorizing receivers of the Wabash Railway to share the cost of eliminating the grade crossing of the railroad and Lindbergh boulevard at Lambert-St. Louis Field was issued by Federal Judge Davis yesterday. An extension of Lindbergh boulevard is to be built in this section by the State Highway Department. It will be carried beneath the railroad in a subway, about 80 feet east of the present Bridgeton Station road crossing.

The receivers, in their petition, said the present crossing was hazardous for the heavy traffic. Cost of the subway is estimated at $60,000, of which the Wabash is to pay half and St. Louis County half, the county's share coming from a refund due from the State. The county has agreed to pay the railroad on the day trains start running over a short detour track to be constructed.

Next Thursday the County Court will attempt to settle negotiations for right-of-way for the extension of Lindbergh. There is a two and one-half mile gap in the thoroughfare between Natural Bridge road and Coldwater Creek. P. H. Daniells, district engineer for the State, said bids for completing the road, which is marked as State Highway No. 77, could be received within two months if the right-of-way question were settled.

SIX STEP-DAUGHTERS SEEK NIEWOHNER ESTATE SHARE

Thei r Mother Says Her Second Husband Promised to Take Them as His Own.

Whether six step-daughters of Henry Niewohner, beer pump maker, who died Dec. 7, 1930, are entitled to share in his $30,000 estate as adopted children is to be determined in a suit taken under advisement by Circuit Judge Hamilton yesterday.

Their mother, Mrs. Anna Horstmannshoff, 1536 School drive, Brentwood, was married to Niewohner at Westphalia, Germany, in the late '90's, after the death of her first husband, Frank Horstmannshoff, who had lived in St. Louis. In a deposition she testified that on the day of the marriage Niewohner promised to take her children as his own and that subsequently he referred to them as "mine daughters."

Similar testimony was given by several of the claimants, who further said they regarded Niewohner the same as a father and he so treated them. They worked for him in a brewery and a bakery he owned in Germany, they said. According to Mrs. Horstmannshoff, the brewery was purchased with funds furnished by her. The family came to St. Louis in 1900, and the mother obtained a divorce from Niewohner in 1910, resuming her first husband's surname.

Niewohner bequeathed the bulk of his estate to his widow, Mrs. Kate Niewohner, 2555 Benton street, to whom he was married after the divorce, and to two stepbrothers, Frederick and Wilhelm Froelke, and two nieces, Mrs. Lina Steinhauer and Mrs. Marie Droste.

Painting Prophet of the Crash

JOSEPH JONES,

YOUNG St. Louis artist, and "Still Life With Atlas," one of 25 of his paintings on view at the Artists' Guild, 812 Union boulevard.

What Young Man Thinks About Life Put on Canvas

Joseph Jones, Explaining Exhibit at Artists' Guild, Says He Wants Paintings "To Knock Holes in Walls."

What a disillusioned young man of 23 with a powerful faculty for expressing himself on canvas thinks of this topsy-turvy world may be seen at the Artists' Guild where 25 paintings by Joseph Jones are on exhibition.

No pretty pictures, these. Cynical, hard-bitten effusions of one influenced deeply by the inequalities of modern social organization and keenly sympathetic with the struggles of the common man.

Jones, painter of houses turned artist, has gathered for his first one-man show the paintings which sum up the things he has to say about life, and has thrown in a couple to demonstrate what he can do to saitsfy that patron of art who wants a pretty picture to hang over the mantle, or one to match the draperies.

Take "Still Life With Atlas" as representative of the real Jones. A cold study in black and white, held together by warm coloring in the corners. A table top, aslant, the cover sliding off, an atlas perched perilously near the edge, an open book with pages refusing to lie flat, and a swirling band of paper reaching from behind it to the open surface of the book. Or is it paper? It has no texture, it is only, as the artist says, "a composition in form and color." It might be cloth —or tempered steel.

Here is found, more obviously than in the other canvases, all of which are tinged with it, the social philosophy which inspired their creation. Jones' portraits are pictures of sad-eyed men and women who have labored much, and suffered much. A landscape shows a tree struggling to survive in a crowded city, its barren limbs, whip-like, futilely lashing a sullen sky.

In the still life, the atlas needs only a slight jar to send it crashing, any sort of tug on the table cloth would upset the whole business. The pages of the book stand up stiffly, as pages do when books are not properly bound and treated. There is tension in that swirling band of whatever it may be. Tension and dynamic energy.

Crazy Smoke, Crazy World.

Or take "River Front," one of the two paintings he exhibited at City Art Museum last fall in the annual American show at which he won special honorable mention. Two river packets, with belching smoke stacks, tossing about violently on the calm waters of the Mississippi, careening toward a collision. In the background, the Eads Bridge, and smoking chimneys of the city. From some the smoke blows north, from others, south. Crazy enough. But any crazier, the picture asks you, than millions in want because the world has too much of everything, than machines capable of making life more comfortable, but succeeding only in making it more miserable?

"That's what I'm groping toward, and what I think I'm beginning to express," Jones says. "I'm not interested in painting pretty pictures to match pink and blue walls. I want to paint things that will knock holes in the walls.

"How anyone with the ability to appreciate what is going on in the world today and the means of expression can go on painting harmless imitations of the Frenchmen of the last century, which is what most contemporary Americans are doing, is beyond me.

"I'm not interested in what they are doing, or in what the Frenchmen did. I know, where they got whatever they have that is worth anything, and I can go there for it myself. For four years I've studied nothing but the old masters. Whatever I have that is good is what I got from them, and what I have added to it from my own experience.

Feels "the Crash Is Near."

'I can't help but feel the crash is near. Out of it, I am sure, will come something finer than we have known. But the thing that should concern the artist now is this eruption that is in the making. That's the important thing to me. And while there are important things to paint, where could I find time to paint beautiful white horses and shining limousines?"

It may be understood then, that for all the critical approbation Jones has received in the last year or two, he has not sold enough pictures to make his path an easy one. Patrons of art just don't buy pictures "to knock holes in their walls." There are, however, those interested in his work, who recognize that artists must eat, and out of their efforts may come a solution. Plans have been discussed for a Joe Jones Club, to be formed by a group of young men who sympathize with his ideals and who would finance him while he goes on knocking holes out of walls.

The exhibition will remain in the guild gallery, 812 Union boulevard, until Feb. 15. It is open to the public each week except Tuesday from 1 until 5 p. m., and on Sunday from 3 until 5 p. m.

MISSOURI PENITENTIARY COSTS IN 1932 LOWEST SINCE 1924

Prison Had 4525 Inmates Last Year; Expense for Each Convict for Biennium $432.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 28.—The cost of supporting inmates of the State penitentiary during 1932 dropped below $1,000,000 for the first time since 1924.

The biennial report of the State Prison Board, released tonight, shows an average population of 4525 during the past year, as compared with an average of 2288 inmates in 1924. During the past four-year period a daily average of 2532 inmates supported themselves with their own labor, 214 more than have been self-supporting in any former four-year period, the report said. The present population of the prison is about 74 per cent above the rated capacity.

The cost of supporting each inmate for the past two years was $432.11, as compared with $535.64 in 1929-1930, $639.46 in 1927-28 and $658.02 in 1925-26. The report shows that while living costs outside the prison dropped 26 per cent from 1925 to the present time, the living cost inside the prison dropped 60 per cent. The average number of guards during the 1931-32 period was one to each 28 inmates.

Less than 7 per cent of the 1063 paroles granted inmates have been revoked during the past two years. The board considered 3923 applications, 743 of them in executive sessions. Of these, 661 are now on parole under citizen supervision. Of 1474 conditional paroles granted, 263 were revoked for failure to report and 45 committed back to prison under a new sentence. The report recommends a system of State parole supervision, saying many inmates could now be released under this plan.

1932 TUBERCULOSIS DEATH RATE HERE LOWEST ON RECORD

22 Pct. Less Than in 1931; of 691 Who Died 40 Per Cent Were Negroes.

St. Louis had fewer deaths from tuberculosis during 1932 than in any other year on record, the rate dropping 22 per cent below that of 1931, according to Dr. H. I. Spector, municipal tuberculosis controller. The tuberculosis death rate in the 100,000 population was 83; in 1931 at was 106.

Deaths from tuberculosis in 1932 numbered 691. The next lowest mortality from the disease was 725 in 1930. Forty per cent of the deaths were among Negroes who form 11 per cent of the population here.

Decreasing mortality figures for a single year should not be viewed with too much optimism, Dr. Spector said. Clinic attendance increased considerably, he stated, indicating infection which may result in high mortality in later years. The greatest need at present he said is for hospital beds for Negro men.

DE VALERA SAYS SELF-RELIANT UNITED IRELAND IS HIS GOAL

In Message to Americans He Asserts He Will Lead People Where They Want To Go.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Jan. 28.—President Eamon de Valera, victorious in the general election for the Dail, declared today in a message to the American people that this indorsement of his policy means continuation of the efforts to establish an Ireland united, self-reliant and self-supporting.

He spoke of the problem of the partition between the Free State and Northern Ireland, referring to a statement by Lord Craigavon that Northern Ireland never will be a part of the Irish Republic.

"That was a vain and foolish speech," he said, "the forces making for Irish unity are greater than the will of transient individuals. Wherever the people want to go I am prepared to lead them."

De Valera will have a majority of one seat in the new Dail Eireann which meets two weeks from today. The majority will make it unnecessary for the President to rely on Labor members, usually steadfast, but occasionally doubtful allies. Having won a total of 76 seats in the new Dail, the President's party, the Fianna Fail, will be able to tie the combined strength of all other parties and then, if another vote is needed to break a deadlock, will have that of the Speaker.

For all working purposes, however, the Fianna Fail and the Labor party together will muster a majority of 17.

WILDER MANUFACTURING CO. IS ORDERED LIQUIDATED

The assets of the Wilder Manufacturing Co., 701 North Main street, will be liquidated and the proceeds divided among creditors and stockholders, pursuant to an order made by Circuit Judge Calhoun yesterday.

The action was taken on recommendation of E. B. Wilder, who has been operating the company as receiver since July 10, 1930. He reported that because of business conditions it would be for the best interest of the company to cease operations.

The company manufactures games, kites and model airplanes. A report filed in November listed assets valued at $240,350, with liabilities amounting to $42,160. The receiver was originally appointed on petition of the Graham Paper Co., a creditor.

PROGRESSIVES PLAN PERMANENT SET-UP

Nine Senators Name Group to Study Prospect for Liberal Objectives.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—A move looking to the perpetuation of the Progressive organization set up in the 1932 campaign primarily to elect Franklin D. Roosevelt and to work for liberal legislation was undertaken here today by nine Senators.

After a conference at the Capitol they appointed a subcommittee to investigate the prospects of a permanent and active group.

Senator Norris, Nebraska's Republican independent and supporter of Alfred E. Smith and Roosevelt in the last two presidential races, called the meeting. He said afterward that the 1932 Progressive setup probably would be continued in hope of achieving whatever liberal objectives are decided upon.

Six Republican independents, two Democrats and the Farmer-Labor Senator, Shipstead of Minnesota, took part in the conference. Also present was David K. Niles of Boston, who was organization director of the National Progressive League, the official title of the organization under whose auspices many of the Senators spoke in the 1932 campaign.

Norris said that while no definite conclusions were reached, a subcommittee of three was appointed to determine and report back later whether the prospects warranted making the organization a continuing body.

Senators named to the subcommittee are La Follette, Wisconsin, and Cutting, New Mexico, Republican independent supporters of Roosevelt, and Wheeler, Montana, Democrat. Besides those mentioned, the conferees included Nye and Frazier, North Dakota, and Blaine, Wisconsin, Republican independents, and Costigan, Colorado, Democrat.

Not all of the Republican independent Senators who attended today's conference came out openly for Roosevelt in the November election.

She Is Found in New York After Bony of Gang Victim Is Picked Up by Police.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—An unidentified elderly woman was found with her skull crushed late last night in the same spot from which Queens police had picked up the body of a gang victim three hours earlier. The woman, taken to a hospital in Queens, regained consciousness for a few moments, but refused to tell how she had been injured.

The gang victim was identified by a chauffeur's license as Vincent Fantasia, who had a police record of five arrests, but no convictions. He had been shot three times and the police thought he was killed elsewhere and carried to the spot.

Later a woman motorist saw the injured woman lying in the road and carried her to the hospital. Police found a hammer with which, they thought, the woman had been beaten.

BACK IN BELLEVILLE TO FACE CHARGE OF DEFRAUDING PRIEST

Two Men Returned From Chicago, Where They Were Seized in $7514 Bond Deal.

Clayton L. Smythe and Herbert E. Graves, arrested Friday in a Chicago brokerage office, were returned to Belleville yesterday charged with defrauding the Rev. John Goelz, Catholic priest of O'Fallon, of $7514 in bonds in a confidence game.

They were indicted last April on charges of Father Goelz that they persuaded him to give up the bonds in payment for Chicago real estate which they represented was worth more than the value of the bonds. Appraisers said it was worth only $3700, Father Goelz said.

Constitutional Barrier In Way of Federal Control of Work Hours

However Senator Black, Author of Short Week Bill Thinks Supreme Court Might Reverse Its Attitude Toward Child Labor Laws Taken 20 Years Ago.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.

DOES Congress possess authority under the Constitution to limit the working hours of persons employed in industry? This is the crucial question with which Congress is now faced. If it answers in the affirmative there is no doubt that the final determination will rest with the United States Supreme Court, which, on two previous occasions, denied the right of Congress to exercise a similar power.

For several days the Senate Judiciary Committee has been conducting hearings on a bill introduced by Senator Black (Dem.), Alabama, intended to establish the 30-hour week in industry. The measure provides simply that no article or commodity produced by labor employed more than five days a week or more than six hours a day shall be admitted to interestate commerce. Violation would be punishable by fines of not less than $200 and imprisonment of not more than three months.

Opponents of the bill have based their arguments exclusively on the ground that it is unconstitutional, and would be so declared by the Supreme Court. It is conceivable that some of the employers' organizations fighting the measure are actuated by more personal reasons, but they have elected to take the loftier stand as defenders of the Constitution.

Legal Basis for Bill.

Some of the most important laws on the Federal statute books are based on the clause of the Constitution which empowers Congress to regulate commerce among the several states. This broad grant of authority has been held to cover such extreme practices as the interstate shipment of lottery tickets and adulterated foods, stolen automobiles and the transportation of women for immoral purposes, in addition to the regulation of railroads, power lines and radio communication. On this clause the Black bill must stand, if stand it does.

Virtually all the arguments against the constitutionality of the measure rest upon two celebrated decisions in which the Supreme Court balked the efforts of Congress to regulate child labor. During the first administration of Woodrow Wilson, Congress passed a law prohibiting the transportation in interstate commerce of goods produced by children under a certain age, or by children working more than a stated number of hours per week. The matter reached the Supreme Court in the form of a case entitled "Hammer vs. Dagenhart."

The court divided five to four. The majority held that Congress under the guise of regulating interstate commerce, had attempted to usurp an authority which belonged exclusively to the states—namely, that of regulating the hours of labor of children employed in mines and factories within the states. The dissenting opinion of the minority, written by former Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, contended that the power of Congress over interstate commerce was "plenary and complete," and that the act was constitutional.

Subsequently Congress attempted to accomplish the same result indirectly by imposing a heavy tax on commodities produced by child labor. Again the Supreme Court overturned the statute on the ground that it was a usurpation of state authority.

In these and other cases, however, the court stated the important exception that Congress possessed police power to prohibit the interstate shipment of articles "inherently harmful in themselves"—such, for example, as adulterated foods, lottery tickets and such contraband commodities as liquor and drugs.

Opposition's Argument.

Opposing the Black bill in behalf of railroad employers this week, Clarence A. Miller, a lawyer, said: "The court makes it perfectly clear in these cases that the regulation of the hours of labor in mines, quarries, mills, factories, forests and manufacturing establishments within a state is completely the business of the state governments, and Congress cannot, in the guise of a tax or the regulation of interstate commerce, regulate such, regardless of the high purpose of such legislation." That is the meat of the argument.

In reply, Senator Black and other advocates of the proposed legislation state two interesting propositions. First, they say there is excellent reason to believe that the Supreme Court is willing and even eager to reverse the position which it took in the child labor cases. Second, they say it can be demonstrated that commodities produced by per-

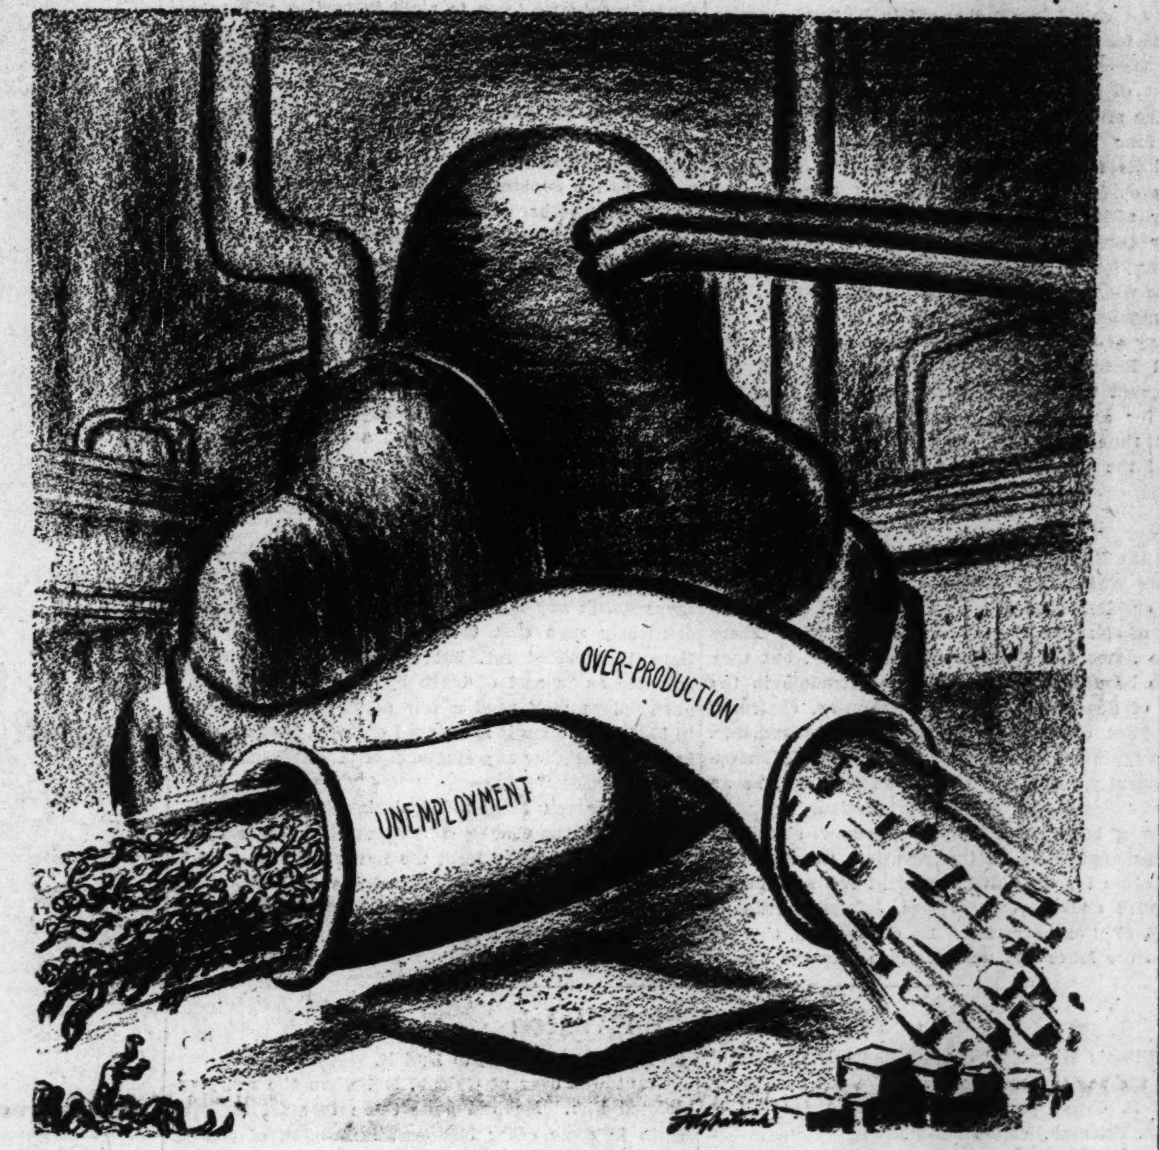
The Economic Consequences of Power Production

By Fred Henderson

Displacement of Human Labor Upsets Traditional Economic System, the Author Holds, and Compels a New Order if Civilization Is to Persist.

The Distributive Division of Industry and Business Indicted as a Tragic Failure—Final Delirium of Old State of Affairs Is the Paradox of Poverty in a World of Abundance.



By Charles G. Ross,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.

"POVERTY and insecurity in a world of abundant resources and of gigantic powers which have been effectively mastered and put in harness for human service is a monstrous stupidity. It is not a deprivation imposed upon us by any lack of natural opportunity, but a failure in human intelligence. Given the resources, their distribution is not a question of natural limits or inevitable laws from which we cannot escape, but of ordinary sensible human arrangements."

"The Economic Consequences of Power Production," by Fred Henderson, a Britisher, from which the foregoing sentences are taken, is not just another book about the depression. Unlike most of the depression literature, it goes to the roots of our troubles. Unlike some of the outgivings of the Technocrats, it has clarity. Unlike Stuart Chase's "A New Deal," it follows through unerringly to the conclusion indicated by the author's promises.

The book was published in London, by Allen & Unwin, in 1931, and is just beginning to receive attention in America. There has been no American edition.

Henderson devotes himself mainly to diagnosis. "With the form which our social and political activities may take in the conscious and intelligent effort towards the new order," he says, "it is no part of my task here to speak. I am concerned only with defining the purpose of the effort; and that purpose, if the world is to avoid final disaster by the breakdown of a visibly disrupting social system into chaos, can be no other than the purpose of the Co-operative Commonwealth."

It is not intended in this digest to deal with the suggestion of a Co-operative Commonwealth (on that subject the reader may be respectfully referred to Bellamy's "Looking Backward," written in 1887) but only to give, by the sampling process, the main lines of Henderson's argument. To do more than this would be to exceed the limits he has imposed upon himself. He seeks to show what is the matter with the present economic order and indicates the general direction of his proposed change. There is no detailed blueprint of a new order.

Lays Present Ills to Faults In the Distributive System.

The author's central theme is that power production—those words being used in a large sense to mean "the substitution of other powers for human physical effort as the working energy of the world's population—has given the world leisure on a scale undreamed of before the Industrial Revolution, but that this leisure, instead of being well-provisioned and filled with satisfying opportunities, as it should be, is "starved, destitute and resourceless." The beneficent possibilities of power production, or, as we are accustomed to say, of the machine, have been thwarted by faults inherent in our distributive system.

There is, as the author says, nothing new in the facts he has gathered—just as, it might be added, there is nothing fundamentally new in the data assembled by the Technocrats. What he is concerned with is the interpretation of the facts in relation to the economics of distribution.

Power production—the machine—has opened up limitless possibilities of the "good life" for the mass of mankind; distribution, based as it is on the economics of "the drudge age of scanty production surviving into the new age of plenty," has failed. Instead of a proper leisure we have unemployment—some 30,000,000 of the working population of the world, within the areas developed for power production, released into idleness, and millions more in part-time employment only.

100,000,000 Suffering Through Unemployment.

"The International Labor Office of the League of Nations," writes Henderson, "estimates at not less than 100,000,000 of the world's population, men and their families, the army now suffering deprivations by unemployment; released into leisure because of the production of vast surplus wealth by non-human energies, but forbidden to use the surplus because the whole purpose of the economic system and its finance is to pass all products into the possession of the owning class in the old feudal way.

"The surplus has been produced for tribute and not for use in the world's life; and the finance of tribute collection—of production for profit—does not permit it to be used for consumption unless it is first marketed for profit."

The assumption that machines, by cheapening production and thereby stimulating consumption, tend constantly to make more employment—an assumption widely held in the pre-depression days and still put forward in some quarters—is characterized by the author as "an illusion which collapses under any serious and penetrative inquiry."

Progressive Unemployment in Wake of Rise of Machine.

"That a world-wide equipment for and use of power-machine production leads," he says, "to the relegation to unemployment of a constantly increasing proportion of the world's population, is a truth which is not in the least degree controverted by noting that up till quite recently power-producing nations did in fact expand their employed populations on a big scale.

"The facts show conclusively that we have now passed beyond that initial stage in the development of power production. It was the stage at which the possession of power-producing equipment was confined to but a few countries; and while it lasted it concealed the cessation of human employment which is implicit in the nature of the new powers; concealed it by giving to those few countries a whole world of outside markets into which their gigantic product could overflow. . . . .

"It is sufficient at this point to note that, whatever may have been the impelling causes, the countries of the world which were markets for the overflow of the vast output of the power-producing countries have in fact themselves become power producers; that the new production has become established everywhere; and that its world-wide establishment has brought us to the stage in the development of the Industrial Revolution at which its full effects in the substitution of mechanical power for human labor have to be tabled without any chance of the old concealment by overflow. . .

Competition Intensified and Trade Fields Gobbled Up.

"We have now reached the stage at which—with competition intensified to the savagery of war, and practically every remaining undeveloped region of the world absorbed into the political system of some one or other of the big producers as an outlet for trade—a proportion of the people of every industrialized nation are unwanted, and their employment has become the outstanding problem which civilization has to face everywhere. And still unremittingly with every week that passes, the process by which any given output of wealth requires less and less human labor for its production continues."

"The Industrial Revolution"

"THIS fundamental change which science has made is revealing itself in one swift development after another as incompatible with the old structure of society . . . Immense productivity gets out of hand for such purposes; it becomes over-production, glut, congestion beyond the capacity of differential class distribution to absorb, and throws us into trade depression after trade depression by sheer weight of accumulated goods which cannot be marketed for lack of the purchasing power which a class society necessarily fails to distribute . . . Instability has become a prevalent terror of insecurity, not only for nations and individuals everywhere, but for the future of human civilization. Already civilization has been dragged to the edge of the abyss in a world war which was only the confusion of trade rivalries and the scramble for outside markets come to a head; all the conditions for its repetition are still fermenting in the life of the world and in the surpluses of products. The World War has so far been its (the world's) worst paroxysm of indigestion."

Coming to the distributive system, the author finds "an immense conflict in our civilization." On the one hand there is the new technique of production which gives an increased output of all the requirements of life with less and less human labor in proportion to the output. On the other hand there is "an economy of ownership and distribution which cancels out the purpose of this release of human life from drudgery by making the consuming rights of the mass of mankind still dependent upon the continuous requirement for the exercise of their labor; shutting them out automatically from any claim to consuming rights at all if it does not need to hire and employ them; and, when it has to hire them, measuring their right of consumption by wage payments related only to the cash cost of living.

Purpose of Advance in Civilization Reversed.

"The advance of civilization in new knowledge and power applied to production stands essentially for service to and expansion of human life. But the handling and control of this new knowledge and power by our present economic system reverses all that. The human right to consumption, distributed as payment for hired labor, becomes a cost of production, and affects financial values detrimentally by increasing costs; and so the very thing which reason tells us is the central purpose of civilization—the endowment of human life with the widest possible satisfactions—becomes, as a cost of production, the thing which has to be cut down to the smallest possible margin of maintenance for the vast majority of mankind. . . .

Here, therefore, is a clash of purposes in our civilization, which cannot continue without ultimate breakdown. No social order could stand the strain of such an internal conflict for long without disruption. Implicit in the nature of our productive powers is the philosophy of life which asserts that, in a sane world, abundant resources mean the possibility of abundant life. But the philosophy and outlook on life of our economic system is a philosophy which, both implicitly and in the actual tragedy of practice, denies to human beings as such any right to live other than the financial and economic right created by the system itself.

"30,000,000 Outcasts From The Right of Consumption."

"In practice this means for the mass of mankind a right solely dependent upon their attendance being required on productive machinery which constantly develops towards a greater automatism and less need for their attendance. Thirty millions of unemployed people in the industrial countries of the world stand today outcast from the right to consumption under the operation of this system; dependent on public or private charity and mendicancy; and in every such country the financiers of industry are clamoring for the abolition or restriction of the social services through which that public provision is forthcoming, on the ground that such a distribution of maintenance to those whom the economic system no longer needs to hire, puts, by rates and taxes, a crippling burden of unnecessary costs of production upon industrial finance. Implicit in the whole working of the system is this denial of the human right to live."

Think Major Operation Needed to Effect a Cure.

To remedy what he sees as this "absurd" relation between human life and the world's resources, the author maintains that nothing short of a major surgical operation is necessary. No mere patching of the distributive machinery will avail.

"The Industrial Revolution," he writes, "is as yet incomplete and one-sided. It has given us the means of an enormous expansion of the enrichment of life, with no corresponding development in making that enrichment accessible to life. We can produce, but we are prohibited from consuming. If we do produce according to our new powers we throw the world's affairs into confusion by overpro-

Czecho-Slovakian Republic to Legalize The 40-Hour Week

Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia.

THE republic of Czecho-Slovakia, one of the most highly industrialized sections of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire, probably will be the first country in Europe officially to put its workers on the 40-hour week without a commensurate reduction in wages.

After an exhaustive inquiry into the labor situation, the Ministry of Social Welfare has drafted a bill which will shortly be acted upon by Parliament, replacing the existing 48-hour working week with one of 40 hours. A certain amount of opposition has developed on the part of Chambers of Commerce but the attitude of the employers is rather that it should be left to the various industries to reorganize voluntarily their working systems instead of making the shortened week legally obligatory through national legislation.

In a test case before the highest tribunal of the land, the Supreme Court has rejected the appeal of a manufacturer against conviction by the administration for causing his staff to work 12 hours per day instead of eight. (Czecho-Slovakia is one of the countries which has ratified and put into effect the Washington Hours Convention of 1919).

In its review of the labor situation, and the effects of rapid rationalization of Czech industry, the Ministry of Social Welfare's report shows that practically no industry has been exempt from the labor-destroying tendency of machinery. Unemployment, during the last 12 months, has increased 78 per cent—from 337,654 to 601,438. More than 12 per cent of the nation's workers are now idle as against about 7 per cent a year ago. Even though the depression may be overcome and trade revives, Czecho-Slovakia will be faced with chronic unemployment as a result of the thousands of men who have been displaced by the machine the last few years, the report indicates.

The following examples, taken at random and pertaining to various industries, give a fair cross-section of what rationalization has done to Czecho-Slovakian industry:

Glass Works—Installation of machines, each worked by nine persons and each doing the work of 80 to 90 manual laborers, has resulted in 400 men doing the work of 3000 originally employed in one factory. Sheet-glass output has doubled while the number of workers was reduced 40 per cent, resulting in 2000 sheet-glass workers losing their jobs.

Quarries—Every machine introduced replaces 24 workers; in clay pits eight men and a machine now do the work which formerly was done by 60.

Pottery—Machinery has doubled the output of Dutch tiles and at the same time reduced the number of workers by half. Skilled workers are practically eliminated from enamel works, their places being taken by cheaper unskilled workmen and machines.

Metal Works—The largest foundry in Czecho-Slovakia, introducing electrical smelting furnaces, trebled its output and most of its skilled workers were replaced by their assistants, whose wages were doubled; fuel requirements in another foundry were reduced, without affecting production, by 1200 tons of coal per day, thereby throwing between 1200 and 1400 miners out of work.

Machine Works—Output of sewing machines boosted 40 per cent without increasing staff; electrical appliance factory's output gained 600 per cent on same number of women workers.

Wood Industry—One establishment discharged 150 workers while increasing production 35 per cent; box-making machines boosted output 40 per cent.

Textile Industry—Development in mechanical weaving has resulted in more than one-half of total number of home-workers being thrown out of work.

Building Trades—Rationalization, while not reducing the number of workmen has shortened time of construction thereby reducing the number of days worked on structures.

Tobacco Factories—One firm, formerly employing 1570 workmen now operates on 950 and maintains original output. One-half of brewing trade workers have been rendered superfluous as a result of new bottling and conveyor devices.

Convinced that the only way whereby the mass of the population can benefit from rationalization and exploitation of the machine, is through the reduction of working hours and maintenance of existing wage standards, the Ministry of Social Welfare is advocating Government supervision of hours worked—at least for the immediate future.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Dean Rutledge on Federal Charters for American Corporations.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

SINCE the appearance of your editorial of Jan. 10, entitled "Our Business Frankenstein," I have been expecting the sequel which appeared Jan. 23 under the title, "The Remedy for Corporate Abuses."

The purpose of this letter is to call your attention to what may be termed the "St. Louis School of Thought" on the subject of the latest editorial. As early as 1910, the Hon. Frederick Lehmann, in an address before the St. Louis Bar Association, vigorously advocated the substitution of national incorporation for what he termed "the bargain counter" system of state incorporation, and specifically urged that the national system be extended to all corporations engaged in interstate commerce. He pointed to the growing nationalization of industry and to the fact that corporations then sought incorporation in New Jersey, primarily because of the advantage of the financial speculator from the type of privilege then permitted under the New Jersey incorporation laws. He contrasted these privileges with those allowed under the National Banking Act, one cryptic statement being, "No lying shares are permitted."

But even prior to this suggestion, the Hon. Charles Nagel made the suggestion for national incorporation in an address delivered before the Missouri State Bar Association at its annual meeting in Kansas City, Dec. 13, 1907, and this suggestion was repeated in an address before the Kansas City Commercial Club, Nov. 28, 1910. In addition to the considerations mentioned by Mr. Lehmann, Mr. Nagel pointed out the disadvantages of the present system to corporate business. He emphasized the intricacy which results when a corporation of national scope is compelled to deal with numerous regulatory powers. In this address, he stated his conclusion that the "conflicts, the inconsistencies and the embarrassments with respect to interstate commerce alone, are enough to call for the organization of corporations under Federal charters," and advanced the opinion that the problem is "a national one which can be met successfully by Federal authority alone." He went further and, as Secretary of Commerce and Labor, recommended the adoption of a national incorporation act to the House Committee on Interstate Commerce.

While the writer does not know of any instance in which the specific proposal of national incorporation was advocated by the late Judge Priest, your editorial of Jan. 10 indicates that he was thinking along the lines which Messrs. Nagel and Lehmann were following.

More recently, as you know, Robert S. Brookings, inspired perhaps by the previous suggestions of the St. Louis lawyers, advocated national incorporation, but Mr. Brookings went much further in the purpose which he had in view than did his predecessors. As you know, his suggestion was made with the view of using national incorporation as a means of more equitably distributing the industrial income and thus the wealth of the country.

The heart of his policy is summed up in the following statement: "The corporation has with us demonstrated itself as the most efficient organization for the production, distribution and division of wealth and, as practically all of our corporations are conducting either an interstate or an international business, under our Constitution it would seem that Congress has the power to require that such corporations should reincorporate under a Federal incorporation act; which act, while securing to capital a fair return at a fixed rate of interest and dividends, risk considered, would divide all additional profit or accretions in the form of labor shares between the employes (management and labor) in the ratio of their individual contribution, probably as recorded by their wage or salary compensation."

With the details of his plan the writer disagrees in some instances, particularly with reference to that which involves a fixed rate of interest and dividends upon capital shares. However, the general plan proposed is one which has great possibilities for the purpose Mr. Brookings had in mind.

It thus appears that your editorial of Jan. 23 is really the culmination of a series of suggestions which have been made previously by eminent legal and industrial leaders of this city. It should be obvious to anyone familiar with the operation of the present system of incorporation that it has provided the means by which the speculative financier has been enabled to carry out enterprises which could have been accomplished in no other way. The holding company set-up, the stock dividend, the no-par stock device and the legitimatized executive bonus, all of great value to the speculator, have resulted from the present system of state competition for corporate favor. In my judgment, they can be neither eliminated nor regulated effectively through state action. I trust that you will continue to advocate this very concrete and practicable proposal until it shall secure the attention and action of Congress.

WILEY RUTLEDGE, Dean,
School of Law, Washington University.

Provisions of the Glass Banking Bill

In view of the strong opposition to some of the provisions of the Glass bill, its approval by the Senate with only nine opposing votes came as something of a surprise. The large margin of victory is explained in part by the fact that many who were opposed to particular provisions were nevertheless in sympathy with the general purpose of the bill. Highly technical in many of its provisions, it deals with a large number of banking problems. The wide field covered by the bill resulted in bringing together some strange bed-fellows among its critics. Some joined with Senator Long in opposing it on the ground that it was "an attempt to consolidate the control of the money of the country in the hands of a few great interests," but many provisions of the bill are objectionable to those interests which Senator Long fears.

Aside from the amendment limiting the establishment of branches of national banks to those states where banks are permitted to establish branches, the bill as passed is not changed in its fundamentals from the form in which it stood last April. In addition to the branch banking provisions, which attracted most of the public attention in the recent debates, the provisions of the bill might be summarized under four broad heads: those intended to keep Federal Reserve credit out of speculative channels; those providing for the control and inspection of security affiliates and their complete divorce from member banks after a period of five years; those providing for a Federal liquidating corporation to expedite winding up the affairs of closed banks; and those regulating chain banking. In addition, the Secretary of the Treasury is to be removed from the Federal Reserve Board, and the minimum capital requirement for national banks is raised. The provision for an increase in the reserve requirement against time deposits, which was in the original draft of the Glass bill, but which was dropped last April, is also missing from the bill.

While in substantial agreement with its main provisions, there are several points which warrant consideration when the bill is further discussed in the House. Although the original provision, raising the reserve requirement against time deposits to the same as that against demand deposits within five years, was unduly drastic, it was unfortunate that the present requirement of 3 per cent was left untouched. That is too low a figure, particularly in view of the possibilities, which were well exploited during the past decade, of carrying what are virtually demand deposits in the form of time deposits.

The fight over investment affiliates is to a considerable degree a fight over the means of locking the door after the horse has escaped. The damage from their unregulated operation in the past decade cannot be repaired. There is now a strong public distrust of investment affiliates, and many banks have dropped them voluntarily. The Glass bill very properly subjects them to rigid inspection and regulation. However, properly managed investment banking houses have a real economic function to perform, and perhaps it would be better to allow such organizations to continue as affiliates of national banks, subject to proper publicity and regulation. Senator Glass, in proposing the divorce of affiliates in his report to the Senate last spring, admitted there is a "question whether it would be of much service as long as state legislation permits the growth of affiliates with state banks and trust companies."

In this as in so many other phases of banking reform, the problem of national legislation is complicated by the fact that our dual system of banking makes it very difficult for either state or Federal authorities to move much in advance of the other. Nevertheless, the examples of England, Canada and France, none of which has had a bank failure during the depression, must not be lost upon us.

Jeffersonian Grandeur

Shall the Roosevelt inauguration ceremony be elaborate, as Washington society and business interests desire, or simple, as urged by those who consider a display of splendor ill advised in these times? There are two schools of thought on the matter, but they seem to be united in a harmonious straddle in the person of Senator Robinson of Arkansas, chairman of the joint committee in charge of arrangements. The inauguration is being planned "with Jeffersonian simplicity," says he; yet, he adds, it will be an event of "tremendous colorful proportions."

Checking back on what Jeffersonian simplicity means as applied to an inauguration, we find that the schedule for the third President ran as follows: Unattended and in plain clothes, Jefferson rode up to the Capitol on horseback. He dismounted, tied his horse to the fence and walked alone into the Senate chamber. There he took the oath of office and delivered his inaugural address. And that was all; there wasn't any more. (The historian we consulted cautiously says that this account is far from sufficiently vouched for, but that it has come to be accepted as "a sort of truth by prescription.") The prescription may need a few additional ingredients in 1933 but, unless it is dropped entirely, it can scarcely be the basis for any spectacle of "tremendous colorful proportions."

Mr. Roosevelt himself has declared for simplicity, and most of the country will agree with him on general principles, aside from the important fact that it is his party. Senator Robinson, however, seems to be in the Hamlet stage, torn between conflicting desires for a tremendously simple and a simply tremendous inauguration.

He Pawned His Watch

The Illinois Historical Society has just discovered that in the period immediately before the Civil War, Ulysses S. Grant pawned in St. Louis for $22 to one J. S. Freleigh, a gold watch.

The record of the transaction has been brought to light by Paul M. Angle, librarian of the society. The watch has disappeared, but the moral is one of the most powerful in history. Grant was an indifferent student at West Point. In the interim for soldiers after the Mexican War, in which he had been a Captain, he retired from the army rather than face charges of excessive drinking at a dull hole of an army post on the Pacific coast.

Returning to St. Louis, where he had earlier married Julia Dent, he tried farming out on the Gravois road. Everybody was thumbs down on Grant, a slow-moving and apparently unambitious fellow, as strange a hiding place for genius as the world has ever known. He often drove into St. Louis and sold wood which he had to cut, though Hercules himself could not have felled some of the tough white oaks that grew along Gravois Creek. He plowed and hoed in the infertile terrain of St. Louis County, trying to raise crops. He went down and out. He had a sale, as all busted farmers do, and retired upon St. Louis in search of a job. At that, he probably was the only Gravois farmer who ever had a gold watch to pawn.

It was not yet certain that Grant could do anything but ride a horse uncommonly well. Unfortunately, there was no Bridle and Spur Club hereabouts in those days, which might have given his prowess its fling. It is often so with young men. Men must find themselves. Some do so early, others late; others never find themselves. Thousands of mute and inglorious Miltons have lived and died, their lips locked, their songs unsung. Grant tried to sell real estate. He made a miserable failure of it, stood around with his hands in his pockets, basked on the sunny side of downtown streets, was ashamed to go home to his wife and children, and withal radiated the woes of all those who cannot cope with the realities of a cruel world. It was not his fault. He was trying to do something he could not do, for which he was unsuited, for which nature had not designed him.

She had greater plans for Grant. When the Civil War came on, the South had most of the West Point talent. The North scurried about for anybody with West Point training. It was glad to get Grant, the drinker, the ne'er-do-well, the busted Gravois farmer, the down-and-out St. Louis real estate salesman, the man who had pawned his watch in St. Louis two days before Christmas, in 1857, to buy presents for his children; the man in whom nobody had any faith, a misfit, a soldier undone by the humdrum of peace. Thousands of such people have faltered thus, waiting for their opportunity; doubtless millions have perished, failing to find it.

Grant was over at Galena, Ill., when the army reclaimed him. He had gone there to start all over again in some other business. He would, of course, have failed in that, too, just as he had failed to raise crops on the hardscrabble of Gravois road, just as he had proved himself so inept at selling real estate. But the army needed him. How badly it needed him it did not realize at the time. It had to learn what Lincoln learned: that after all the proud peacocks of the military had proved their shallowness, the North was to turn to the lowliest of them all, Grant.

Grant, whose confidence in himself rose serenely over society's estimate of him, insisted that he was capable of commanding a brigade, but they made him a Captain. It was not long before he began to win little victories. In the course of time, he electrified the North with his exploits at Forts Henry and Donelson. He amazed the military observers from other nations with his strategy at Shiloh, his terrific fighting spirit, the superiority complex which led him to believe that he was always the stronger, that the enemy was always worse off than he was. His doggedness at Vicksburg, the wretched plotting back of the lines which sought to discredit him, aroused Lincoln, as it had already aroused Sherman. The President acclaimed him, and Grant became the man of the hour.

Lincoln's answer to all the clamor against Grant was to render thanks that he had one General who would fight. Fight was his middle name. He smashed up everything. He was a human juggernaut that nothing could stop. The President took him out of the West and placed him in charge of the Army of the Potomac. Grant ended the war. He went after Lee in the same hammer-and-tongs fashion that had characterized his military career in the West. So came Appomattox.

The grateful country made him President, for which he was no more fitted than he had been for social agriculture out in the aristocratic neighborhood around Sappington. Grant stood in military history with the great. The world has not yet got done writing about him, reading about him, wondering about him. It never will get over it. The reason is plain. Grant had a gift; but until he was given an opportunity to improve it, he was a misfit in life, a failure, a grief to himself, the laughing stock of society.

The moral is that we should be slow to condemn one another's ineptitude. Since we have no means of knowing one another's talents, the inner life in all men which is hidden from prying eyes, how can we be sure that they are what they seem? Let us not forget that Grant, who was later to stand upon the pinnacle of fame, had stumbled into a pawnshop in St. Louis on a winter's day only eight years before and pawned his watch.

A Japanese Hero

Yukio Ozaki, at 73, is going home from Europe to Japan, and without an outward tremor, though he knows his death warrant is signed. Having urged drastic disarmament and American intercession in the Sino-Chinese controversy, the veteran leader is marked for assassination by the patriotic groups who disagree with such views. Political murder is a recognized practice in Japan, and this potential victim accepts it as the public man's "best form of death." He addresses a poetic tribute to the slayers who wait for him, saying: "Praise be for the men who may attempt my life, if their motive is to die for their country." And he hopes they will strike, if strike they must, when he is speaking on national policy in the Diet. His attitude cannot be dismissed as empty bravado, for past attacks on Japanese liberal leaders have disclosed their attitude as the same stoical fatalism, in the best tradition of the Samurai.

Few statesmen of the Western world, we fear, would be found adhering to unpopular tenets against such odds as these Japanese face. Political defeat or social ostracism or loss of pecuniary advantage are the greatest perils that threaten the Occidental leaders who oppose mob feeling. Even then, there is but rarely a shining figure who dares push against the current of popular sentiment. But in Japan, where their lives are at stake, a few such anti-militarists as Ozaki hold their course without wavering. "I would like a death which may prove a lesson to posterity," he says. And this hope may be realized, for humankind has a way of recognizing the wisdom of its leaders only after they have become martyrs.

"Of Making Many Books"

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

For Those Who Care

HUMAN ASPECTS OF UNEMPLOYMENT AND RELIEF. By James M. Williams. (The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C.)

IN his opening address at the White House conference on child health and protection in November, 1930, President Hoover remarked: "The ill-nourished child is in our country not the product of poverty; it is largely the product of ill-instructed children and ignorant parents." In May of last year, Secretary Wilbur, addressing the National Conference of Social Work, stated that the depression is "not so serious as many suppose," that "civilization is broken out with hives which irritate and bother us."

It is the ruling class mentality that is vocal in these utterances, and anyone who cares to know how much that mentality lacks for competent leadership in the present crisis should read the volume listed here. The book will not be conspicuously displayed on news stands, and even if it were so, those who need most to read it have not the $2.50 that it costs. It can be had at the Public Library, no doubt; and if the general public could know how deeply vital to its interests the subject matter of the work really is, the Public Library would be overwhelmed with requests for the book. But this will not happen for various reasons, all of them pathetic.

All that can be done for this truly precious book is to urge its vital importance upon that minority which, in no spirit of condescension, sincerely cares about all human beings; which keenly desires to know and understand; and which must give us our leaders when the time comes.

Dr. James M. Williams is professor of economics and sociology at Hobart College; but, what is far more important in considering the work here noted, he is a relief worker with wide experience. What is more important still, in the preparation of the present work he has had the assistance of various Federal and state departments, of numerous national and state organizations devoted to social welfare work, and of a large number of individuals engaged in such work. There can be no question that his presentation is authoritative. Furthermore, little or nothing of the polemical spirit has been allowed to creep into the work, which is, by its very nature, and without recourse to commentary, a most terrible indictment of our planless society and its putative leaders.

So long as a work bearing on the social question involves abstract thinking, it is possible for readers to escape the most cogent argument by fleeing into the foggy realm of personal opinion. They just don't agree with the author, and that's all. But here we are confronted with the well-attested brutal fact about the unemployment situation and its ghastly meaning to millions upon millions of men like the luckiest of ourselves, of women like our mothers and wives, of children like our children, kid ourselves as we may.

Case after case, each well attested as representative and not at all exceptional, is set forth by way of forcing into the consciousness of the reader a burning awareness of the fact that millions of potentially useful people are now living in hell by no fault of their own; that no amount of charity can save them, even though charity were adequate for physical needs, since even the poverty-stricken human being is rather more than an empty belly and a coatless back.

If the book were written with less reserve, as it well might have been, considering the outrageous character of the subject matter, its effect would have been less overwhelming. But there is an impressive moderation in the author's manner that gives to his utterance the character of a fateful whisper in a vast silence.

If anyone who reads this book shall feel even briefly, in a flash of understanding, that each of the 16,000,000 children it considers is in very truth his own; if sleep does not come to him so quickly that night; if the meals he eats thereafter and the common decencies of life that he usually accepts without thought seem to leave an unfamiliar lack; then he may know that he is at least beginning to qualify for a fellowship in that minority that one day must rescue us.

ALONG THE ARKANSAS. By Anna Lewis. (The Southwest Press, Dallas, Tex.)

THE early history of the region drained by the Arkansas, the Cimarron and the Canadian rivers seems to have been overlooked by Western historians, and the lack has been supplied in the present volume by Dr. Lewis, who is professor of history in the Oklahoma College for Women. Her story, beginning with the earliest expeditions into the country and ending with the year 1800, naturally centers about the Old Arkansas Post, and is based largely upon the diaries and letters of the commandants of the post. The work has been accomplished at the cost of much patient research, and is unquestionably valuable.

NARRATIVES OF THE TRANS-MISSISSIPPI FRONTIER:

Hall J. Kelley on Oregon; edited by Fred Wilbur Powell.
The Emigrants' Guide to Oregon and California, by Lansford W. Hastings, with an introduction by Charles H. Carey.
Scenery of the Plains, Mountains and Mines, by Franklin Langworthy; edited by Paul C. Phillips.
Scout and Ranger, Being the Personal Adventures of James Pike of the Texas Rangers in 1859-60; edited by Carl L. Cannon.
(Princeton University Press, Princeton, N. J.)

THE Narratives of the Trans-Mississippi Frontier series, now being issued by the Princeton University Press under the general editorship of Carl L. Cannon, is already a notable achievement and promises to become a great one. Up to date, eight volumes have been published, those noted above being the latest to appear. The four earlier volumes are as follows: "Route Across the Rocky Mountains," by Overton Johnson and William H. Winter; "A Journal of the Santa Fe Expedition Under Col. Doniphan," by Jacob S. Robinson; "The Emigrants' Guide to California," by Joseph E. Ware; "The Past and Present of the Pike's Peak Gold Region," by Henry Villard.

All the volumes are reprints of early Western Americana, and most of the items thus made available to the general public are extremely rare, being known only to collectors and to those who have gone deeply into the sources of Western history. Some of the works are produced in facsimile, and in all cases the complete texts of the original works are given in so far as they refer to activities in the Trans-Mississippi region.

The editors of the various volumes have apparently performed their tasks with accuracy and thoroughness. At any rate, one student of Western history has taken the trouble to check many of the editorial notes, rejoicing to find no error. Also, the editorial introductions reveal a masterly grasp of the period under consideration.

All of the works here noted are important to the student of Western history, and all should prove interesting merely as stories to anyone who cares for adventure.

PAUL BUNYAN: A FOLK COMEDY IN THREE ACTS. By Richard L. Stokes. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York City.)

IF this extravaganza were adequately produced as a musical comedy in keeping with the author's intention, it could hardly fail to prove an unqualified "wow." It is that even in cold print; and if its settings were ingeniously visualized and its hilarious audacities were cleverly winged with song, the effect ought to be devastatingly funny. Also, the Paul Bunyan epos is sufficiently well known to insure the right receptive mood in an audience; and in a time of universal worry, disillusionment and doubt, the preposterous, guffawing character of the show, with its shrewd allusions to a preposterous state of affairs, should make it a highly effective means of momentary release into a childish world of Gargantuan laughter.

Mr. Stokes confesses that he has handled the Paul Bunyan story in his own sweet way, "throwing new light" on the gigantic hero of the logging world. He insists, and the reader will agree gladly, in view of the result achieved here, that it is the duty of "all upright bards who address themselves to the saga" of Paul and his famous Blue Ox, Babe, to improve and strengthen the tale at will, exaggeration being impossible.

In the present version, Paul appears with his ox in a Lilliputian landscape, the Rocky Mountains scarcely reaching his knees. The weather is fearfully cold and Paul is lonely. He therefore creates the race of little logging men with a flat and bids Spring to "youthify the prairie."

Big doings get under way at once, and Paul, the grotesque playboy of the world, takes on a symbolic significance as the very spirit of the late industrial prosperity. "Bigger and better" is his slogan, and the little race of men goes hog-wild in a delirium of production. The result is much what happened to us, only that in the Stokes version the ludicrous nature of the affair is unconcealed.

There are indications that Mr. Stokes is no slouch as a social philosopher, considering the manner in which he introduces the sex question along with the industrial madness; and there may be something more than a comic opera motif in Paul's lamentable fall from gianthood.

Also, there may be something more than crude fun—there may be even prophecy—in Paul's rehabilitation as a wiser giant after his adventure in henpeckery, not to mention his disillusionment as an international banker.

Mr. Stokes is well known in St. Louis. From 1903 to 1914, he was a member of the Post-Dispatch reportorial staff, and music and drama critic from 1914 to 1926. His musical comedy, "Merry Mount," has been accepted for production at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

COMMERCE CHAMBER BACKING TWO BILLS

Favors Auto Drivers' Examinations and Official State Bar.

Passage of two proposals pending in the Legislature, one to incorporate all lawyers of Missouri into an official State Bar and the other for a mandatory automobile driver's license, with a fee, is advocated by the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce. The committee has acted on recommendation of the chamber's State Legislation Committee.

A subcommittee on legal reform, headed by Earl F. Nelson, studied the State Bar bill. It reported that the measure would enable Missouri's lawyers to enforce standards to raise the level of their profession and free it from causes of criticism. Laymen, the subcommittee said, have been inclined to blame the bar as a whole for misconduct of some individual members and for failure to improve and simplify and reduce the cost of civil and criminal justice.

These problems could not be solved adequately by the bar itself, for lac kof power, the report continued, but the proposed law would rectify the situation. The Missouri Bar Association has advocated the bill.

A subcommittee on automobile liability insurance, headed by Terry W. Allen, made a detailed study of the effectiveness of drivers' license laws in other States, thoroughness of drivers' examinations, cost of administration and other factors. This group reported that drivers' license statutes making examination of drivers mandatory resulted in lower accident rates than where examinations are optional. It said a small fee charged for examinations should not be burdensome or prohibitive for drivers.

On the basis of experience elsewhere, mandatory examinations and licensing would save about 30 lives in Missouri annually, the subcommittee estimated. Placing a monetary value of $11,000 on each life, the group gave the saving as $330,000.

Let us hear first from Senator Black, the wiry, alert, youthful and dynamic Alabaman who demonstrated that a Southerner was capable of offering one of the most radical legislative proposals that has been advanced as a cure for the depression.

"All the arguments against my bill go back to the majority opinion in the case of Hammer versus Dagenhart," he said. "It is well to remember that that opinion was rendered nearly 20 years ago. Conditions have changed since then. In a later case the court hinted broadly that if given an opportunity to review that case it would reverse itself. In fact, it virtually invited Congress to resubmit the question. That has never been done. It is interesting to observe that of the nine Justices who participated in the first case, only three remain (Vandevanter, McReynolds and Brandeis). There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that the present court would uphold the child labor law.

"Inherently Harmful."

"Assuming, however, that the opponents of the bill are correct, and that the old precedent would stand, the court has plainly declared that Congress has power to exclude from interstate commerce anything which is 'inherently harmful.' Now it must be admitted that the greatest menace to this country is unemployment. It must further be admitted this danger can be met only by dividing the available work among those who are willing and able to work. Consequently, I contend that commodities produced under conditions which insure a continuation of unemployment are just as 'harmful in themselves' as adulterated food or lottery tickets.

"It is possible that the court might proceed from the position that if the harmful consequences could be averted without invoking the Interstate Commerce clause, some other method should be adopted. But it is perfectly obvious that the 30-hour week cannot be established by the action of individual states. Even though a large majority of the states acted toward that end, their will would be nullified by a selfish minority. It must be done on a nationad scale if it is done at all. Economic chaos is the only alternative."

The same contentions were advanced in somewhat different form by Senator Norris, veteran chairman of the Judiciary Committee and ardent supporter of the bill.

In view of the present legislative situation, there is no prospect that Congress will act on the measure during the present session. Members, however, have been amazed by the extraordinary amount of attention which the bill is receiving from labor and employers throughout the country, and there is a favorable prospect of action during the special session which President Roosevelt is expected to call in April.

duction and the world's people into resourcelessness by unemployment.

"We can turn on ample supplies in such measure as to make poverty a ridiculous anachronism, but we have provided for ourselves no channels of carriage and irrigation by which to pass the supplies on into the life of the world. The clear and imperative demand for such a situation is a revolution on the distributive side corresponding to the accomplished revolution on the productive side. Without such a corresponding new order in distribution, the new order in production remains thwarted and ineffective for its purpose of the enrichment of life. . . .

Time to Shake Off Habit of Taking Things for Granted.

"The whole economic system labors along with such constant conflict and friction, such a shocking want of adjustment to the needs of life, such incapacity to translate natural plenty into human satisfactions, as to set up at any rate a strong presumption of inherent defects rather than a simple want of lubrication. The fact that we have such a problem at all as poverty is an age of power-producible plenty—that we have it, not in exceptional conditions and limited areas subject to special difficulties, but persistently and everywhere as the normal established condition of life for the mass of mankind—goes to strengthen the presumption of something at fault in the essentials of our economy, and not merely in its occasional aberrations and localized conditions of maladjustment."

The time has come, he writes, when we must shake off the habit "of taking the general scheme of things for granted," and must do some fundamental questioning.

"We have, I submit," he says, "come to one of those hours in human history when the facts of experience are implacable in leaving us no other alternative; an hour when the future of civilization depends upon our release from that inertia of the mind, upon our readiness to uncover and decide a fundamental issue. . . .

"Quite incontrovertibly and beyond the need of further proof, the conditions in which we have to live our economic life have been profoundly changed. Power production has made a clean breach of continuity in the economy of human living . . . it has substituted other powers for the power of human labor as the energy of production; and that substitution has entirely and fundamentally changed the character of man's struggle with nature for sustenance. . . .

"What Is Ludicrously Called Over-Production."

"Quite incontrovertibly and beyond the need of further proof, our economics of ownership and distribution do not allow us either to use these powers to full capacity or to assimilate into human life the product of such cramped usage of them as it does allow. Under its operations, a degree of production far short either of the capacity of the new powers or the human need for satisfactions becomes what is ludicrously called overproduction, by which our whole economic life is repelled from further production and periodically thrown into confusions and bankruptcies.

"Quite incontrovertibly and beyond the need of further proof, this so-called overproduction is not overproduction in relation to the world's needs. It is the permission given to the world's people to consume which is restricted; not the capacity for production which outruns the human need for consumption.

"The facts, the incontestible facts, establish beyond a doubt that what is wrong with our economics of ownership and distribution is not merely a want of adjustment in detail which can be remedied, but a basic and essential incompetence to implement the needs of civilization under power-producing conditions. And we must continue our scrutiny with a complete assurance that it will be futile unless we continue it with minds tuned to the uncovering and decision of fundamental issues."

"Ownership of All Human Opportunities to Live."

Henderson's argument is so closely woven that it is extremely difficult to do it full justice in a summary. We do no violence to his thought, however, in singling out his remarks on the failure of purchasing power under the present system. The basic fact is that system, he points out, is "the fact of private property in the natural resources of the world." No factor enters into production, or can enter into it, other than human effort applied to natural resources. All human sustenance depends on the access of human effort to natural resources.

"Ownership of the natural resources of the world is, therefore," he proceeds, "ownership of all human opportunities to live; and carries with it the power of controlling the producing activities of mankind. . . .

"And the terms are perfectly simple. In all the history of mankind under this system of ownership, access to the natural resources of the world has only been permitted to the working life of mankind on terms of service to the owner. The form of that service has varied from slavery to employment for hire; but the central fact in it, by which its essential character is revealed and defined, has always been that all the product belongs to the owner, less the 'cost of production' represented by the maintenance of the slave or the hire of the worker. Such ownership, therefore, is the governing fact in the distributive system of any social order in which it exists, and is the power by which the producing activity of a community can be and is held in tribute."

AUTHOR IS EDUCATOR AND PIONEER IN ENGLISH SOCIALIST MOVEMENT

LONDON, Jan. 28.

FRED HENDERSON, author of the recent book, "The Economic Consequences of Power Production," is an English educator in the middle sixties. He lives at Norwich, where he was born, and for many years has been particularly interested and active in social and municipal work. He is Governor of the Norwich Grammar School, which is the school that Nelson attended and one of the oldest educational foundations in England. He is also chairman of the local library.

Mr. Henderson and his wife, who died only a few days ago, did a great deal of research and public work together. They were the first married pair in England who happened to serve as members of the same City Council.

He was one of the pioneers in the English Socialist movement and is now active in Independent Labor party circles. He is considered in Great Britain notable for nts able exposition of the principles of Socialism. He was one of the first of British Socialists to relate the condition of modern mass production to the classic Socialist doctrine. He has eschewed national public office, and has preferred the more private career of author and publicist, partly, his friends say, because his mind is unsympathetic to party discipline. He has been a free lance journalist about 30 years. Another book dealing with the economic problems of the day, "Money Power," was published last year.

Under this system, he continues, the life of the world was carried on with comparative stability in the ages before power production. Then came the industrial revolution, and the conditions of man's struggle with nature for sustenance were completely altered. The new forces at man's command "dropped into place as a new endowment for ownership, a new instrument for collecting tribute on a larger scale than before, in accordance with the established order of things."

New Development Out of Line With Master-and-Serf Society.

But how is the purchasing power of the masses affected? The author explains:

"What is now happening, on a world-wide scale and with growing urgency, is that this fundamental change which science has made in the basic life conditions of mankind is revealing itself, in one swift development after another, as incompatible with the old master-and-serf structure of society. The new powers are too great, too explosive in their reactions upon the old social relationships and the old limited purposes men saw in life, to be controlled and applied to life for the narrow purposes of a class society.

"Their immense productivity gets out of hand for such purposes; it becomes overproduction, glut, congestion beyond the capacity of feudalism in ownership and differential class distribution to absorb; and throws us into trade depression after trade depression by sheer weight of accumulated goods which cannot be marketed for lack of the purchasing power which a class society necessarily fails to distribute to its serfs and hirelings, with all the wars of the modern world as incidents in the growing confusion.

"Over a period, the outside markets gave some easement; but the discomfort, manifest from the first, has now grown intolerable, and the instability has become a prevalent terror of insecurity not only for nations and individuals everywhere, but for the future of human civilization itself. . . .

"Already civilization has been dragged to the edge of the abyss in a world war which was only the confusion of trade rivalries in the scramble for outside markets come to a head; and all the conditions for its repetition are still fermenting in the life of the world in the surpluses of products which the private ownership of our opportunities to live takes in tribute and cannot get absorbed into use and the healthy nourishment of mankind. The world war has so far been its worst paroxysm of indigestion. And there is a certain appropriate symbolism in the fact that the next one will, according to all prediction, be in the nature of a universal belching out of poisonous gases."

Inequality of Distribution of Purchasing Power.

Again as to purchasing power:

"The distribution of purchasing power is not a distribution to all consumers according to the flow of wealth available for consumption or the ratio of production to population. It is the unequal distribution prescribed by our system of ownership; maintenance allowances for the working life of the nation and the surplus to ownership. . . .

"The distribution of purchasing power on a huge scale to a small proportion of a vast population does not and cannot make up the deficiency of the market resulting from a meager scale of distribution to the general mass of the population; any more than a few oases can turn Sahara into a fertile land. . . .

"For there is, so far as the ordinary needs of life are concerned, a limit to possible personal consumption. No man can eat breakfast for a thousand. If a thousand people are going without eggs, it does not restore the equilibrium of the egg market to give one man purchasing power for a thousand eggs. He cannot do it; even 20 eggs at a sitting is the sort of meal only occasionally attempted by sportive and adventurous persons doing it for a wager. He cannot wear out more than a limited number of shoes, or, indeed, carry any of his physical satisfactions beyond repletion.

Says Tribute to Ownership Obstructs the Flow of Goods.

"There are other and more expansible appetites and indulgences in comforts and luxuries; but when he has added all these to his consumption, he can go but a very little way towards making up for the deficient marketing powers of millions of other people. With the utmost scale of luxurious living on the ownership side, the inability of the general population to consume more than a fraction of what our output ratio to population would allot to them remains unbalanced by the ability of a few to consume to repletion.

"Since a system of production for the provision of tribute to ownership necessarily obstructs the flow of goods to the general population so as to leave an unmarketable surplus on the hands of the tribute-receiving class," the author says, "all this scramble for outside markets follows in unavoidable sequence; with its incessant extension of the system until the bulk of the world's populations are brought under it and rendered incapable of consuming their own product or its equivalent by reason of having to surrender it in the tribute payments to which all this capitalization by investments abroad is the setting up of fresh title, resulting in further surplus unmarketable within the area of the system.

"The notion that this can continue in perpetuity from generation to generation is, of course, absurd. The world is wide, but it is not illimitable. . . .

"A system dependent upon this sort of expansion does not come to a final stop by the complete exhaustion of outside markets. Long before any such finality is reached there is the period of closing in towards finality; a period of increasing strain and confusion; and the point of breakdown is reached under that strain. It is through the confusions of such a period of closing in towards exhaustion that the life of the world under the present regime of ownership is now passing."

"Monkey Tricks of Gold and Credit Manipulation."

The confusinns of the period have been aggravated, the author says, by manifold stupidities, such as "the mere monkey tricks which have been played with prices by the manipulation of gold and credits," but the fundamental trouble would remain if all these were eliminated.

"It is on the tremendous current of the essential finance of the system itself," he says, "that the affairs of the world are swept along into their present confusion; and the accessory stupidities are no more than eddies in it."

Summing up his indictment against the system, he writes: "The thing, surely, comes to its last delirium of unreason, its miracle of incompetence to serve the needs of human life, in this—that in a world in which everything necessary and desirable, everything that can add to the comfort and joy and fullness of human life, can be produced in greater abundance than men have ever known before, the universal exhortation to the people of the world is that we must economize, must consume less, must have our individual wages cut down and our social services reduced, so as to meet the charges fastened upon the world's life by this overwhelming indebtedness to the finance of ownership; charges of which those who receive them can make no human use, but can only reinvest them in the creation of still further charges."

Defines What the Capital Used in Industry Really Is.

The author makes the point that the "capital" employed in industry is simply "what the working life of the community eats and drinks and wears and lives upon in what should be the normal course of the flow of the world's resources from the world's activities into the world's use."

These resources are intercepted by ownership and "doled out in maintenance allowances" to the workers employed in production. This, in brief, says the author, is the finance mechanism by which the purposes of ownership are achieved.

Therefore, he continues, if the surplus were put into consumption among the millions displaced by power production, the whole basis of private ownership economics would be smashed. "For all such consumption is a cost of production in the finance of the ownership system; whether such rights of consumption are distributed in actual wages, or by public funds raised by taxation to effect its distribution outside the wages system, or by printing paper money and issuing it as legal tender, or in any other imaginable way. Whatever the form of it may be, any distributed right to consume means that ownership has to part with the financial value of the product so consumed. In brief, its 'capital' disappears; for capital is nothing but the product on which the world lives.

Thinks Distribution of Buying Power Is Not the Way Out.

"In parting with it by payment of wages, ownership does not lose it; because that is a payment made in the course of further production replacing the consumed product. But in parting with it by any of these other forms of distribution, the 'capital' of ownership vanishes into consumption with no replacement to the owner; and the finance of production is smashed up by unproductive costs which leave no surplus, no tribute, no profit accruing to ownership in return."

Hence the conclusion that a simple distribution of purchasing power is not, by itself, the way out of our plight. Any attempt to distribute adequately would bring production to a standstill "by destroying the finance of its capitalization."

"Ownership," the writer continues, "points out with quite unanswerable logic as against such proposals, that they all mean increasing the costs of production to the point of unprofitableness; and that with such unprofitableness, production is checked and employment decreased. We should, if we attempted to extend such a policy of simple distribution without regard to its effect on distribution, find ourselves with nothing left to distribute. . . . Always assuming that we leave the conditions and the control of production itself as they are, this is the checkmate to any merely distributory way out of our difficulties; the way of any social reform which accepts the present finance of production as the basis of things.

Declares Poverty Is Price of Continuing Private Ownership.

"For its continuance at all, ownership has to demand from the working life of the world an acceptance of poverty as a condition of being employed at all; lower wages or no work; reduced costs of production or no production. And to that demand, which is in itself so incompatible with all the implications of a new age of abundance as to be an abdication of reason from human affairs, there is no answer whatever to be given once we accept the ownership and control of the world's producing activities for private profit as the governing principle of social organization.

"The consequences in distribution follow automatically; they are those 'inexorable and inevitable laws of political economy' of which we hear so sterny whenever we blaspheme against the inhumanities of the system; the laws by which, once you assume the system itself to be inevitable, its consequences in human life follow inevitably. As they do.

Social Control of Production Called the Only Remedy.

"And with that we get to the essential conflict between the economics of ownership and the implications of power production in human life.

"What the new powers offer us is the release of the general life into leisure and wealth and opportunity; and that release must mean a distribution of our abundance into general consumption; a distribution which, as we see, the whole procedure of the system works to render impossible, under menace of the collapse of production if it is attempted.

"There is only one conclusion from all this. It follows with clear certainty that such a distribution can only be made through a new social control of production, planned for use and consumption according to the world's needs.

"That is the way out, and there is no other."

LEAGUE AID FOR RUMANIA

Financial Adviser to Be Named; No International Loan.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Jan. 28.—The League of Nations Council, with the approval of Rumania, has adopted a plan of financial assistance for that country described as a departure in League co-operation.

The Council will name a financial adviser to collaborate with Rumanian officials on a plan for financial reform which will be the basis for Rumania's economic reconstruction. The new feature lies in the fact that there is to be no international loan. Heretofore when the League assigned a financial adviser it was to supervise a loan.

Suggests Congress Meeting Date.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Fixing the date for the convening of the second annual session of Congress under the new "lame duck" amendment on the first Monday in October was asked for today in a bill by Senator Dill (Dem.), Washington. The amendment provides that every session shall begin on Jan. 3 of each year, but adds a provision that the date for the meeting of the second session can be fixed by law.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Financial markets were not much interested in adverse corporate news this week.

While there were diverse movements in individual securities, prices in the main held to a fairly even keel. Such developments as appointment of equity receivers for Radio-Keith-Orpheum and Paramount had evidently been anticipated. Talk in important Wall street quarters of a change in U. S. Steel's preferred dividend at the directors' meeting next Tuesday occasioned no surprise, in view of the official warning six months ago that payments from surplus could not continue indefinitely.

Of course, the week's developments were not all of that character. Pennsylvania Railroad ordered a 50-cent dividend, the first in a year. Delaware & Hudson omitted its quarterly payment of $1.50, but that was overshadowed by its announcement of acquisition of a 10 per cent interest in New York Central. American Tobacco directors did not vote the extra dividend.

While scattered selling appeared in shares from time to time, rails had several intervals of strength, and the price average of 90 representative issues ended the week at 55.2, off only 1.2 from a week previously. At the same time, bonds worked irregularly higher; the price average of 60 representative corporate isses advanced .2 of one point to 71.

Commodities in Main Hold up Well.

Commodity prices in the main held up well. Wheat and cotton futures ended the week virtually unchanged from last Saturday. Moody's index of 15 staple raw commodities, while it has eased somewhat in the past fortnight, is still a little above the low level reached early in the month.

The stock market remained sluggish. It has not experienced a 1,000,000-share day since Jan. 11, while traders continue to adopt a watchful waiting attitude. Price movements in recent weeks have been more selective than usual. Tobaccos lost ground in pronounced fashion, despite good earnings in 1932. Some of the food stocks were heavy. Oils have held up fairly well, in view of the recent slashing of the petroleum price structure. Utilities sagged in spots, but seemed not much affected by Niagara Hudson's dividend cut.

Rails gave the best performance of any major group. Steels were under some pressure, as Behtlehem reported a slightly bigger deficit for the fourth quarter than the third but President Grace pointed to the comparative stability of production during the last half of last year.

Downward Drift at Week-End.

Stocks found price currents drifting downward today and the list closed with a fractional average loss after two dull hours. Sales totaled only 300,075 shares.

Moderate pressure against United States Steel issues, reflecting published report intimating that the preferred dividend would probably be revised at next Tuesday's directors' meeting, brought a little selling in other sections of the industrial division, especially toward the close. Rails, which had been fairly steady into the second hour, also eased, but their losses were small.

Steel preferred reacted a couple of points and the common was down a little more than one. Wall Street has regarded a change in the senior equity's dividend as inevitable in view of the protracted decline of earnings; the corporation itself served notice six months ago that future action on the payment would have to be governed by income, but in the autumn, a regular disbursement was ordered.

American Telephone and Borden, whose dividend meetings occur in the near future, were rather heavy. Telephone's loss was a point. American Can, Westinghouse, Case, Goodyear, Union Pacific, United Carbon and Santa Fe also declined in the neighborhood of a point. Otherwise, losses tended to fractions. Tobacco still looked heavy.

Freight Loadings Off.

The decrease in freight loadings for the week ended Jan. 21 was 9888 cars, total volume being 11.6 per cent under the corresponding 1932 period; a year ago, incidentally, there was a similar decline from 1931. Railroad bonds were irregular, though narrowly so. Shares of New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Canadian Pacific averaged half a point off. Delaware & Hudson was steady. New York & Harlem, a member of the New York Central family, jumped 8 points on a few odd lot sales.

Forecasts of steel production for next week pointed to the probability that some further improvement would be experienced.

Sterling rallied the better part of a cent, but ended the week about a cent and a half under its Tuesday high.

The British Ambassador's call on President-elect Roosevelt, as well as his scheduled trip to England, may have influenced the advance, since speculators and others have been interested in progress of the Anglo-American debt negotiations.

HINTED U. S. STEEL PREFERRED DIVIDEND MAY BE CHANGED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Wall Street's interest in the dividend meeting of the directors of the United States Steel Corporation next Tuesday was heightened today, when it was stated in authoritative sources that the public should be prepared for a change in the $7 annual rate on the preferred shares.

It was felt in Wall Street banking quarters that public sentiment should not be much effected by a reduction in the dividend, in view of the fact that recent payments have been entirely from surplus, at a time when large losses were being reported.

Six months ago, directors warned that improvement in business would be essential if the dividend was to be continued, but since then, the company has shown large deficts. Dividends on the stock are cumulative, so any reduction in payments at this time will have to be made up later. The $1.75 quarterly payments have been made regularly since formation of the company in 1901.

Fourth quarter earnings of the company were no better than in the third quarter, leading close students of the business to believe that a fourth quarter deficit, before dividend payments, would be reported in an amount of $20,000,000. Final 1932 figures will be announced after the the directors' meeting.

Not all directors are of the same mind in regard to continuing the present annual $7 dividend rate on the company's 3,602,811 shares of preferred stock, it was reliably reported. To do so entails a quarterly disbursement of $6,304,919, or at the rate of $25,219,676 a year.

The position of Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the board, was stated on July 26, 1931, when he said that surplus of the company had been drained $73,063,548 in the preceding twelve months in order to make up the deficit from operations, the four quarterly preferred payments and one common dividend payment which amounted to $13,054,878.

Trading was quiet and more than half the turnover was in the form of exchanges, mostly from March to later deliveries. Sales 4700 tons, including 2000 in exchanges. March closed .69, May .71, July .75, Sept. .79; Dec. .84; Jan. .84.

L. F. LOREE EXPLAINS DEAL FOR NEW YORK CENTRAL STOCK

Says One Reason Was to Strengthen Delaware & Hudson Consolidation Position.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—One of the reasons motivating the Delaware & Hudson Co.'s purchase of a 10 per cent interest in New York Central Railroad was to protect the former's position in future consolidation negotiations, according to President Leonor F. Loree of Delaware & Hudson. He indicated, however, that the move did not mean his road would oppose the four-system Eastern consolidation plan approved last fall.

Loree also disclosed some further information concerning investment, involving about 500,000 shares at a cost of $10,000,000. "We began buying at 10," he said. "We thought that was the bottom." No thought was given to buying the stock when it declined to 8¾ last June, he said.

Loree indicated he was satisfied that any loss in income to Delaware & Hudson through purchase of New York Central, which is paying no dividend, would be offset by the strengthening of his road's position in future consolidation moves. "It may be three or four years before New York Central resumes dividends," he remarked. "It's anyone's guess as to how rapidly we recover."

SMALL DECLINES SHOWN BY COTTON AT THE CLOSE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—An early decline in cotton today in response to disappointing Liverpool cables and Southern selling was followed by rallies on week-end covering and trade buying.

March contracts rallied from 6.07 to 6.13 and closed at 6.10. The general market closed steady at net declines of one to five points. Spot quiet, 6.25.

The opening was unchanged to two points lower. Southern offerings, light at the start, increased slightly after the call, and this combined with continued March liquidation and some local selling on the early action of the stock market, sent active months about four to eight points net lower.

At 6.19 for May and 6.51 for October, trade buying became more active and prices recovered to about Friday's finals. The close was a few points off from the best under liquidation.

The weather in the South was considered favorable for early crop preparations and the movement, but there were reports of a good spot demand and a firm basis in some sections of Texas.

Liverpool cables reported a quiet market with prices steady on trade calling which had absorbed some selling for Indian account. A cable to the New York Cotton Exchange Service said the turnover of yarn and cotton cloths in Manchester was reported the smallest in many weeks with prices irregular and margins unsatisfactory.

Cotton on shipboard at United States ports was estimated at 191,000 bales against 170,000 last year.

Spot cotton was higher in St. Louis Saturday. Quotations: Low middling, 5.45c; middling, 5.95c; strict middling, 6.20c.

ZINC ORE STOCKS DOWN BUT PRICES ALSO OFF

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., Jan. 28.—Surplus stocks of zinc in the tri-state district were reduced to less than 25,000 tons this week when shipments again exceeded the 8000-ton mark. Production approximated 4600 tons, while the sale was reported at 4440 tons.

Prices dropped $1 a ton as a reflection of weakness in the slab zinc quotations. The range this week was $16@17 a ton. On the other hand, lead was firm with prices remaining unchanged at $30@32.50 a ton.

Demand for slab zinc continued dull. Small amounts of metal, forced on an unwilling market, brought lower quotations.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—All metals were quiet this week, but zinc quotations displayed further easiness in the continued absence of buying interest. Sympathetic influences for the decline were said to be rumor of increased smelting operations and rumors that the international zinc cartel would disband. However, smelters are said to be converting old ore stocks into reserve supplies of metal, while new production is limited. The recent decline in galvanized sheets is being watched for its possible effect in improving demand for zinc.

On the other hand, tin was steadier, owing largely to advances at London and strength in sterling exchange. Partial declines occurred late in the week as domestic demand failed to broaden materially on the upturn. Some improvement in inquiries under the market were reported, but differences in buyers' and sellers' views checked business.

Demand for steel increased moderately from miscellaneous sources and, combined with sustained buying from automobile manufacturers, it was reflected by further gradual expansion in ingot production to an estimated 17 per cent of capacity. Substantial orders for tubular goods developed, but railroads continued to withhold purchases. The price situation was confused following recent declines. Pig iron was quiet and steady.

Copper remained dull and unchanged at 5 cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley. Both buyers and sellers appeared to be marking time; pending developments in other industries, which would affect consumption of finished products. Foreign demand also tapered off after immediate needs were covered.

Lead held steady on a fair movement of metal from smelting to consuming hands. A large part of the demand, however, was said to represent withdrawal of metal against contracts previously placed rather than new business. Orders placed for February delivery are reported to be relatively small thus far.

Antimony was dull. Recent advances in asking prices owing to Chinese export restrictions have failed to attract buying. The Chinese New Yeark holidays accounted for further quietness.

FINANCIAL NOTES

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—General Motors Corporation announces that the number of its employes in the United States increased 12,642 in December. This was the fourth consecutive monthly gain. The rise during that interval was 26,375 and although it was a seasonal movement, the increase was larger than in the same four months of 1931.

Forwarding of American cotton to world mills this week totaled 242,000 bales against 289,000 last year. Movement into sight aggregated 275,000 bales compared with 336,000 a year ago and exports came to 99,000 bales against 187,000.

The New York Stock Exchange has ruled that trading is permissible in defaulted foreign bonds where foreign exchange restrictions make impossible transfer of funds for service on Government, provincial and municipal dollar issues. The regulation applies initially to these bonds: Hungarian Consolidated Municipal Loan 7s and 7½s; Province of Lower Austria 7½s and 6½s; City of Vienna 6s, and Province of Styria (Austria) 7s.

Pig iron sales in this district continue to run at about 700 tons weekly, compared with 2000 weekly a year ago.

Guaranty Trust Co. today received $1,700,000 in gold from Holland and $167,000 from France.

Speyer & Co., as fiscal agent, announced today that it had purchased and canceled through the sinking fund $563,000 bonds of the city of Berlin 25-year 6½ per cent gold loan of 1925. Of an original issue of $15,000,000, there remains outstanding $10,792,000.

SMALL DECLINE IN WHEAT PRICE AT THE WEEK-END

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 28.—The wheat market lost ⅜c at week-end session on the local board. Prediction of moisture was stressed.

The news of day included lower securities market, enlarged demand for Canadian wheat and some bullish railroad comment on wheat abandonment.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ⅛d lower after opening at ⅛d higher.

Winnipeg unchanged to ⅛c net lower.

May wheat opened at 47¾c, down ⅛c, and July wheat 47½c, off ⅛c.

In the cash grain market Saturday wheat was ½@1c lower. No. 2 soft wheat sold late in the session at ½@1c lower prices and a car of No. 1 hard was moved at decline of ⅜c. Trading basis on the soft grain was 2@2½c above the Chicago May figure. Demand was fair. Corn was steady to ¼c higher. A car of No. 3 mixed sold at the advance. Offerings met fair demand. Oats were steady to ½c lower and in fair demand.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Sales of cash grain made on the floor of the exchange today, were as follows: No. 2 red garlicky wheat 48c; No. 1 hard wheat, 49½c; No. 3 mixed corn, 23¼c; No. 2 yellow corn, 25½c; No. 3 yellow corn, 23¾c; No. 4 yellow corn, 23c; No. 3 white corn, 24c; No. 3 white oats, 17c; No. 4 white oats, 16½c; No. 2 mixed oats, 17¼c; sample grade mixed oats, 15c.

MOISTURE PREDICTION A BEAR FACTOR IN WHEAT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—Unsettled by predictions of moisture in domestic winter wheat areas Southwest and by uncertainties of legislative developments at Washington, grain prices headed down grade at week-end.

Wheat price setbacks were in the face of railroad reports dealing with domestic winter crop abandonment. Enlarged export buying of Canadian wheat failed to act as a stimulus and was attributed to lameness of Canadian funds.

Wheat closed unsteady ¼@½c under yesterday's finish, corn ⅜@⅝c off, oats unchanged and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to a rise of 15 cents.

Although little moisture was forecast in wheat districts where drouth has been worst, it became quickly evident that buyers were handicapped, and that an incentive had been given to sellers. Downturns of securities put additional weight on wheat values, and from start to finish wheat suffered from lack of any energetic purchase movement here.

All price rallies were checked by commission house selling, nothwithstanding that as a rule the pressure was of a scattered character, and that declines resulted as much from the market's own weight as from other causes, including suggestions of rain or snow Southwest. Winnipeg messages said that in addition to 1,000,000 bought yesterday more than 700,000 bushels of Canadian wheat was taken today for shipment overseas.

Corn and oats were easier in sympathy with wheat weakness and as a result of slackness of Eastern shipping demand for corn.

Provisions reflected some irregularity of hog values.

Cash wheat was unchanged to ½c lower on nominal dealings today. Export business was estimated as well upwards of 700,000 bushels. Receipts, 2 cars; shipping sales, 30,000 bushels.

Cash corn was unchanged. Receipts, 39 cars; shipping sales, 26,000 bushels booked to arrive, 41,000.

SMALL DECLINE IN WHEAT PRICE AT THE WEEK-END

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 28.—The wheat market lost ⅜c at week-end session on the local board. Prediction of moisture was stressed.

The news of day included lower securities market, enlarged demand for Canadian wheat and some bullish railroad comment on wheat abandonment.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ⅛d lower after opening at ⅛d higher.

Winnipeg unchanged to ⅛c net lower.

May wheat opened at 47⅝c, down ¼c, and July wheat 47½c, off ¼c.

In the cash grain market Saturday wheat was ½@1c lower. No. 2 soft wheat sold late in the session at ½@1c lower prices and a car of No. 1 hard was moved at decline of ⅜c. Trading basis on the soft grain was 2@2½c above the Chicago May figure. Demand was fair. Corn was steady to ¼c higher. A car of No. 3 mixed sold at the advance. Offerings met fair demand. Oats were steady to ½c lower and in fair demand.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Sales of cash grain made on the floor of the exchange today, were as follows: No. 2 red garlicky wheat 48c; No. 1 hard wheat, 49¼c; No. 3 mixed corn, 23¼c; No. 2 yellow corn, 25½c; No. 3 yellow corn, 23¾c; No. 4 yellow corn, 23c; No. 3 white corn, 24c; No. 3 white oats, 17c; No. 4 white oats, 16½c; No. 2 mixed oats, 17¼c; sample grade mixed oats, 15c.

MOISTURE PREDICTION A BEAR FACTOR IN WHEAT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—Unsettled by predictions of moisture in domestic winter wheat areas Southwest and by uncertainties of legislative developments at Washington, grain prices headed down grade at week-end.

Wheat price setbacks were in the face of railroad reports dealing with domestic winter crop abandonment. Enlarged export buying of Canadian wheat failed to act as a stimulus and was attributed to lameness of Canadian funds.

Wheat closed unsteady ⅛@½c under yesterday's finish, corn ⅜@⅝c off, oats unchanged and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 15 cents.

Although little moisture was forecast in wheat districts where drouth has been worst, it became quickly evident that buyers were handicapped, and that an incentive had been given to sellers. Downturns of securities put additional weight on wheat values, and from start to finish wheat suffered from lack of any energetic purchase movement here.

All price rallies were checked by commission house selling, notwithstanding that as a rule the pressure was of a scattered character, and that declines resulted as much from the market's own weight as from other causes, including suggestions of rain or snow Southwest. Winnipeg messages said that in addition to 1,000,000 bought yesterday more than 700,000 bushels of Canadian wheat was taken today for shipment overseas.

Corn and oats were easier in sympathy with wheat weakness and as a result of slackness of Eastern shipping demand for corn.

Provisions reflected some irregularity of hog values.

Cash wheat was unchanged to ½c lower on nominal dealings today. Export business was estimated as well upwards of 700,000 bushels. Receipts, 2 cars; shipping sales, 30,000 bushels.

Cash corn was unchanged. Receipts, 59 cars; shipping sales, 26,000 bushels; booked to arrive, 41,000.

MOST LOSSES FRACTIONAL ON THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The curb market wilted a little today, most leading stocks declining fractionally and a few registering losses of a point or more. Transfers totaled 50,000, the same as last Saturday.

Among the dividend payers, which declined fractionally were American Gas & Electric, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Electric Bond & Share, Humble Oil, Niagara Hudson Power, South Penn Oil, Standard of Indiana and U. S. Playing Card.

Price movements among preferred shares were mixed.

The Ford issues were undisturbed by the brief break in production of the domestic Ford plant pending settlement of labor difficulty in the Briggs Body Works. The Ford of Canada "A" shares, Ford of France and Ford, Ltd., were steady.

Stock Loaning Premiums.

GERMAN ISSUES WEAK ON THE BOND MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Weakness of German issues, following the resignation of Chancellor Von Schleicher as head of the Cabinet, was an unsettling factor in the bond market today and prices generally failed to make any progress.

Trading activity was a little more than normal for a Saturday short session, sales totaling $6,123,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans was unchanged. On the week, however, this average was up three-tenths of a point at 71.

Although selling of the Germans was of small volume, losses ranging from fractions to more than four points were suffered by the Reich 5½s and 7s, together with leading State, municipal and corporate bonds. Other foreign loans were irregular.

Improved net operating incomes for December of a number of the important carriers failed to spur the rails to higher levels and the average for this group actually lost three-tenths of a point. Declines of more than two points took place in some of the Canadian issues.

Moderate gains, however, were recorded by some loans of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Bangor & Aroostook, Delaware & Hudson, Kansas City Southern, Missouri Pacific, Reading, Iron Mountain, Texas & Pacific and Union Pacific.

Some utilities steadied, as did some of the industrials. Losses of fractions to more than a point were suffered by maturities of Keith Corporation, Loew's, Paramount-Publix, Paramount, Famous-Lasky, R-K-O and Warner Brothers. Transactions in this section, though, were rather light. United Drug 5s recovered 1⅜, Silesian American 7s were up 2⅛ and Bethlehem Steel refunding 5s and American & Foreign Power 5s gained a point each.

United States Government issues were dull and slightly mixed.

Casey and His Stock Idea

What the Producer Is Trying to Do for the So-Called Legitimate Stage and How He Is Doing it—Good Company With Visiting Stars and Best of Modern Plays To Keep the Theater Alive Until Such Time as the Public Is Able to Buy Seats as They Once Did.

By H. H. NIEMEYER.

WHAT with a dash out West to elevate Hollywood and things like that we never had a chance to see Arthur Casey's company at the Shubert Theater until just the other night. What we saw then was rather surprising—a fine and pleasing performance of "Reunion in Vienna," a comedy in which Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt delighted Theater Guild audiences earlier in the season at the American. The piece, as done by Casey's company, ranks high. In the Fontanne part Elisabeth Risdon, who has batted for the same star in Guild road shows in the past, gave an excellent account of herself and Lawrence Keating, a resident member of the cast, shone brightly in Lunt's role of the something more than half-mad Hapsburg heir. The rest of the company, which included a number of members of the Little Theater of St. Louis, was entirely adequate and the direction of James Hayden resulted in a clean cut and finished performance of the Sherwood play.

And Arthur Casey, working under the many difficulties of a season when the so-called legitimate stage is languishing for want of customers with money to spend for seats, is doing a lot to keep the theater alive against the day when the show world will come back into its own. His manner of doing it should awaken the interest of actors and theater managers everywhere for his venture here in St. Louis is one of the few stock organizations alive from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Casey brought the "guest star" system to St. Louis when he established his Arthur Casey Players at the Orpheum three years ago. He also established himself in the minds of St. Louis playgoers as a manager who combined at once commercial shrewdness, a flair for showmanship and a devotion to high standards of production, and who had a gift for making those who visited his theater his friends.

HE has this season, to be candid, taken advantage of chaotic conditions in the Broadway theater in establishing himself at the Shubert. Players who, three years ago, could not be coaxed away from Broadway, even for road engagements in roles they had created in New York, are now willing and anxious to accept stock engagements—for engagements in stock are reasonably permanent. Current successes on Broadway regarding which, three years ago, no producer would listen to stock managers' advances, are now available—and on reasonable terms.

Thus far the Casey Players have offered "As Husbands Go," which brought Catherine Doucet to St. Louis as its star; "Death Takes a Holiday," in the Philip Merrivale role of which Lawrence Keating made his debut as a star in St. Louis, and the current "Reunion in Vienna." Scheduled to immediately follow, and now in rehearsal, Guy Bates Post will appear in a revival of his greatest stage success, "The Masquerader," and after that Casey has scheduled for presentation—though not necessarily in this order—"The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and "Mourning Becomes Electra," together with "Another Language," "There's Always a Juliet," and Edgar Wallace's last dramatic thriller, "Criminal at Large."

THERE are two things outstanding in the Arthur Casey productions at the Shubert-Rialto this season—the finish of the acting and the finish of the physical production. There is nothing sketchy, nothing hastily thrown together about either. Two weeks of rehearsal, in Arthur Casey's plan, is followed by two weeks of production. And during that production another rehearsal is under way. Back of that finish is, first of all, Arthur Casey, who had his own theater before he was 21—an elongated dynamo, with a smiling personality, who, when not back-stage in the course of the performance is the most interested spectator "out in front." There isn't much those sharp eyes miss. And Arthur's smile has a way of getting what he wants from player or mechanician. James J. Hayden, the director, takes most of the detail off Casey's shoulders.

With his hard hat, his ruddy face, his inevitable cigar, Jim Hayden looks like a railroad conductor, more than like an actor. And yet, he is an actor trained in the support of many stars. Quiet, unassuming, deliberate, he has the technic of the theater at his finger-tips,

ARTHUR CASEY has firm faith that he is laying the foundations of a theater with genuine civic significance—a theater open from summer to summer, with good clean entertainment assured each week until Municipal Opera replaces, out of doors, the living theater within. "That can only be done," he declares, "by a strict adherence to the highest standards in play and in production.

"The stock company declined when the touring company advanced, and the road became a determining factor in the commercial theater. If, as the managers say, the road is passing, the stock and star system must rise again. In no other way can the living theater survive."

The Week's New Films

—:— By NIE —:—

CELEBRATING its fourth birthday the Fox has one of those shows this week running, in point of time, something after the order of "Mourning Becomes Electra" and "Strange Interlude," only there is no supper intermission. Customers of the Fox will do well, then, to take along a little snack to sustain them during the run of the performance for the stage part of the entertainment displays some 200 people and most of them do specialties. There are some old friends in this cast. Jack Sheehan and Doris Patston and Rosemary Deering, from Municipal Opera, are on the bill while the star is Queenie Smith, of musical comedy fame, who had a shot at the Forest Park stage also. Then there is Henry Dunn, Buck and Bubbles, Gomez and Winona, the six Belfords and a stage full of colored entertainers with bands and dancers and hayrides and things like that. Maybe we have overlooked some of the names. There is, for instance, a Fox usher who steps out of his usual character long enough to sing a couple of songs in a tremendously pleasing manner and Al Lyons and members of his orchestra take turns in doing individual acts, but not having the time at our disposal that the Fox has, it is impossible to name 'em all. Just let it be said that the theater presents the longest vaudeville bill in captivity. The picture end of the program is a rowdy story called "Hot Pepper" with the old team of Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen doing their Quirt and Flagg stuff with the help of Lupe Velez and El Brendel. This time the ex-marines are mostly civilians. Once or twice they do get into uniform again but usually they are rum runners and speakeasy proprietors battling for the hearts of the girls in every port. Eventually they drop over to China, enter the Chinese army and carry on their side line with the slant-eyed dames. It's good fun of the rough and tumble sort.

Ballyhoo.

WHOOPEE LUPE has a hand in the fun at the Missouri, too. In "The Half-Naked Truth," she is a carnival show hooch dancer who reaches the dizzy heights of Broadway through the inspired press agent stunts of Lee Tracy. It makes a really swell comedy—the best picture of the week by long odds—and Frank Morgan, late stage star gone Hollywood, adds a lot to the class side of the performance. Eugene Pallette is in it and when laughs are needed he furnishes them. The Missouri's other feature, "Air Mail" is pretty good, too, especially to the fans who happen to be flying minded. It's a story of the boys who just have to see that the mail comes over the mountain, no matter what the weather, and Ralph Bellamy, Pat O'Brien and Russell Hopton furnish the thrills with Slim Summerville providing the comedy as a top mechanic at a desert airport. There is romance of course with O'Brien and Bellamy and Gloria Stuart and Lillian Bond seeing to the love interest. Its all very exciting if you like flying pictures.

Love in Paris.

LOVELY Claudette Colbert and Fredric March have been screen lovers for a long time and in "Tonight Is Ours," at the Ambassador, they continue their romancing and get married, at the end, just as they have done a good many times before. This story is a sort of Graustark affair with Claudette as a princess who runs away to Paris and finds her true love in Mr. March. Everything was going along pretty smoothly with Parisian wedding bells being polished up when Claudette is called back to her native land somewhere to take the job of Queen which had just been vacated. A year later she is about to be assassinated by the democrats when good old Fred shows up and saves her. The populace is so pleased with Fred that they decide that even though he is not of royal blood he ought to be a king and that is the way things wind up.

EDDIE CANTOR'S funny musical, "The Kid From Spain," has been held over for a second week at Loew's since it broke all late records during the past seven days at that house. Starting next Friday Loew's is to show the new Al Jolson film, "Hallelulah."

Don Cossacks Sing In Odeon Concert On Tuesday Night

THE Don Cossacks, 36 former officers of the Czar's army, who have been singing together for 10 years, will appear at the Odeon Tuesday evening to give one of their unusual concerts. It will be the third attraction in the Artist Series.

The Don Cossacks, including their leader, Serge Jaroff, were all interned in a camp near Constantinople after the defeat of Gen. Wrangel's army, with whose fortunes they allied theirs after the revolution. Later they were transported to Sofia, Bulgaria, and there for a time they formed the choir of the Orthodox Church. Their success was marked and, after their release, they banded together for concert purposes and made their first appearance in that capacity in Vienna in 1923. Then they went to England and to Australia. Two years ago they made their first tour of America. They travel on the so-called Nansen passes, issued by the League of Nations to people without a country. They appear in riding clothes and boots, march on the stage in military fashion and then give a stirring musical account of themselves.

Dramatic League to Give "Joan of Arc"

A presentation of Emile Moreau's "Joan of Arc" is announced by the Dramatic League of St. Louis, to be given Feb. 21, 22, 23 and 24, at the Coliseum.

This version of the Maid's story records the authentic replies she gave her questioners and heretofore has been played only in French, but Astrid Kimball's translation will give St. Louis theater goers the first English performance of Moreau's play.

Amateur Movie Exhibit.

There will be an amateur movie exhibit on Thursday and Friday evenings, Feb. 2 and 3, at 8:30 p. m. at the Artists' Guild under the auspices of the St. Louis League of Women Voters. The exhibit is open to any amateur movie enthusiast and prizes will be awarded for the best films.

Kirkwood Little Theater.

The Kirkwood Little Theater will give a benefit for local charity on Feb. 17 at the Kirkwood High School auditorium. Three one-act plays will be presented: "In the Zone," by Eugene O'Neill; "Just Women," by C. C. Clements and "A Minuet," by Louis M. Parker.

Walter Hampden to Come Here in March

WALTER HAMPDEN now is in the midst of another long tour, during which he is presenting two more of his greatest successes, "Caponsacchi" and "Hamlet," and will come to the American Theater for two days, starting on March 6, with both plays. "Caponsacchi" was played by Mr. Hampden in New York to capacity houses over 300 times, thus establishing a world record for the romantic drama by a modern playwright, and subsequently he played it more than 200 times in other cities of the East, and he now is taking it on its first visit to the Far West.

Based on Robert Browning's monumental dramatic poem, "The Ring and the Book," and written by Arthur Goodrich, "Caponsacchi" deals with a celebrated historical murder trial which took place in Rome near the end of the seventeenth century. Its chief character is Caponsacchi, the "warrior-priest" of Arezzo, who bravely attempted to save the beautiful child-wife, Pompilia, from the savage brutality of her husband, Guido Franceschini.

Peggy Joyce Goes To Coast for Film

Peggy Hopkins Joyce arrived in Hollywood last week from New York to start work in a picture entitled "International House." She will head a cast which to date includes Rudy Vallee and Col. Stoopnagle and Budd.

The story, by Lou Heifetz and Neil Brant, is being prepared for the screen by Francis Martin, Walter de Leon and Malcolm Stuart Boylan.

German Musical Play Tonight.

"Der Liebestrank" (The Love Potion), a musical comedy by Rudolf Lothar, will be given tonight by the German Actors Co-operative Association in the German House, 2345 Lafayette avenue. During the intermissions the St. Andreas Mixed Chorus under its director, Julius Ter Vien, will entertain the audience with a number of German songs.

Columbus Club Plays.

The Columbus Club, composed of members of a number of local councils of the Knights of Columbus, the Knights of Columbus Zouaves and a group of young ladies' clubs, will give an entertainment tonight in the club rooms, 3547 Olive street, when a group of one-act plays will be presented by guest players from the St. Louis University Playhouse Club.

Golschmann Will Resume Symphony Concerts Friday

Two "First Time" Novelties to Be Heard This Week on Orchestra Program at the Odeon.

TWO "first time" novelties—one of them from contemporary France, the other more than 150 years old—make their appearance on the program which Vladimir Golschmann presents when he returns to the podium for the next regular concert pair of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at the Odeon next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. They are Louis Aubert's "La Habanera," which French musicians regard as one of the finest musical works that country has produced within the present century, and the Theme and Variations from Mozart's Concertante Quartet for clarinet, oboe, bassoon and horn. The latter will present as soloists Rocco M. Zottarelle, clarinetist, Rene Corne, oboist, Louis Pietrini, bassoonist, and Edward A. Murphy, the orchestra's first horn player. Golschmann's program presents also the "Love Song" and "In War Time" movements from Edward MacDowell's "Indian" Suite, in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the MacDowell Colony which has contributed so much to art in America, and Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor.

Mozart's Concertante Quartet was composed in Paris when Mozart, at 21, went there to conquer the fashionable world—but didn't. Cabals kept this music from a hearing, but although he had to leave the score with the enemy who had betrayed him, the composer carried the music away in his head and it survives as a most interesting example of an eighteenth century concerto for several instruments.

The Tschaikowsky Symphony is that which the composer dedicated to Mme. von Meck, who pensioned him, and with whom he carried on a warm correspondence, although they never met. It was created at the time of his tragic marriage, and immediately thereafter and according to the composer comprehends within its music their remarkable love affair.

Liederkranz Club Concert.

The Liedrekranz Club will give a concert at Alhambra Grotto next Wednesday night with Ernest Herzwurm directing and Corinne Frederick as accompanist. The Steindel Quartet will provide the soloists and the program will be made up of both men's and women's voices.

Lupe Velez in "The Half Naked Truth," at Missouri.

On Making the Movie Stars

Jimmy Dunn, of the Team of Dunn and Eilers, Was Headed for the Brokerage Business When The Stage Called and Then Hollywood Began to Jingle Its Bag of Gold Coins—Sprang Into Fame With His First Picture and Has Kept on Springing.

THERE are a lot of promising young stars on the studio lots out in Hollywood. Many of the young men who are facing the camera for a living got into the game, not as stage-struck youths but because they wanted to act—and because California was calling to the world with a bag full of gold coins. A lot of 'em could have made good in other lines of endeavor but it would have taken a long time to work up to the important money which the movie moguls scattered so lavishly.

Take, for instance, Jimmy Dunn, of the Fox team of James Dunn and Sally Eilers. When Jimmy succumbed to the lure of the cinema the stock brokerage business lost one of its most promising members. At least that's what Jimmy thinks. What the screen has gained is fairly obvious, for Jimmy is now one of the most popular leading men in Hollywood.

When he had finished school Dunn worked in the office of his father, a New York broker. Young Jimmy liked the business but he liked acting better, and between office hours he would slip out to the moving picture studios whose doors carried the "extra wanted" sign. Selling bonds was alright but somehow the founders of that profession had left out the romance. Jimmy found it on the various movie lots.

Jimmy was born in New York City, Nov. 2, 1905. He entered his father's business in 1924 and left it in 1927 to begin his colorful career as an actor.

His first engagement was with a small theatrical troupe playing what show business laughingly calls the "Hinterland." One of the plays called "Night Stick," in which Jimmy played the role of an under-cover cop, was later made into a picture called "Alibi."

Next came a 37-week engagement with a stock company at Englewood, N. J., followed by another long stay with a troupe in Winnipeg, Canada. Upon returning to New York Jimmy got his first big chance when he signed for the leading male role opposite Helen Morgan in the musical show "Sweet Adeline."

IT WAS then that the picture industry began to take notice of James Dunn and he was cast in several "shorts" made in the Eastern studios. These proved successful and led to Dunn's ambitions—a contract with a Hollywood studio.

In May, 1931, Jimmy reported to the Fox West Coast studios and was assigned to the leading male role in "Bad Girl." The picture "made" two prominent stars—Dunn and Sally Eilers. The success of "Bad Girl" found Jimmy in demand for leads in several pictures and he followed with two team pictures with Miss Eilers, "Over the Hill" and "Dance Team," and leads in "Sob Sister," "Society Girl" and "Walking Down Broadway." The team's fourth picture is now in production on the Fox lot, and although it was titled for the moment, "Bad Boy" it is not a sequel to the picture which started the pair on the road to stardom. The new picture will reach the fans before long under the name of "Sailor's Luck."

Jimmy is not the flashily-dressed type of actor. He wears clothes of a conservative color, his only weakness being brightly-colored neckties. Sunday mornings generally find him on the golf links, but he does not boast of his game, which is in the low 80s. In "Society Girl" Jimmy played the role of a boxer but he has not had a glove on since. Two of his ribs were broken by an over-enthusiastic trainer during the filming of this picture.

HE IS superstitious regarding but one thing—whistling in his dressing room. He says two men whistled in his dressing room at Winnipeg and he met with an accident after each performance. On the first occasion he was hurt in a taxicab accident and on the second, he broke another pair of ribs in a fall. There is, needless to say, no whistling around Jimmy's set on the Fox lot.

So far, he has steered clear of matrimony. Living with his mother in a modest home on Sunset boulevard in Hollywood, he enjoys company and frequently entertains his friends. Like many other film stars, Jimmy has become "air minded" and is working for his pilot's license. When he gets that he intends to buy a plane for his own amusement.

He likes working with Miss Eilers, who, in private life is Mrs. "Hoot" Gibson. The two get along excellently together both on the set and off and feel that they have contributed to each other's success.

Right now, Jimmy is strutting around the Fox lots in a sailor's uniform, his role in "Sailor's Luck" being that of a tough but romantic gob from the U. S. S. Missouri.

The United States' Navy played a part in making this picture, a large number of the early shots being made in the harbor at San Pedro, Cal., with real sailors furnishing the atmosphere and battleships, of one sort or another, the background. The Navy is pretty good about that sort of thing and the cinemas find others willing to provide settings, too.

MOTION picture goers who wonder how the producers manage to persuade millionaires to permit them to make use of their magnificent homes, estates, gardens and yachts will be interested to learn that this is accomplished through the agency of the Assistance League of Southern California, a charitable organization which has raised more than $125,000 for the needy by working with the film industry during the past seven years.

The Assistance League, sponsored by Los Angeles society women, maintains a film location bureau, conducted since its inception by Mrs. Lee Wray Turner, who knows nearly every beautiful home or estate throughout Southern California and whenever a film company seeks an unusual location she is consulted.

Many estate owners could not be induced to permit their property to be used for any sum, but when the charity aspect is presented they generally consent. The studios pay the owner, through the Assistance League, a certain amount for each day's work on location. Of the total sum, one-third is donated to the Day Nursery maintained by the League, while the balance may be given by the owner to his favorite charity.

For the picture presenting Kate Smith, Paramount sought a completly equipped farm, situated in a beautiful valley, sixty miles from Hollywood on the 11,000-acre Camarillo ranch. The Camarillo family allowed the film company to make use of the property and on the final day of the location, entertained the entire unit with an old-fashioned barbecue.

BUILDING AND LOAN BILLS UP THIS WEEK

State and St. Louis Leagues to Be Represented at Committee Hearings.

James L. McQuie, president of the Missouri State League of Building and Loan Associations, last night urged members of the league to represent their associations at hearings on two bills before the Missouri Legislature this week.

Besides McQuie, A. G. Kuehner, president of the St. Louis League of Incorporated Building and Loan Associations; E. A. Kamp, secretary of the St. Louis League, and John C. Hall, chairman of the Legislative Committee, plan to attend the hearings.

The House Committee on Building and Loan will meet at the Capitol in Jefferson City Wednesday night at 7:15 o'clock for a hearing on Bill 156, designed to allow State building and loan associations full participation in the Federal Home Loan Bank. Missouri associations at present are limited to partial participation. Morton Bodfish, a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board at Washington, will speak in favor of the bill at the hearing.

The bill, introduced by Representative Charles D. Capelle, Jackson County, has been indorsed by the Missouri State league, and members of both the State league and St. Louis league will urge its passage.

The second bill of interest to building and loan associations will come up for hearing before the Senate Committee on Banks and Banking Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. This bill would abolish the State Bureau of Building and Loan Supervision and the office of Supervisor of Building and Loan Associations, and transfer their duties and powers to the State Department of Finance.

"This bill is opposed by both the Missouri State League of Building and Loan Associations and the St. Louis league," Kuehner said. "It is a so-called 'economy' measure that would result in no economy whatsoever. The State Bureau of Building and Loan Supervision has always been self-supporting. The abolishment of this department would be a distinct disadvantage to State and St. Louis building and loan associations.

"The bureau is operated for the protection of individual shareholders in building and loan associations and is of untold value to both shareholders and associations."

CODE OF BUILDING PRACTICE DRAFTED

States Conditions Demanded for Lump Sum Competitive Building.

Drafting of a code of bidding practice to eliminate unsound and uneconomic procedure in the building industry is announced by the Joint Committee on Building Practices, of which William Stanley Parker of the Boston chapter of the American Institute of Architects is chairman. The code, according to Parker, enumerates the conditions under which lump sum competitive bidding should be carried on.

Progress toward a satisfactory method of blanket insurance coverage and in perfection of arbitration methods to settle labor disputes also was reported by the Joint Committee, which represents the Associated General Contractors of America and the institute.

Parker envisioned a "steadily widening acceptance of the interrelationship of the different elements of the building industry in constantly increasing co-operative efforts for the study of common problems, without which joint study and the elimination of unsound and uneconomic practices seems clearly impossible."

"The code of bidding practice," he said, "outlines the character of the documents the architect should provide, the manner in which bids should be submitted, the handling of sub-bids and the need of protecting them against improper use by general bidders, conditions that should obtain on the opening of bids and in the award by the owner."

The committee, said Parker, hopes soon to be able to report in detail a satisfactory method of blanket insurance coverage that will give complete protection to all parties in interest at a price that will be of advantage to the owner and to the insurance companies as well.

"In the arbitration of disputes," he said, "great progress has been made during the past 10 years. The principle was adopted by the industry in 1915. Its adoption for the settlement of commercial contract disputes has steadily increased since the war and has been encouraged and standardized by the American Arbitrary Society, which has developed carefully selected panels from which arbitrators may be chosen in a large number of cities throughout the country.

"Steps are being taken to perfect the provisions and procedures for use in building contracts, bringing them into harmony with the developed practices of the American Arbitration Society. It is hoped that a special report on this matter also may be ready for submission during the winter, so that the convention of the institute may record definite progress in these two important items of contract procedure."

LEASE BY CIGAR FIRM ON MORGAN AT 14TH

Stickney Company Signs 5-Year Hold for 95,000 Square Feet of News Building.

The William A. Stickney Cigar Co. has signed a five-year lease for 95,000 square feet of floor space in the St. Louis News Building at the northeast corner of Fourteenth and Morgan streets. The lease is effective March 1. The Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. handled negotiations.

The building is a two-story modern fireproof daylight structure. It is especially adapted to the requirements of the cigar concern.

The Stickney company now occupies a building at 1109 Locust street, which it purchased 20 years ago. The concern, of which George E. Lewis is manager, was established more than 50 years ago.

Part of the Morgan street building is occupied by the St. Louis News Company, which purchased it several years ago through the Mercantile Trust Co.

Plans have been completed for remodeling the five-story fireproof reinforced concrete building at 916-18 Morgan street. It is to be transformed with a new front.

The first floor, divided into stores, will be finished in glazed terra cotta, ornamented with silver bands. The upper stories will be of cream colored brick, with terra cotta coping. Included will be both freight and passenger elevators. A steam heating plant will also be installed.

The building was recently purchased by Frank Dallavalle through the John S. Blake Realty Co., which has been retained as rental agent. William P. McMahan is the architect for the reconstruction work.

The Morgan street widening project promises to prove a factor in the future of this thoroughfare. The street is to be widened between Third and Fourteenth streets and Jefferson avenue and Grand boulevard. It has already been widened between Fourteenth street and Jefferson avenue. The widening project will provide for an 80-foot thoroughfare to relieve traffic congestion in the downtown and central section.

CHURCH ORDER OPENS SMALL BOYS' SCHOOL

Buys Old Carpenter Home on Ferguson Road West of Normandy.

The former home of Clarkson Carpenter on the Ferguson road, just west of Normandy, has been changed into a boarding school for small boys by the Sisters of Divine Providence, who recently bought it through the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co.

The tract consists of 25 acres with the main house at the top of a hill. The land is part of the original Benoist farm which comprised extensive acreage in this vicinity prior to the settlement of Normandy.

The school has a capacity of 30 pupils. It is the intention of the Sisters to erect a larger building when the need arises. The school is known as the Mount Providence School for Boys.

FISCHER, CORA—In sad but loving remembrance of my wife and mother, who departed her life one year ago, Jan. 31, 1932:
One year and silent tears still fall,
Because you were the dearest of all;

GHNOULY AGREES TO MEET SHAW ON FIGHT CARD AT ARENA FEB. 7

Gus Wilson, Joe Ghnouly's manager, has agreed to a bout between his boxer and Battling Shaw (Jose Perez, Mexican lightweight from Laredo, Tex.), who scored a knockout over Ghnouly last summer. But Gus has not as yet put his O. K. on the weights.

Shaw signed a contract for the match, to be held at the Arena on Feb. 7, over a 12-round route, and Wilson agreed by wire. Gus and his stable, including Ghnouly, Billy Hogan, sensational young welterweight, and Eugene Huat, flyweight, are en route to St. Louis from El Paso, Tex., by automobile, and Tippett expects to iron out differences when they arrive here.

Shaw is a Mexican, holds the lightweight championship of the South and in addition to his victory over Ghnouly, has defeated Lou Terry and Davey Abad.

Ghnouly has been boxing recently on the Pacific Coast, the highlight of his trip to the far West being a victory which he scored over Cecil Payne, Louisville, Ky., lightweight, who previously had fought Tony Canzoneri a hard 10-round battle, losing the decision.

Before departing for the West Ghnouly had scored a decision victory over Roger Bernard.

Hogan won several fights on the Coast by knockouts and Tippett plans to pit him against Roy Mitchell, Jack Purvis or Nick Broglio.

Leslie Schulte, St. Louis heavyweight, who has had but few professional fights, is also expected to be on the card, but Tippett has not as yet selected an opponent for him.

The promoter has arranged a new system for handling the 40-cent tickets. Holders of these tickets may pay their 40 cents in advance at The Arena, the Arcade building or at Tippett's home, 4440 Delmar boulevard. The ticket will then be stamped. At Tippett's last show at the Arena serious congestion was caused at the gates by holders of the tickets all trying to get in at once.

YALE SWIMMERS WIN 60TH CONSECUTIVE LEAGUE VICTORY

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 28.—Walter Savell of Yale, smashed the national intercollegiate and the Intercollegiate Swimming Association League records today in the 200-yard breast stroke as the Elis defeated the University of Pennsylvania for their sixtieth consecutive league victory since 1924. The score was 53 to 18.

The Elis won first place in all events except the 100-yard free style.

Savell swam the 200-yard breast stroke in 2 minutes, 21 seconds. He clipped two-fifths of a second off the national intercollegiate record made in 1931 by Schmieller of Michigan. The former league record of 2:33 4-5 was held by Moles of Princeton.

Mel Dubinsky Second To Mel Johnson in U. S. Skating Race

By the Associated Press.

OCONOMOWOC, Wis., Jan. 28.—Skaters from Detroit led both the men's and women's divisions in the first day's racing for the National outdoor amateur championships on Fowler Lake today. Melvin Johnson, Detroit, topped the field of almost 100 men with 70 points and Charles Delphier, also of Detroit, was second with 60.

Rose Marie Brady, Detroit, piled up 40 points by finishing second in both the 220-yard and half-mile races, and led Crystal Bruce, Milwaukee, and Kit Klein, Buffalo, by 10 points.

National championships in these divisions, as well as meet titles in the intermediate, junior and juvenile events, for boys, will be decided tomorrow afternoon.

Ken Kesselberg, Chicago, raced far ahead of the field in both juvenile events, the 220 and 440, and Bernie Cannata, Chicago, won the junior races, 220 and 880. Temporary first place in the intermediate event is held by three boys, John Ronchetti and Leo Friesinger, both of Chicago, and Marvin Swanson, Detroit.

Champion Fails to Score.

Jimmy Webster, St. Paul, defending men's champion, failed to score in any of the four races. The closest he came was in the half mile, when he finished third, but was disqualified.

Johnson showed his superiority in the dashes, winning the 220 and 880. Mel Dubinsky was second to Johnson in the 220-yard event. He also took third place in the mile. Delphier's two victories came in distance events, the mile and two mile.

The men's championship will be decided after three more races, quarter mile, three-quarter and five mile. Spectators predicted a close contest for the title, with the two Detroiters favored.

Nearly 100 Skaters in Race.

The last event—the two-mile race for men—was the most picturesque of the day, close to 100 skaters played a 16-lap game of tag around the oval course and the finish was close enough to a dead heat to start arguments. Inches only separated Delphier, winner, and James Jaros, St. Paul. Less than a yard behind came Stundl.

In spite of good ice and brisk weather, no records were threatened.

SENIOR MEN.

Melvin Johnson, Detroit, 70; Charles Delphier, Detroit, 60; Eddie Studl, Chicago, 30; James Jaros, St. Paul, 20; Mel Dubinsky, St. Louis, 20; William Minster, Chicago, 20; O'Neil Farrell, Chicago, 10; Art Conray, Chicago, 10.

Only One St. Louisan Captures Two Places.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OCONOMOWOC, Wis., Jan. 28.—Bob Dusseau, the junior champion of St. Louis, was the only one of 18 St. Louis skaters to take two places in the national outdoor championships held here today. Dusseau won his heat in the 220-yard dash, was second in the 880-yard heat and third in the finals of both races.

Mel Dubinsky won his heat in the 220, finished first in the semi-final

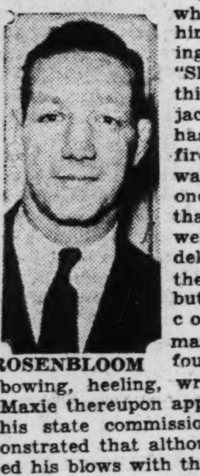
Maxie on the Spot Again.

MAXIE ROSENBLOOM, conceded almost nationally to be the best light-heavyweight fighter, although not universally recognized as champion, is "on the spot" again.



ROSENBLOOM

Because of the style of boxing which earned him the fighting name of "Slapsie Maxie," this jumping-jack of the ring has been under fire before. It was charged on one occasion that not only were his blows delivered with the open glove but that he committed many petty fouls such as elbowing, heeling, wrestling, etc. Maxie thereupon appeared before his state commission and demonstrated that although he started his blows with the glove open, his fist was closed when it landed and that he did not do any of the illegal things charged.

The commission was convinced. But every time that Maxie shows, a certain percentage of those observers who are posted on the rules of boxing object to his performances.

Harry Sharpe Takes Exception.

AFTER Maxie boxed Al Stillman here, the crowd seemed pleased, in the main. News accounts contained nothing but praise for Maxie. But one protest has been raised, as an aftermath, and it is voiced by an authority who has many years of experience to back him and who virtually wrote the present rules governing Missouri boxing—Harry S. Sharpe.

In a letter to the Post-Dispatch, Sharpe charges that Rosenbloom violated several rules and expresses the view that Rosenbloom should have been disqualified or Stillman credited with not worse than a draw. Sharpe, in his letter, writes:

"I have been quite interested by the published comment upon the showing made here last Tuesday evening by Maxie Rosenbloom, who lays claim to the light-heavyweight championship. He has

55 Cents to $3.30 For Carnera-Schaaf Bout at the Garden

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.

BILL DUFFY, manager of Primo Carnera, today withdrew his objections to the scale of ticket prices for Carnera's bout with Ernie Schaaf, and the match will be held, as scheduled, at Madison Square Garden Feb. 10.

Duffy threatened to cancel the match when William F. Carey, president of the Garden, announced tickets would be priced from 55 cents to $3.30. He claimed he had an oral agreement with Carey that a top price of $5.50 would be charged.

A series of conferences resulted in amicable agreement.

Six-Day Bicycle Race, St. Louis' First, Announced for Coliseum, Feb. 8-14

A six-day bicycle race, something never before attempted in St. Louis, will be held at the Coliseum, Feb. 8 to 14, inclusive, under the promotion of Mique Malloy of Chicago and Tommy McGinty of Cleveland, with Willie Spencer, former world champion, as general manager, it was announced yesterday.

Teams of two men each representing France, Belgium, Germany, Ireland, Czecho-Slovakia, Sweden, Poland, Canada and Australia have been entered.

These men will face the starting barrier and one man of each team will be on the track 24 hours a day until the long grind is completed. Bunks will be arranged beside the track for the team member who is not riding to snatch some rest.

The race will continue for a total of 146 hours and during each 24 hours there will be seven series of sprints of two miles each. At noon there will be ten; 3 p. m., five; 4:30 p. m., five; 8 p. m., 10:00 p. m., 12 midnight and 2 a. m. ten sprints at each hour.

Under the rules of the event the winner is determined by the team scoring the greatest number of points in the sprints, provided no other team has a lap or more advantage in mileage, points being awarded for first, second, third and fourth in each sprint.

Extra prize money is provided for the dashes, donated by organizations or individuals and even the spectators frequently provide purses for sprints.

Malloy has been working on the preliminary details for some time and said he expected a force of carpenters to be put to work installing the track about Feb. 6. The track is built of spruce and the cost of installation varies in different localities.

Virtually the same promotion company and the same riders for the event here just closed a race at Cleveland, having appeared previously during the last two months in Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Toronto and Montreal.

Spencer handled ten races during the past year which he says drew a total attendance of approximately 500,000 persons. While admission charges for the Coliseum event have not been determined as yet, Malloy said the general admission charge would be 40 cents, with other seats priced up to $1.50.

SPARKY ADAMS AND C. WILSON TO COMPETE FOR SHORTSTOP JOB

By J. Roy Stockton.

Charles E. Street, manager of the Cardinals, who was in St. Louis yesterday to confer with Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey and to speak over the radio, has made a drastic change in his infield plans for 1933 and has decided that it would be unwise to try to turn Frankie Frisch into a shortstop.

"It's only the fool who never changes his mind," the Big Proverb Man from Joplin explained. "When I told the Post-Dispatch early in January that I thought I'd drill Frisch at short, it looked like the only way out of a predicament, if Gelbert couldn't play. But now I realize that that would be putting all my eggs in one basket.

"I fully expect Hornsby to be able to give me a year of good baseball. But if he should fail to make the grade, I would be forced to shift Frisch back to second and then face the necessity of finding a shortstop.

The New Lineup.

"So I have decided to station Frisch at third base. He is a great third baseman and I won't have to worry about that position. Sparky Adams tells me that he is fit to play and he and Charley Wilson will have to fight it out for the shortstop job. The one who emerges second best in that contest will be the utility man. Pepper Martin will practice through the spring training trip at third base and then if I am forced to shift Frisch back to second, Pepper can play third. Or if Wilson wins the shortstop job, Adams will be available for emergency duty at third."

The Old Sergeant squared his jaw when he took up the subject of spring training and his plans for putting the Cardinals into condition for the next pennant race.

"I take all the blame for our failure to come out of Florida in condition last spring," he declared. "I was stuck on my ball club. I thought we could step out and win the pennant easily. I didn't bear down in the training. But there's going to be a different story this year. I'll be manager again. I'll crack the whip and it's going to be a training trip, not a pleasure jaunt.

"Last year when pitchers tired of chasing flies, I let them quit, though I felt that they hadn't had enough work. Well, this spring I'll decide when they have had enough work. And there will be no early morning fishing trips. No, there won't be any orders against fishing or surf bathing or golf. But recreation will be of secondary importance and the boys will have to forego golf, fishing and the beach until after the day's work is done.

"And here's another thing. My regulars will play in the exhibition games and my regular pitchers will do the pitching. Last year I used recruits in most of the exhibition games and the result was that my regular pitchers didn't get enough work. Jimmy Wilson was overweight last spring when we came north. But he'll catch in all the exhibition games this spring. And when the season starts, I expect to have Wilson behind the bat in every game when he is not handicapped by injuries. Jimmy is a great catcher and I plan to make use of his ability and brains throughout the 1933 season."

Likes Pat Crawford.

Street said he wouldn't be surprised to see Pat Crawford give Jim Collins a big surprise in the contest for the regular job at first base.

"Collins, perhaps, is a better fielder," he suggested, "but over 154 games Crawford is a great ball player and Collins will have to be at top form to prevent Crawford from taking his job."

Street said he planned to use Lindsey, Stout and Haines for relief work, with Haines starting occasionally.

When asked about the possibility of a trade for an infielder, Gabby said the club would listen to all propositions.

"We have some excellent bait in the form of extra pitchers," he pointed out, "and if any club has a good infielder to spare, we probably could give more in exchange than any other club. However, I do not think it essential that we do any trading. I like my ball club and believe that with a fair break in the luck, we will give St. Louis another pennant.

"Charley Wilson may surprise all

Dick Bell, St. Louis, Near World Record in Winning 50-Yard Dash at Boston

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—Dick Bell, St. Louis boy, a student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, won the 50-yard dash in the Prout Memorial games here tonight and was within one-fifth of a second of the world record in doing so.

Bell led Norman Woolford of the Nichols Junior College, Dudley, Mass., to the tape by a yard, and was clocked in 5.2 seconds for the distance just one-fifth of a second behind the mark set by Joe Loomis of Chicago in 1916. Arthur Jannell of Fordham was third.

Gene Venzke, holder of the world indoor record for the mile, opened his 1933 campaign by beating Brendan Moynahan of the Boston A. A. by 30 yards to win the K. of C. mile, feature of the twelfth annual event for the second consecutive year.

The flying Pennsylvania freshman had so little competition that his time was 4 minutes 17 3-5 seconds, one of the slowest performances of his professional career.

Venzke led every inch of the way and was never threatened. The only competition in this classic was provided by Moynahan when he took second place away from Frank Crowley of Manhattan, during the second last lap. There were four other starters, Bay Estes of the B. A. A., J. W. Turley of Yale and Arthur Foote and J. P. Scheu of Harvard.

PRINCIPIA SWIMMERS DEFEAT KEMPER

BOONVILLE, Mo., Jan. 28.—The Kemper Military School's swimming team lost a dual meet to Principia of St. Louis here tonight by a score of 27-48. Hadley of Kemper won two firsts and a second to take high point honors.

The Principia swimmers took both relays and four first places. Brenner was outstanding for the visitors.

BOONVILLE, Mo., Jan. 28.—In a Junior College Conference basketball game played in the Kemper field house here tonight, Kemper defeated Principia of St. Louis, 29—24. The visitors were leading at the half, 15—10, but Kemper started a scoring spree late in the last half which netted them seven goals in rapid succession.

U. S. Can Keep Its Chocolate; Watson Returns to Bar-Tending Job in England

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The responsibilities of a barkeeping job at less than $20 a week are drawing Seaman Tom Watson back to England at a time when he could clean up a tidy sum here by capitalizing his decision over Fidel La Barba.

Charley Harvey has offers to show the British featherweight champion in several spots, but the Seaman won't have to go to any of them.

"I said I'd be back in a month and I'm off," is his answer to the pleadings of Harvey and the cajolery of Squire John Mortimer, who escorted Watson here.

Watson is employed as a barman at the New Hawk Inn, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Fighting had been just a side line for several years up to the time he was suddenly projected into prominence through his capture of the British title from Ned Tarleton.

He is homesick for Newcastle-on-Tyne, his wife and three children and the bar.

"Five pun a week they pye me," he says, "and I drew me pye all the time I was away, so I must go back."

He sails tomorrow on the Europa. Squire Mortimer will remain to close for a world's championship match with Kid Chocolate, which cannot be staged before March now because of Watson's trip.

Summary: Score at end of half—St. Louis 17, Rockhurst 9. Time of periods—20 minutes. Referee—Orr (Iowa State).

By James M. Gould.

Once upon a time, a tortoise beat a hare—but that was in a fable. Last night, the chief difference between the St. Louis U. Billikens and the basketball players from Rockhurst College lay in the speed shown. Also, the Billikens seemed to calculate angles a bit better and basket more accurately. All of which were able to gauge the size of the led to a St. Louis victory, 37 to 27. It was the sixth St. Louis U. triumph in the eight games played this season. About 1000 saw the game.

There was some rough play and 17 fouls were called, but all the players were careful to avoid the "fatal fourth" and so none had to be sent hence by the referee. The high-scorer of the evening turned up in the person of one Murray Brown, substitute Rockhurst center. Brown, a freshman, counted 12 points on six field goals. For St. Louis ,Gorman led with nine points, with Flannigan and Grandone close up with eight apiece.

Billikens Never Behind.

The Billikens never were trailers. They started with a 3-0 lead and, with seven field goals to four for Rockhurst, led at the end of the half by a 17-9 score. Coach Nyikos, having sent in his reserves in the last minutes of the opening period, allowed them to start the second and Rockhurst proceeded to stage a rally which put the count at 22-15. Leading by only seven points was too much for Coach Nyikos and he signalled his regulars to take their blankets off and dash in there to fight for dear old St. Louis. This, the regulars proceeded to do in no uncertain fashion, and they soon ran the score up again with young John Flannigan doing some pretty work. Toward the end of this second period, Freshman Brown showed some neat one-handed tossing which netted him three field-goals in quick succession and brought his team again to within seven points of a tie. Two free throws were converted by Frost and Flannery sank a shot from the short side after which Ryan caged a free throw for the final score of the game.

The most improved St. Louis player is John Flannigan, who did some excellent shooting along with fine work in guarding.

Freshmen Win.

In a preliminary game, the St. Louis U. freshmen won their second game in succession, defeating the Y. M. H. A. team, 27 to 18. The freshmen are undefeated this year.

By W. J. McGoogan.

Babe Dye hopes to get his St. Louis Flyers back on the right track in the American Association Hockey race this week. They are scheduled to play four games at The Arena, the first starting this afternoon at 3 o'clock when the Tulsa Oilers call for a game. The Kansas City club will play here Thursday evening, then Wichita, transplanted from Duluth, will call for games next Saturday night and Sunday afternoon.

If the Flyers perform at home this time as they have on previous home stands they should speedily climb out of the tie for last position which they occupy this morning. St. Louis has won nine games on home ice while losing only two. On the road the Flyers have won three, lost 10 and tied one. Since the team last played here the Flyers have been on the road and have lost three successive games to Kansas City, Wichita and Tulsa.

There's No Place Like Home.

This strange about-face of the club at home and on the road has started tongues to wagging about the city, some folks even suggesting that it appears the American Association is a "home" league with the visiting teams always on the short end of scores.

Apparently the record of the St. Louis team is no strange thing in hockey, however, for in the National League, out of 125 games played this season visiting teams have won only 25.

The Boston Bruins, for instance, one of the strongest clubs in the league, have won 10, lost one and tied one at home. On the road they have won five, lost nine and tied three. The Chicago Blackhawks have won eight, lost three and tied four at Chicago while abroad they have won three, lost eight and tied two.

Here's a Record for You!

Even stranger is the record of the Montreal Canadiens, one of the flashiest teams in hockey, including in their lineup the famed Howie Morenz, center, regarded as the fastest skater in the game. The Canadiens have not been going very well this year, winning eight while losing 15 games. Not one of their victories has been scored away from home!

Here is the record of the National League teams, showing games played, those won away from home and total victories:

TEAM.	Won Abroad.	Games.	Total Victories
Toronto	5	28	14
Chicago	3	28	11
Montreal Maroons	3	27	11
N. Y. Rangers	4	27	15
Boston Bruins	4	29	15
Detroit	3	28	15
N. Y. Americans	2	28	8
Ottawa	2	29	8
Canadiens	0	26	8

There has been no surprise expressed by Eastern writers over the records of the teams, despite the great discrepancies between the abilities of the teams at home and on the road and the explanation of hockey men has been accepted, which is that the home club always has an advantage because of familiarty with ice conditions, lack of traveling, etc., which always accrues to a home team.

Grant Makes Explanation.

William F. Grant, president of the American Association and owner of the Kansas City club in reply to a request for his opinion on the subject sent the following wire:

"Home club always has slight advantage playing on their own ice, being familiar with banking boards, also their home crowd cheering them on. Our club always seems to go better at home than on road. Saw the Flyers at Wichita and considered it exceptionally hard fought game and was anybody's game up to the last which was also the case in Kansas City. Traveling also takes certain amount of players. Wichita should have big advantage on their home ice due to its small size."

Baseball fans know that teams play better at home than on the road. In fact a major league club which breaks even on the road is considered to be doing very well. But there is not, of course, the discrepancy between the records of baseball teams at home and on the road as there is with hockey teams.

Gets Football Letter.

STONY BROOK, N. Y., Jan. 28.—The Stony Brook School today presented certificates awarding the varsity football letters to 21 members of the 1932 football squad. Among the recipients of this honor was David R. Small, the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Small of 5415 Maple avenue, St. Louis. Before entering the Stony Brook School, Small attended the St. Louis Country Day School, where he was a member of the football, track and boxing teams.

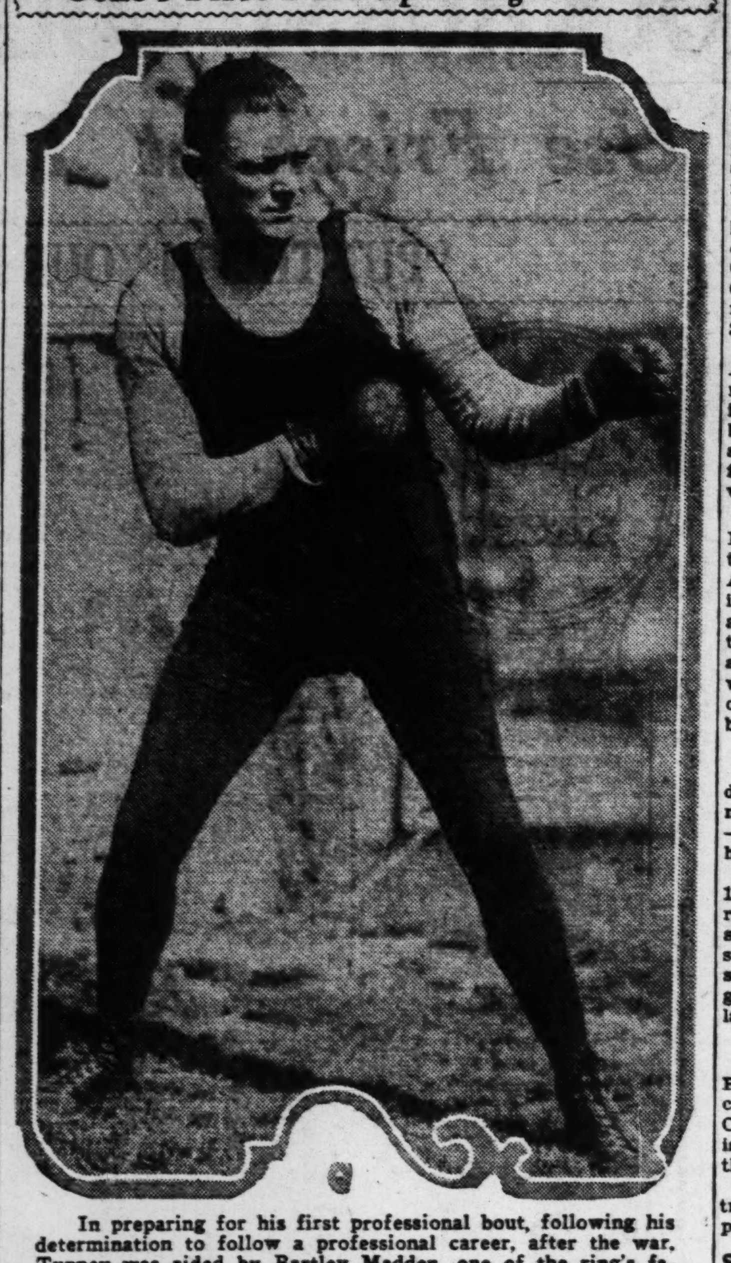
"A MAN MUST FIGHT"

by GENE TUNNEY

SYNOPSIS.

Thus far, the author has described his strenuous boyhood, New York fight club activities, and battles paving the way towards the A. E. F. ring championships in France . . . Office boy, ship company rate clerk, life saver, and now a full-fledged U. S. Marine, Tunney travels to Paris for "fame and glory" . . . winning the light-heavy title on April 26, 1919 . . . Decides to defeat Dempsey some day! Smiles and laughs greet that idea . . . Gene tours the Army of Occupation, returns to the U. S., is discharged ("practically broke") from the service, and renews his ring training through the good offices of Sammy Kelly, Jack Denning, Bartley Madden, and Bernard F. Gimbel.

Gene's First Paid Sparring Partner



In preparing for his first professional bout, following his determination to follow a professional career, after the war, Tunney was aided by Bartley Madden, one of the ring's famous "iron men." Years later, Tunney achieved what many great fighters had failed to do—he knocked out Madden.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN.

I WANTED to fight, I was in fighting shape. I expressed the desire for work to Sammy Kelly several times. Sammy made inquiries, but as there was no boxing in New York State at that time Sammy found it most difficult to place me. I was impatient. I wanted action. To appease me Sammy offered me money in advance. As he had already advanced me $100, it did not seem wise to me to increase the partnership indebtedness. I refused any proffer, but insisted on his procuring me a match.

Eventually, Charles A. Stoneham came to Sammy's rescue by sending him to Havana to represent him in a business venture of some kind. When Sammy left for Havana I was worried, not particularly about my prospects of the future, but because I owed him $100 and could think of no way of repaying him. I told him that since he would be away several months I thought it wise to allow some manager to take care of me in his absence. He mentioned Charley Harvey as a good representative and manager. Not knowing Harvey, I told him I would rather have Billy Roche.

Preferred Billy Roche.

I WAS anxious to have Billy because he had seen me in all my important matches in France and believed in my destiny almost as sincerely as I. Billy agreed to handle me in the absence of Sammy Kelly, and accepted the same terms that existed between Kelly and me, 25 per cent of all purses. There was no allowance made for training expenses as we did not expect to engage any high-priced sparring partners or trainers.

After several weeks in which Roche made strenuous endeavors to get me matched in every city east of the Mississippi, he acknowledged with embarrassment that we would have to bide our time and take chances of a substitution or some such thing coming along. He said all the matchmakers with whom he was acquainted, and there were many, had my name on file and would put me in at the first opportunity.

In the meantime, I continued broke and in debt. I wore a path to Billy's office in the celebrated Putnam Building (site now of the Paramount Theater) and became a familiar figure to the numerous tenants of that rendezvous of sharp wits and Broadway chiselers. One day I followed Billy to the office of Jack Curley, the wrestling promoter, which was just across Times Square.

In Curley's office I was introduced for the first time to the great Joe Humphries, the man who has made an institution of his powerful lungs and made prize fight announcing an art, of which he is the old master.

Humphreys' Strategy.

AFTER talking with Joe for a few minutes and acquainting him with our difficulty, he said: "I am going down to announce a fight between light heavyweights at Perth Amboy, N. J., tonight. Why don't you come down with me and challenge the winner? You are a likely looking young fellow and the promoters will probably give you a match. I will do whatever I can."

Billy Roche and I went down on the Jersey Central with Joe, hopeful that between my reputation as the A. E. F. light heavyweight champion and Joe's good offices we could procure a match at the club for some later date. Joe, generous soul that he is, paid the railroad fares down and back. He duly introduced me, and in his challenge to the winner I am afraid he waxed too eloquent. The winner, Eddie Josephs of Staten Island, would have no part of me. At the conclusion of the match, his brother-manager made that plain to Promoter McNulty and me in no uncertain terms.

Though the trip home was full of mirth and laughter because of Joe's wit and stories, my heart was heavy, for another chance had fizzled. I continued training and hoping. And then one day, after I had gotten in touch with the chief clerk of the Ocean Steamship Co. and made a disguised inquiry as to the possibility of getting back my old job of rate clerk (there was none), Billy Roche telephoned my home and said he had matched me to fight Dan O'Dowd of Boston.

O'Dowd a week before had fought an eight-round no-decision battle with Billy Brennan, then a leading contender for the heavyweight championship. The fight was to take place at the Bayonne A. A., of which Charley Doesserick was the promoter. Again good old Charley came to my rescue, as he had done in 1917. The Bayonne A. A. was located in a summer amusement park in Bayonne, New Jersey. The match took place on Dec. 15, 1919, and though the weather was unusually cold, the arena had no heat, but that exuded by the human body. We had to fight to keep warm.

O'Dowd Was Tough.

O'DOWD turned out to be a very tough and game fellow, and though I battered him around a good deal, I was unable even to knock him down. My remuneration for this match was $201—25 per cent of the gate receipts. Billy took the agreed stipulation. I netted $150.75. No money in the hands of anyone, no matter how great or how small the sum may have been, was ever magnified to the extent that that $150.75 was in my eyes. I felt like the governor of the Bank of England.

I took my earnings home. They were in one, two and five dollar bills, with few fives and many ones. Coming down for breakfast the next morning, I brought with me my little bag containing the purse. I dumped it on the table of the dining-room and my mother, seeing this heap of bills, said as fervently as any prayer she ever uttered, "God bless and spare the hands that can make so much money in one night."

Several days later, however, she was admonishing me again about getting into a gentlemanly business career.

This O'Dowd match established me somewhat. A few days later Dave Driscoll, matchmaker for a club holding fights in the Jersey City Armory, called Billy Roche and asked him if he would take a guaranty of $200 for me to box Bob Pierce of Chicago on Dec. 29, 1919. Billy accepted immediately.

Change in Psychology.

It is astonishing what a change in psychology a feeling of security, from immediate want, brings. The one match with Dan O'Dowd lifted me from the dumps and all I could see ahead was the sunshine of success. I quickly disposed of Bob Pierce, knocking him down several times and finally out in the second round. This match brought me for the first time to the notice of the boxing experts of the metropolitan papers.

The criticisms of my fight with Pierce were favorable. One writer said, "Here is a young heavyweight with some class. He will do."

Doesserick, being satisfied with the showing I made on my first attempt at his club, signed me for another match to take place three days after the Pierce fight at the matinee show on New Year's day, 1920. He procured Whitey Allen as my opponent. Allen came from the Bronx. He had a reputation for honest and industrious effort over a long career.

Tunney learned to master ring fear and the vital importance of coolness during battles, early in 1920, with Whitey Allen and K. O. Sullivan. He will describe them tomorrow in these columns.

SPORT SALAD

The Cream of the Crop.

Gene Sarazen having picked an All-America golf team, the public would be interested in some expert's idea of a tiddledewinks team that could take all comers.

THEY'RE picking All-Americas
in this and that and t'other,
Who could if working as a team
all opposition smother.
So who can pick an all-star team of hockeyites and curlers
And ping pong, skat, penuchle, bridge, mah jong and horseshoe hurlers?

Why Not?

After which we'd like to get somebody's idea of an All-America team of jigsaw puzzle experts.

Br'er Mills says that money cuts but very little ice as compared to credit. That's what we tried to tell the iceman, the butcher, the baker and candlestick maker, but they couldn't seem to understand it.

What, No Money!

"COLD cash for me," the iceman
said,
The baker yelped "no dough, no bread!"
The butcher said "without the price
No sirloin steaks for you I'll slice."
The maker of the candlesticks
Cut off the light and snuffed the wicks.

A $100 suit of clothes can make a man look like a million dollars and feel like 30 cents when pockets are empty.

The rule in wrestling that has to do with the strangle hold seems to be interpreted in a jocular as well as a jugular vein.

Same way with eating corn on the cob. We always start at the left and work to the right.

On the other hand, or, arm if you prefer, most people, when putting on their coat, put the right arm in first.

Babe Ruth is what you might call ambidextrous. He signs baseballs with his right but hits 'em left handed.

Mr. Einstein attributes depression in the United States to internal causes. That's what you might call the inside dope.

Whether external, or, internal, we all agree that it is an infernal nuisance.

If the Prof. can evolve some scientific way of putting a dent in a depression we'll appreciate it.

According to the book a depression is a dent and is not to be confused with a lump, as in a sum of money.

When you get a bump on the head it raises a lump but when you get bumped in the market it causes a depression.

As the latest amendment to the Constitution is not retroactive the lame duck will not make his last quack until March 4.

CHAPMAN, YANKS' OUTFIELD STAR, JOINS HOLDOUTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Ben Chapman, the Alabama flier, has returned his contract to the New York Yankees, unsigned, thereby joining Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig as holdouts, but Secretary Ed Barrow today declined to comment on the fleet outfielder's differences with the club. Chapman was reported to have been asked to take a $2000 "cut," but Barrow would not confirm this.

So far as is officially known, however, all members of the world champions except Manager Joe McCarthy, John Allen and Vernon Gomez were asked to take "cuts" ranging from $500 to the Babe's $25,000.

Chapman retained his title as the American League's leading base runner in 1932 but his performances in this specialty as well as in batting, fell off. He stole 38 bases as compared with 61 the year before and batted .299 as compared with .315 for 1931.

Leroy Parmelee and Francis Healey, star "pony battery" with the Columbus club of the American Association last season before being recalled by the Giants, were added to the folder of signed contracts today. Parmelee, who has already motored to Los Angeles with his bride, won 14 and lost only one game with Columbus. Healy batted .340 in 44 games.

Red Sox Pitcher Signs.

DORA, Ala., Jan. 28.—Paul Andrews, Boston American pitcher, is not a member of the holdout league—a $2,500 increase contributed to his willingness to sign.

Andrews announced here that his 1933 contract which included the raise had been returned with his signature affixed. The increase, he said, was a reward for his work last season. He won 11 and lost seven games with the Red Sox in the cellar in 1932.

Dick Porter a Holdout.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 28.—Dick Porter, star outfielder, today became a member of the group of Cleveland Indians who are dissatisfied with the salary figures in their 1933 contracts.

Wesley Ferrell, ace pitcher of the tribe, already has announced he will protest for a higher wage.

Truman Connell, St. Louis intermediate champion was a close second in the intermediate boys' mile final, after having been in a pocket on the last lap. He skated out around the pack to finish two feet behind Marvin Swanson of St. Paul.

WRAY'S COLUMN

been given much praise, but I seriously question that he merits it.

"Had I been the referee and had he continued to box as he did I would have disqualified him. He slapped, sliced, heeled, flicked with the open glove, pushed, pulled and elbowed, in every round. The rules provide that blows be landed with the knuckles of the hand, and this he positively did not do.

"I went to the Arena especially to observe Rosenbloom. I have frequently read of his unorthodox manner and habits of boxing and I wanted to see for myself. I had a seat close to the ring. From what I saw I am quite certain that had he been boxing some years ago when rules were enforced, and had to be observed, he would have been disqualified in the very first round.

"Stillman Deserved a Draw."

"As it was, with Rosenbloom being allowed to complete his 12 rounds boxing as he did, it seems to me that the least Stillman should have received was a draw because Rosenbloom should have been penalized at least to that extent for his flagrant violations of the rules.

"It seems to me too much credit and too much importance was given Max's reputation as light-heavyweight champion. Before his appearance in the ring with Stillman much was written about Rosenbloom's claim to title, boxing ability, and speed. As a result he was the featured performer, which was quite correct; but his performance was a sorry exhibition of boxing, and this took him out of the feature class. His performance was eclipsed by boxers in two of the preliminary bouts.

"It is a matter of surprise to me that so few of the present-day boxers do not insist more upon their rights in the ring and object to unfair methods and non-enforcement of the rules. I am led to believe they do not know the rules or understand their application. Or is it that their rightful protests would fall upon deaf ears.

"Al Stillman would have been highly justified in protesting Rosenbloom's methods and claiming proper protection afforded by the rules. That is what the rules are for. But, instead of doing this, he seemed to be trying to make the best of a bad job, and in doing this he contributed to the delinquency of the bout. This may be business, but it is not sport."

Why Does He Do It?

REPORTERS at ringside, familiar with Rosenbloom's peculiarities say that while Maxie does some very unorthodox things, he does close his fist when he lands and does not strike with the "heel" of his hand.

"I watched Rosenbloom for this very fault," says W. J. McGoogan, who reported the event for the Post-Dispatch. "I noted that while Maxie pawed and feinted with the open glove, his fist was closed when the blow landed. Some of his punches are hard to follow as they are struck from all angles; but as far as I was able to note he did not strike with the open glove."

"Clean Fight," Says Kessler.

REFEREE HARRY KESSLER, who handled the bout, said that he thought Rosenbloom fought a very clean fight with one or two exceptions. "I saw nothing to complain about except that once Maxie speared Stillman with his thumb," Kessler said. "While he at times appeared to be boxing with his gloves open, he always had them closed when his blows landed."

At best Maxie is an unconvincing fighter. His seeming lack of a decisive punch and his approach to the borderline of fouls in some of his tactics, have drawn criticism everywhere. However, opponents in his weight class fear him and none has been able to solve his style to advantage.

Mickey Walker, great ring warrior that he is, has refrained from meeting Rosenbloom, although they were matched three times, Maxie says. When Walker graduated from the middleweight class, instead of rising to the heavyweight class logically by beating the light heavyweight champion, he detoured around Rosenbloom, preferring easier game against bigger men.

Flowers Often Criticised.

THE late "Tiger" Flowers, when middleweight champion, like Rosenbloom was often put on the spot for striking with the open glove and "flicking." But after a time it was conceded that while the Deacon sparred and feinted with his glove open, his fist was closed when his punches landed.

It was because Referee Benny Yanger thought Flowers was using his open glove on Mickey Walker, in their championship fight at Chicago, that Benny gave the fight to Walker—a decision which brought to a close Yanger's career as a referee and caused a change in the rule which had permitted the referee to be the sole judge of fights, in Illinois.

In the interest of the game, and his own reputation, Rosenbloom ought to modify that feature of his boxing by which his sparring, preliminary to striking a blow, is done with the open hand. If he kept his fist closed at all times he would not come under suspicion.

In the first half, only one foul was called on the St. Louis team.

Charley Dirksen, one of the Billikens' leading scorers this season, had a tough time finding the basket. As a matter of fact, playing the major part of the game, Charley scored exactly one point.

The Billikens' next game is scheduled for Thursday night, when they will play a strong alumni team.

OUTDOORS

By Alec Mermod.

THE name of Sir William Northrup McMillan is well known to most St. Louisans, and much has been written about his many exploits in British East Africa, so I will not attempt to describe his personality further than to say that "he was a mighty hunter before the Lord," and that he was my best friend.

After settling in Africa, he made several visits to St. Louis and I was highly entertained with many stories of his hunting trips, though it required persistent effort on my part to get him started, for he was exceedingly modest and not given to boasting.

During one of our "gabfests" I asked him if he had had many narrow escapes from the many wild beasts he had hunted, such as lions, buffalo, etc., and I finally got him started.

Here's the story as told by McMillan:

"I was out one day with only my number one gun bearer, after hartebeest, not expecting to find a lion within miles, when my bearer suddenly called: 'Watch, boss; a lion.' He was very much excited, and pointed frantically off to my right, and there within 25 yards was a full-grown lion.

"My first gun was a Mauser repeater of small caliber, .256 (if I remember correctly), while my second was a double express adapted to a very heavy charge of cordite powder.

A Close Call.

"I FIRED at the lion, and, being so close, I was confident that I could place the bullet exactly where I wanted it, though I, of course, did not expect the small-light-weight bullet to be entirely effective. I reached back for the heavy rifle, expecting to have it shoved into my hand by the bearer, who should have been behind me and a little to one side, and you can imagine my feelings when there was no rifle forthcoming. I didn't dare take my eyes off the lion to look for my man, so was obliged to stick to the Mauser, which, luckily, I hadn't dropped; for by this time I was located, and the lion was on his way. He was almost on me before I could shoot, and I was obliged to jump aside to avoid being bumped as he rolled towards me. This last shot proved to be fatal, but I gave him a third through the brain, for safety.

"Examination showed that my first shot had barely touched the heart, while the second had pierced the heart in the exact center.

"That's about the closest call I've ever had, and I never want to repeat the performance, for such an experience is rather nerve racking, to say the least. In the first place, I was taken completely by surprise, not expecting to see a lion in that locality, and then I was quite flustered when my man failed to hand me the second gun. When I looked for this man, he was a hundred yards away and still running, having dropped the rifle about 10 feet from where I was standing.

"As a punishment this chap was demoted from number one gun bearer to just an ordinary farmhand, and he was never reinstated.

Running Down a Cheetah.

"Did I ever tell you about the time Stewart Edward White ran down and killed a cheetah?" asked McMillan. As I had not heard the story, I asked for it, and here it is.

"White, who was the best man physically, I've ever known, was out with me one day in the buckboard, when we spied three cheetahs. White asked me if a cheetah had any speed. I told him that they were the fastest animals in the country for a short distance, but they soon tired out as they had no lung capacity.

"'Let me out,' says he, 'I believe I can catch one.' Hop to it, says I, they don't belong to me, and you are welcome to all of them. At that he jumped out of the buckboard and actually ran down one of the cats and clubbed him over the head with his six-shooter.

"It was really a remarkable feat, and I had no idea that White was fast enough to do it. That night at dinner, we were discussing the event, and I told White that the cheetah must have been sick, or he could not have run him down.

"White was a bit miffed at my kidding, and said, 'You show me another of these cats, and I'll repeat the performance,' and he did that very thing the next day.

Never Lost His Nerve.

To those who did not know McMillan as I did, I want to say that he was one of the best all-round shots I've ever trained with, and he was always absolutely cool under pressure, never losing his nerve when in a "tight," and he and I have been in several tight places together, in the West and Southwest, during the early '90s when the country was not as tame as it is today. Besides all this, he was one of the few men I've known whom every one liked, and as far as I know had no enemies, and he was equally at home with king or cow-puncher.

His memory is still fresh in the minds of his many Western friends who knew him 40 years ago in Colorado and New Mexico.

The second half of the six games total pins to count match between the Hermanns, leaders in the Major City and A. B. C. Scratch Leagues, and an All-Star team, will be rolled on the Rogers Recreation alleys tonight, starting at 8 o'clock. In the first three games rolled last week, the Hermanns won by a margin of one pin, 3127 to 3126, in one of the finest special matches ever rolled on local drives.

There will be no change in the line-up of either team, with Cone Hermann, Ray Holmes, Lowell Jackson, Hank Summers and Sam Garafolo representing the Hermanns and Ben Cohen, Otto Stein Jr., Jim Wilson, Frank Kastner and Erv Brunsmann, the individual star of the first three games, bowling for the All-Stars.

Hermanns to Bowl In Inter-City Match.

Ray Holmes, captain of the Hermann Undertakers, has announced that the Hermanns will meet the Coca-Cola team of Detroit in an inter-city match of 18 games. The first three blocks of the match will be rolled at the Chene-Trombley Recreation, Detroit, Feb. 4 and 5, with the final three blocks scheduled for Feb. 11 and 12 at St. Louis.

The three St. Louis blocks will be bowled at Rogers Recreation. The first three games will be rolled Feb. 11 at 8 p. m., with the other blocks scheduled Feb. 12 at 2 and 8 p. m.

The Coca-Cola team is one of the most formidable fives in the country and are the holders of many records in tournament match and league play. During the season of 1930-31 they were the world's match game champions, losing this title to the Canfield Oils at the start of the following season. In a home-and-home match with the Canfields in 1932 in an effort to regain their title they were beaten in a 24-game match by 174 pins, averaging 1076 for the 24 games.

The Hermanns have a fine record in local play, leading both the Major City and the A. B. C. Scratch leagues at the present time. In the Major City League they are sporting an average of 1053, and have an average in the A. B. C. League of 1023. They have rolled the record total in league play of 3386, and also the high single game of 1250.

"No School Today" but Mrs. M'Cutcheon Will Continue Bowling Classes Tomorrow

Free Instructions for Women Attract Crowds at Arway, as at Melene's—Three Sessions a Day for Five More Days.

Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, world's greatest woman bowler, opened her free school of bowling instructions for women at the Arway Recreation, 4923 Arsenal Street, yesterday with three classes, each of which drew many spectators. A crowd that overflowed the 250 seats was on hand at the 3 o'clock class.

Mrs. McCutcheon, at each class, devoted part of the period to discussing the fundamentals of the bowling game and after the talk invited the members of the class to bowl individually under her directions.

A day of rest is on Mrs. McCutcheon's program today, but she will continue her instructions at the Arway alleys tomorrow with the first-class scheduled at 10 a. m. Other classes will be held at 3 and 6 p. m. The same schedule will be followed Tuesday.

After her three-day instructions at the Arway alleys, Mrs. McCutcheon will open her school at the Mid-City Recreation, Grand boulevard and Olive street, where she will conduct classes Feb. 1, 2 and 3.

The enrollment at the Mid-City alleys has been heavy and Lee Nyhof, manager, is expecting large crowds at each class. Many women who have never picked up a bowling ball have enrolled in the school.

Mrs. McCutcheon concluded her three-day stand at the Melene alleys Friday, where her classes proved highly interesting to both beginners and experienced bowlers. S. Arthur Bull, manager of the Melene alleys, who is organizing the "Post-Dispatch Beginners' League," has announced that more than 80 novices have stated their intention of competing in the league. A meeting to organize the league will be held at the Melene alleys Wednesday at 1:30 p. m. All beginners desiring to join are invited to attend the meeting.

It is not too late to enroll in the classes at the Arway and Mid-City alleys. Just fill out the accompanying coupon and send it to the alley at which you desire to take instructions.

BRUNSMANN DEFEATS MRS. M'CUTCHEON IN MATCH, 1107 TO 939

Ervin Brunsmann, South Side tenpin star, defeated Mrs. Floretta McCutcheon, women's world champion, 1107 to 939 in a special five-game match at the Arway alleys last night.

Each of Brunsmann's games was over the 200 mark, his high being 237 and low 201, while Mrs. McCutcheon had a bad start, rolling but 145 in her first game. She reached her top form in the final 10 frames, however, scoring 233, but even in that game she was unable to beat Brunsmann, who shot 235. Mrs. McCutcheon tied Brunsmann in one game, the third, when they each had 201.

Brunsm'n 202 237 201 232 235—1107
Mrs. McC. 145 207 201 153 233— 939

Correct Way to Throw Bowling Ball Is Told by World Champion

Never Release Sphere With Palm Up Is Advice of Mrs. McCutcheon—Number of Steps Taken Is Not Arbitrary, She Declares.

Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, woman bowling champion, is telling Post-Dispatch readers in a series of ten articles, some inside facts that will be useful to both men and women bowlers. This is the first time Mrs. McCutcheon has written such a series for publication. The fourth chapter follows:

LESSON NO. 4.

By Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon,
World's Champion Woman Bowler.

A good delivery is the foundation of good bowling. Practice your delivery until it is smooth and machine-like. The number of steps you take in approaching the foul line is not arbitrary, but it is essential that the right-handed bowler end at the foul line with the left foot not more than six inches back of the foul line.

The simplest delivery to learn is the three-step. In this delivery, you start with the left foot and as you take the first step, you push your ball forward and slightly down. With the second step, you take your left hand from the bottom of the ball down to your left side and let the weight of the bowling ball swing your right arm down and back. With your third step, let your hand swing forward and release the ball at the bottom of the swing, being careful to allow the ball to roll off the thumb first.

Also be sure to bend your left knee as well as your back when delivering your ball. Bend low enough so that you can really lay your ball on the alley and not drop it.

Point your thumb where you want your ball to go. In order to point the thumb correctly, bring your arm up in the natural position in which it swings at the side. Do not hold the palm of the hand upward. It is just as unnatural to bowl with the palm of the hand up as it would be to walk with the palm of the hand forward.

Bowling with the palm of the hand upward puts a reverse spin on your ball. The ball released with the thumb pointed in the correct manner will come in with a natural hook.

It is essential not only to point your thumb while you release the ball, but after you realize it as well, being sure to follow through as far as you can reach down the alley.

When you know how to deliver the ball, the next thing is to know where to deliver it. This will be discussed next.

The Hermanns increased their lead to seven games in the A. B. C. League at the Washington alleys last week by winning the odd game from the second place Schapers. Sam Garofalo did the best work for the Hermanns with 670. Although Lee Martin hit 704 and Pat Spencer 664, the Witter Razz dropped the odd game to the Charles Krons who were led by Erv Brunsmann 677 and Frank Kastner 637.

"Windy" Glaub, who has been hitting the pins at a 225 clip for the past three weeks, pounded out 695 in the A. B. C. League, but his team, the Guthrey Alexanders, were whitewashed by the Wooster Lamberts, who were led by Roy Nelson with 671. In the Major City League last week, Glaub hit 705 with a high count of 287. He lost the weekly prize by one pin when Fred Taff toppled 706 for the Gus Krons.

In a special five-game match at Rogers Recreation yesterday, E. C. Coyle of the Union Electric Co. Bowling League defeated V. Seeger of the same league with a total of 890 to 784. Seeger was off form and at the end of the fourth game was 115 pins behind and was unable to gain much in the last game of the match.

The first half of a six-game total-pin match series will be rolled at the Saratoga Recreation in Maplewood starting at 2:30 p. m. this afternoon between the Clayton Recreations and the Saratogas. The Maplewood team will consist of Walter Phillips, Wallie Grueber, Jack Woods, Clarence Stein and Ted Menze. The final three games will be rolled at Clayton next Sunday.

STEFTER AND KEUHN TO MEET ON WEEGE'S NEXT WRESTLING CARD

According to an announcement given out by Promoter Herbert W. Weege last night, the date of the next wrestling show has been postponed from Feb. 6 to Feb. 20. Weege stated that due to arrangements of his supporting card, he will be unable to present his show as announced for Feb. 6 at his last wrestling show. It has already been planned to match Les Stefter and Charlie Keuhn in the headliner of one fall to a finish. Weege expects to match Frank Smith of Milwaukee and Joe Brungard in the semi-windup. Smith appears to be the only gladiator willing to meet the aggressive Brungard, so it will be Weege's job to bring Smith to terms. The coming show will be made up of five matches.

By the Associated Press.

After taking the lead in the first inning and losing it in the sixth, the California redhead recovered and ran away from the veteran from Detroit. His high run was six, and along with it he had three clusters of five and went out with an unfinished string of four. Jackson's best inning produced three.

Tiff Denton of Kansas City and Allen Hall of Chicago will meet in the opener, with Jackson and Frank Scoville of Buffalo, N. Y., following. Augie Kieckhefer of Chicago and Johnny Layton of Sedalia, Mo., old rivals, will tangle in the night match.

Hall and Arthur Thurnblad, also of Chicago, won today's afternoon matches.

CHARACTER, FLORIDA DERBY HOPE, WINS FIFTH RACE IN ROW

GOLD STEP AND JOCKEY GILBERT AGAIN A GOOD COMBINATION

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Character, son of Carlaris, owned by Isadore Bieber's B. B. Stable, once again gave evidence that he will be an outstanding factor in the Florida Derby when he won the $2500 Hialeah Stakes over six furlongs today. The Derby, a $10,000 event, will be run at Hialeah Park March 11.

In accounting for his fifth straight victory and his third at the Miami oval, the speedy three-year-old scored in a convincing style, defeating, among others, four other candidates for the Derby. Quoted at even money, Character beat M. L. Schwartz's Gold Basis by a length and a half. J. E. Widener's The Pelican was shut out of the place in the closing strides.

Alfred Robertson got the B. B. standard bearer away in front and he was never headed as he covered the distance in the good time of 1:12 1-5. Likueur tried to run with the winner but faded early and The Pelican forced the remainder of the pace, although never close enough to be really dangerous.

The other Derby candidates—Jungle King, Helios, Redress and Daudet—finished out of the money.

Gold Step added another victory to his triumphs in the Inaugural and Seminole handicaps when he accounted for the Ponce de Leon purse over six furlongs at New Orleans.

Johnny Gilbert, the country's leading jockey, was again in the saddle, and he had little trouble bringing the six-year-old gelding home in front of Joseph E. Widener's Mr. Sponge. Con Amore was third.

Gilbert also won with Chief John in the mile fifth event to complete a double for the day.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's eight-year-old campaigner, Pigeon Hole, merely toyed with a field of younger rivals in the Jose Marti Handicap at Oriental Park, Havana. He finished the one and one-sixteenth miles four lengths in front of J. E. Smallman's Deedie, with Cambridgeshire third.

The Southland Stable's Playtime set a rapid pace from the barrier to win the Pontchartrain Handicap at New Orleans. Well ridden by E. Arcaro, the six-year-old son of My Play crossed the line an easy winner over Mrs. Clyde Phillips' Lei, an outsider. Mrs. M. W. Thompson's Hillsborough was third as the Shandon Farm's At Top, winner of the Jefferson Park Derby, finished among the also rans.

Club Owners Who Sing Depression Blues, Likely to Write 1933 History in Red Ink

Pie Traynor, Pittsburgh Star, Thinks Salary Adjustments Should Be Made Without So Much Wailing.

By J. Roy Stockton.

"Pie" Traynor proves that after all there IS something in a name—in a nickname, at any rate.

Harold "Pie" Traynor, captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the best third baseman in baseball and one of the smartest and most engaging gentlemen in the national game, thinks that club owners who are singing the "Depression Blues" are making a grave mistake. They don't know their psychology, Pie suggests, or they would not be doing so much talking about salary cuts, payroll slashes and overhead whittling.

"It's bad for the customers and very bad for the athletes," Pie declared. "I've done some traveling this winter and I believe there has been more talk about salary cuts in St. Louis than in any other city. That isn't going to help the receipts at Sportsman's Park next summer. If the fans have it drummed into them all winter that the crowds are going to be small, they may be persuaded that they should stay away from ball games as one quick way to curtail their expenditures.

"Then there's another danger. Constant crying about the necessity of reducing the overhead, and news that this player has been traded because of his high salary and that fellow dissatisfied because of a sliced salary, will make the public wonder if the baseball is going to be inferior. Of course, if you're lucky enough to have a winner, the fans can't complain on that score, but if the team does a tail spin, the customers will be quick to blame it on what they will consider a niggardly financial policy.

Adjustments Necessary.

"Of course it has been necessary to make readjustments in baseball, to meet changing conditions. But reductions, it seems to me, could be made without all the crying. I took a cut last year without moaning because crowds were smaller and I knew the owners couldn't pay me unless they took in the money at the gate.

"But while we didn't draw very large crowds last season, our club has had salary increases which will more than offset any cuts. I was signed for 1933 before the 1932 season ended, without any cut. Larry French has been given a raise and the Waners, Vaughan, Piet, Grace and Swift have been given raises or contracts without reductions.

"Consider what that will mean to the club's morale, which already had been improved no little by the deal that made Freddie Lindstrom a Pirate. If we can find one more good pitcher Pittsburgh will be hard to beat in that pennant race.

"Who do I expect to be in the race? Well, you can't count the Cardinals out. If things go well with the St. Louis club it will be in the thick of the fight all the way. However, if Gelbert is not available for duty, the Cardinals will be wise if they go out and get a shortstop. I don't believe Frisch will want to play short. It's no easy matter to shift from second or third to short and make a go of it.

Traynor Failed at Short.

"They tried to make a shortstop out of me, but I couldn't make the grade. I could play on a slow infield, where I had a chance to get in front of each drive. But on a fast field I found it impossible to make the stop and get into throwing position in time to get my man. Of course if you get a man when he is young enough you can do it. Lindstrom broke into the big league as a second baseman. But the Giants had Frisch at second and so Lindstrom went to third. He was young enough to make the shift. But now, after he has played in the outfield, he tells me he is through as a third baseman. Terry tried him at third for a time last year and Lindstrom couldn't make the grade.

"I believe that Pat Crawford will win a regular job with the 1933 Cardinals. He always was a good hitter and in the last year he has improved his defensive game to such an extent that I will be missing my guess if Pat doesn't beat Collins out of that first base position. There's no question about Collins' ability as a hitter, but I believe Crawford will be more consistent and more valuable in a season's play.

"New York has too many weak spots to be considered dangerous in the 1933 race. Even if Jackson could come back at short, the club still would be too weak to win a pennant.

"Chicago's big task will be to prevent the collapse of the team's morale, as a result of the beating and ragging at the hands of the Yankees. Because of that danger, I don't figure that the Cubs will be as dangerous in the flag race as the Cardinals.

One More Pitcher Needed.

"Just one more good crackerjack pitcher is all we need at Pittsburgh to make us a standout in the race. We ought to be much improved over last year. Vaughn will be better at short and Piet doesn't have to be any better. I think he is a great second baseman. You hear it suggested that left handers will beat us out of the pennant, but we'll be much stronger against southpaws than we were last year. It is true that we were southpawed out of the race in 1932. In New York it was Hubbell, Walker, Mooney and Mitchell. In Brooklyn we saw Clark, Shaute and Heimach and in Boston, Brandt usually worked against us twice in each series.

"But we'll have Lindstrom in left field and he can hit those southpaws. Then when we face left-handers we can move Paul Waner to first base and put Comorosky in the outfield. That will make a big difference."

Traynor was asked if he attributed the Pirate collapse last summer to the presence on the team of two young infielders—Vaughan at short and Piet at second.

Vaughan O. K.

"No, indeed," he replied. "They played as well while we were losing as they had while we were fighting out way to first place. Vaughan was playing his first year, just a youngster. He made 44 errors during the season and they were spread out evenly through the season. While we were winning, he was making an error now and then, but we were hitting, making enough runs to win in spite of those boots. When we ran into a hitting slump and our pitchers felt the strain of overwork, Vaughan was still making his occasional error, and they were noticed more by the writers because we were losing.

"Vaughan, however, is a fine prospect. He kept his head up during the losing streak, just as Piet did, and he's going to be a great shortstop."

How did Traynor get his nickname of "Pie?"

"It was this way," he explained. "When I was a youngster at Somerville, Mass., too small to play ball, I used to help out by searching for lost balls in a stretch of woods near the ball field. The team had two baseballs and usually one was in play and I was searching for the other in the woods. The head man of the team used to take me to a confectionery after the game and ask me what I wanted, as a reward for my searching in the woods. I invariably replied that I'd take a piece of pie. Soon he was calling me 'Pie-face,' soon it was shortened to 'Pie,' and I've carried the nickname ever since."

Traynor has been spending the winter in St. Louis, working for a patent medicine company. He plans to depart Wednesday for California, where the Pirates will do their spring training.

FOREST PARK—Sunshine Laundry vs. St. Ambros Y. M. S.; Grace Athletic Club vs. German Sport Club No. 2.

By Herman Wecke.

Two division championships in the Municipal Soccer League are likely to be decided in matches to be played this afternoon. At Sherman Park, the Democrats need only a tie against the C. B. C. Alumni to go into the elimination series for the city title, while at Carondelet, the German Sports Club will be the winner if the team wins from the La Sociedad club. This young Spanish club may prove troublesome, since the teams went to a scoreless draw in the last meeting.

There is no possibility for the titles to be decided in the three Fairground groups in which ties for first place exist. These are divisions No. 2, 3 and 5. In each of the groups, the clubs, which are battling for a place in the title series, are paired with weaker aggregations.

The regular schedule in the league comes to a close with the playing of one more round. In case of a tie in any of the groups, these will be played off on Feb. 12, with the eliminations starting a week later.

Stix Club Crippled for Game With Miller Eleven.

The Stix club, leader in the St. Louis Soccer League, will be crippled for its match with the Ben Millers, which will open today's doubleheader at Sportsman's Park, starting at 1:45 o'clock. The Andersons and Phil Kavanaugh's Coca-Colas fight it out in the second battle.

Three regulars of the Stix, Alec McNab, Eddie Flavin and Ollie Bohlman will be on the side lines as a result of injuries suffered in last week's cup match. The veteran McNab, who serves as coach of the club, may do some experimenting in an effort to gain a line on his athletes for coming cup matches.

There is a possibility that Bill Lehman will be given a chance at left fullback. Jimmy Nolan has capably filled the position, but McNab wants to be protected in case of an injury. Harry Hebberger will play halfback in place of Bohlman. Frank Pastor will be at outside right, while the other forwards to pair with Nilsen and McLean will be picked from Hart, Roe and Ahrens.

Larry Coughlin, forward of the Millers, automatically suspended for being ejected from the cup game with the Andersons, has been reinstated by Winton Barker, Western Commissioner, upon payment of a fine of $5.

The Andersons will show their strongest front against the Kavanaughs, since it will be the last game for the club before its second round cup match here, the following Sunday. Ray Egan probably will be out of the Kavanaugh lineup because of a bad cut on his chin.

St. Louis Interested in Result of 3 Cup Games.

Three first round cup matches of interest to St. Louis are scheduled to be played today. In two of the battles, clubs which will furnish opposition for St. Louis' survivors are scheduled to play. The Maccabees of Chicago and Sons of Malta of Detroit, meet in an effort to reach a definite result, following last Sunday's 2-2 draw. The winner is scheduled to oppose the Andersons.

At Milwaukee, the Jugo-Slav Americans and Deutscher Sport club will battle for the second time. The Jugo-Slavs won last Sunday, 1 to 0, but a protest filed by the Milwaukee eleven was allowed and the match ordered replayed. This Stix club is scheduled to oppose the winner of this match in the second round.

In another interesting game, the Bricklayers and Swedish-Americans play in Chicago, the winner to play Sparta, another Windy City entry.

With everything "up in the air" the chances are that the Andersons will not play in the second round until Feb. 12, with the Stix going into action, Feb. 19.

Walsh to Talk.

Charles Walsh, football coach at St. Louis University, will be among the speakers at a meeting of the South Side Sodality League this morning at Goeller Hall, 812 Allen avenue. Trophies will be presented to championship teams of the league.

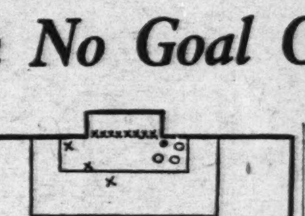
English Soccer Referee Explains Free Kicks From Which No Goal Can Be Scored

Captain Prince-Cox Brings One Out of 'Moth Balls' Which He Admits He Has Never Seen in His Career

Official Declares It Is Amazing How Few Players Know Laws of Game Covering This Angle.



No. 7.

By A. J. Prince-Cox.
Former English International Referee.

In this article I am going to write about free kicks from which goals cannot be scored. One of the most amazing things about my refereeing career was the number of players who did not know when they could or could not score from a free kick, and when I have been lecturing young referees the same weakness has been shown.

The first free kick from which a goal cannot be scored direct is one which has never occurred in the whole of my refereeing experience, and which I doubt very much you will have to contend with. This is the case of a penalty kick that does not send the ball forward. The laws clearly state that a penalty kick must be kicked forward. As players taking this kick nearly always aim for goal there is little fear of this rule being broken.

The next case is very common, but there is little danger of a goal being scored direct, except in unusual circumstances and, strangely enough, I have had an experience of this kind. When a player charges at a goalkeeper at the wrong time (when he has not got the ball and is in his own goal area) no goal can be scored from that free kick.

Here's a Real Problem.

You will readily realize that it is almost impossible for a free kick to be taken in one goalmouth and the ball to be sent into the other net. But think for a moment of a defender taking such a free kick and the wind being so strong as to carry the ball back and into his own net. This is a very good problem. What would you give? It is not a goal, it is a corner kick. This is the problem that was presented to me in a last season's match.

When the goalkeeper carries the ball too far a free kick is awarded but no goal can be scored direct. Now this matter is one of the most difficult with which a referee has to deal. Players either will not, or do not know how to conform to the law. Every player of the defending side must be 10 yards from the ball—but he is not compelled to go outside the field of play.

So much confusion has been caused by this problem that I am giving a diagram which shows how I think defending players should protect their goal for such a kick, and it further illustrates exactly what is allowed. The defending players are shown by X and the attacking players by large circles. The ball is shown as a dot.

Some teams made the foolish mistake of leaving their goal entirely unprotected. Every man was taken away to the 10 yards limit. They argued that if a goal could not be scored direct then all they needed to do was to get out of the way and so prevent the kicker from shooting and making the ball carom off one of their players and into the net. What they forgot was that the kicker only needed to pass to a colleague, who could stand as near as he pleased, and the second man could shoot into the net.

Cites Some More Angles.

A goal cannot be scored direct from the free kick awarded because of offside nor can a goal come from a goal kick. The problem which I mentioned earlier on is very similar to the old chestnut of a goalkick that is blown back by the wind. It can be taken as a general rule that if one side cannot score from a free kick, then the other side cannot put through their own goal and have a goal awarded against them for that type of kick. The laws apply both ways.

Dangerous play brings a free kick from which the ball must go to a second man before a goal can be scored.

When the ball is twice played by the same man at a penalty kick or with any kind of free kick, no goal can come from the ensuing free kick the other way.

When the referee drops the ball and it is played before it reaches the ground a free kick is awarded but no goal can come from it.

If the man who throws in the ball plays it a second time, or even plays the man, before the ball is played by a second player, then a non-scoring free kick is given.

A player who leaves the field and returns without permission from the referee earns a free kick of this nature.

Ungentlemanly conduct brings a non-scoring free kick.

This is an article of cold facts, but they are important facts and that is why I set them out in such detail.

Answer to Last Problem.

Now to solve the problem of last week; that of the interfering spectator. Though a goal looked certain, the referee could not award a goal. Only when the ball has crossed the goal-line between the posts and under the bar is a goal scored. That ball did not cross the line. But there is another law which applies to this point. It is clearly laid down that no person other than players and linesmen are allowed on the field of play without the referee's permission. The moment an outsider comes over the touchline or goal-line the referee must stop the game. He would then throw the ball down in that spot. Bad luck I will admit, but the laws are clear upon the point.

This week I give a little problem that is perfectly easy. It was given to me by the captain of Wales, Fred Keenor, and it was surprising how many people worried about it and did not see the answer. A goalkeeper dashes from his goal and fists the ball clear. It was a very hard clearance and the ball went bouncing down the field and into the net of the opposing side. The opposing goalkeeper made no attempt to save. What was the ruling? Was it a goal?

38 PLAYERS IN BILLIARD MEET, STARTING TODAY

Charles C. Peterson, local billiard expert, last night announced the week's program for the Greater St. Louis all-round billiard championship to be held, Feb. 6 to 11, inclusive, in the exhibition room at Peterson's Billiard Academy. The eliminations start today. Thirty-eight have entered the tournament, but only eight will survive for the finals.

The championship will begin tomorrow and end on Saturday. Each evening fans will be entertained with one or more styles of billiards. The event will start off with a three-cushion competition. Red ball comes next, while the third night's play will be at the French corner game. This game is new here, but is very essential in an all-round championship. The angle system is featured in the corner game and requires the contestants to play numerous bank shots.

On the fourth night, ball to ball billiards will be contested, this being a combination of straight rail and balkline. Four different styles will be featured the final two nights. Peterson has arranged for the players to display their wares at fancy shots and cushion-caroms one night, while the final performance will be at pocket billiards and on the oval tables.

In the championship competition, a billiardist who finishes first one evening will receive three points; second, two points and third, one point, and the player with the highest number of points at the finish will be awarded the title.

Arthur Thurnblad of Chicago gained an even break for eight matches by defeating Frank Scoville of Buffalo, N. Y., 50 to 24, in 51 innings. The victor had a high run of only four, but collected frequent sets of two and three. Scoville, who trailed all the way, had a best cluster of five. The defeat was Scoville's fifth in eight matches.

TURNER BASKETBALL LEAGUE IN FOURTH ROUND OF PLAY

The District Turner Basketball League will swing into its fourth round of play this afternoon when the men's and girls' teams of Concordia play the Southwest quintets at Concordia gym, 1301 Arsenal street, and the men's, girls' and junior fives of Tower Grove engage the North St. Louis Turners at the latter's gym, Twentieth and Salisbury.

The Southwest men's team are favored to win, as they lead the league with two victories and no defeats, while Concordia has a record of one triumph and one loss. The girls' team of Concordia, however, has a clean slate of two victories, while the southwest girls have dropped one of the two games played.

The North Side Turners are expected to make the best showing in the North St. Louis-Tower Grove engagements as the men's team are tied with Southwest for the league lead, while the juniors have an undisputed hold on first place in their section.

Starting time is 1:30.

C. B. C. Basket Team Gains Third Victory in Week

The Christian Brothers College basketball team recorded its third victory in a week by defeating Missouri Military Academy, 37 to 19, last night at C. B. C. Jack Sullivan, the Brothers' right forward, scored nine field goals and a free throw for 19 points.

Much of the Brothers' success last week can be attributed to the fine team work of Sullivan and Gene O'Sullivan, the other forward. Gene feeds Jack so well that Sullivan has scored 57 points in the last three games—28 against Cleveland and 10 against McBride, which is an average of 19 points for the three games.

It was not until the last quarter that the Mexico (Mo.) representatives were overwhelmed. C. B. C. led at the quarter, 6—4; at the half, 12—7, and at the three-quarters, 20 to 10. Then in the last period Sullivan began dropping the ball in with deadly accuracy, the result being that the winners amassed 17 points to nine for Missouri Military.

"Be Tobacco wise - When I don't see White Owl, I ask for it"

That significant word to the wise comes straight from any man who knows three inside facts:

Fact No. 1: White Owl costs the manufacturer more to make than the ordinary run of nickel cigars.

Fact No. 2: The dealer pays more for it.

Fact No. 3: For over three years the General Cigar Co., Inc., has been assembling and mellowing the greatest treasure store of choice American leaf ever available for a cigar. And this is the tobacco you enjoy in the 1933 White Owl.

Enough said. It is plain to see why it is tobacco wise for you to ask for White Owl whenever it is not in sight at the cigar case.

Here and There on the Air

By J. L. S.

AN HOUR of musical comedy may occupy the time of the Hour of Dance music programs Saturday nights on KSD. If the plan goes through, "Good News" will be the first broadcast. . . . Al Jolson will broadcast from Miami Beach for a couple of weeks. . . . Incidents in the lives of the great and the near-great are being dramatized by the WSM players at 8 o'clock Wednesday nights. . . . Cliff Soubier's Old Pappy programs have been revived on WMAQ at 5:45 Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays . . . . WMAQ is featuring its Theater of Romance one-act plays, at 9 o'clock Monday nights. . . . WBBM is reviving its Tales of the Foreign Legion, at 4:30 Sunday. Willis O. Cooper plays Mendoza, the Spanish legionaire. John C. Daily, the radio "Fu Manchu," and Vincent Haworth, the Jack Arnold of the Myrt and Marge Sketches, also have roles in the WBBM playlets. . . . Morton Downey shifts this week to 9:45 p. m. Thursday and 9 p. m. Saturdays. He also will be featured on the Columbia Revue at 10 p. m. Mondays. . . . Ben Bernie is to be interviewed during the Farm and Home Hour at 11:30 Wednesday morning, on WJZ chain stations. . . .

Easy Aces are changing to a new schedule, at 8 o'clock Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights. . . . Whispering Jack Smith and the Humming Birds are preparing to add a Thursday program to their CBS chain schedule. . . . The Columbia Revue will shift from 10:30 to 10 o'clock Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. . . . George Jessel probably will replace Jimmy Wallington as "straight man" when Eddie Cantor goes on a road trip through the South.

Coolidge Memorial To Be Broadcast.

PLANS for a "Technocracy" talk by Howard Scott fell through when Scott insisted that he must have 45 minutes to present his case adequately and CBS chain officials replied that scheduling of other programs made it impossible to allot him more than 15 minutes at the time proposed. . . . The WEAF and CBS networks will broadcast the Calvin Coolidge memorial service at a joint session of Congress for an hour and a half, beginning at 10:45 Monday morning, Feb. 6. . . . The increasing number of radio talks by persons of prominence is attributed by broadcasters to growth in popular interest in political, economic and industrial problems. Three to six hours of time daily are devoted to discussions of current questions by the three networks.

All-Michigan Chain Organized.

WEBQ, Harrisburg, Ill., will broadcast its annual "DX" program on 1210 kilocycles from 8:30 p. m., Feb. 1, to 9:00 a. m. Feb. 2. . . . Chief Examiner Yost has recommended to the Radio Commission that WFIW, Hopkinsville, Ky., be permitted to move studios and transmitter to Louisville. . . . Two California stations, KTM and KELW, Los Angeles, which are under option to William Randolph Hearst, have been allowed to remain on the air after Chief Examiner Yost recommended that they be eliminated as failing to serve the public interest. . . . Starting Tuesday, WXYZ, Detroit, will be key of an all-Michigan chain, the other five link stations being in Grand Rapids, Jackson, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo and Flint. Rumors in the East are that this chain may some day become part of a third network, plans for which are said to be backed by Ed Wynn, the comedian. Wynn has established the Amalgamated Broadcasting Corporation, to supply radio program service and performers. It is said that he hopes to make it the center of a country-wide series of stations.

Where to Tune Stations.

STATIONS listed in program notes on this page may be tuned in order on the following channels:

KSD, 550 kilocycles; WOW, 590 WDAF, 610; WSM, 650; WEAF, key of the WEAF chain, 660; WMAQ, 670; WLW, 700; WGN, 720; WSB, 740; WJR, 750; WJZ, key of the WJZ chain, 760; WBBM, 770; WBAP-WFAA, 800; WCCO, 810; WHAS, 820; KOA, 830; WABC, key of the CBS chain, 860; WENR, 870; KMBC, 950; KDKA, 980; WOC-WHO, 1000; KYW, 1020; KTHS-KRLD, 1040; KMOX, 1090; WOWO, 1160; WIL, 1200; KWK, 1350.

KSD is in the WEAF chain; KMOX, in the CBS chain, and KWK in the WJZ chain. WGN, WBBM, WCCO, WHAS, KMBC and WOWO, are CBS chain stations. The others listed are usually in one or other of the two NBC networks, but WMAQ, WENR, KYW, WSM and WLW carry some programs of both NBC chains.

Chains' Plans For Inaugural.

ALL three chains are preparing to broadcast the inauguration continuously from 8 a. m. to 3 p. m. on March 4 and to describe the inaugural ball, from 9 to 10 p. m. Fifteen ground microphones, three mobile short wave transmitters on the ground, one in the dirigible Akron and another in the army's laboratory airplane, 32 engineers, 10 announcers and 12 "observers" will be used by the N. B. C. at the ceremonies. A short wave car will follow Mr. Roosevelt's car in the parade, and two announcers, carrying "pack transmitters" strapped to their backs, will mingle with the crowds on the streets and in the corridors of the Capitol. Big parabolic microphones along the line of march will "pick up" the crowd noise and the music of the bands. Plans of the CBS network are equally elaborate. Virtually all of the chains' leading "reporters" and "news commentators" will take part in the broadcasting.

Network Gossip, New Programs.

FRED WARING'S PENNSYLVANIANS will be featured with a comedian in a new series at 10 o'clock Wednesday nights on the CBS network, beginning Feb. 8. Waring's orchestra is about the last of the better known dance organizations to "go radio." . . . Roxy is out of the hospital, but may go to Europe for a rest before resuming his duties in Radio City and with Roxy's Gang on the air. Rumors that he has resigned persist and are as persistently denied. . . . Nine of the CBS chain daytime programs are to come from the new studios of WCAU, in Philadelphia. One will bring a dance orchestra led by Cab Calloway's sister. . . . "The Sizzlers," three youths from Barnesville, O., who feature a peculiar rhythm, got their first network chance on a recent Rudy Vallee program. They are to begin a WJZ chain series tomorrow night and one on the WEAF net, Tuesday night. . . . Edwin C. Hill will bring Jerome Kern, the musical comedy composer, before the microphone in an "Inside Stories" broadcast at 8:30 Friday night on the CBS chain. . . . Sherman and Pratt, two of the original "Three Doctors," will be featured with Vincent Lopez' orchestra in a WJZ chain series at 9:15 Sunday nights, beginning Feb. 5. They plan to burlesque a legislative body in session. . . . Nino Marini, who sings with Howard Barlow's symphony orchestra on WABC and a few CBS stations at 10 o'clock nights, is said to be able to reach F above "high C." . . . Edith Mason, the former St. Louisan who sang with the Chicago Opera Co., won an ovation in the title role in "Madame Butterfly" at the Royal Opera in Rome, Italy, the night of Jan. 24. She received 15 curtain calls. Her husband is Giorgio Pollaco, the conductor. . . . The Ben Bernie-Walter Winchell radio controversy has been called off by Winchell's sponsor—after both of them reaped plenty of extra publicity out of it. . . . Ed East and Ralph Dumke are reviving their Sisters of the Skillet series on the WJZ chain, at 1:45 weekdays.

String Quartet Concerts on Mondays.

The gay second act of "The Marriage of Figaro" will be sung during the symphonic concert at 3:15 Tuesday on KMOX and the CBS chain. . . . The Savitt String Quartet will play chamber music over CBS stations at 2:15 Monday afternoons. It is one of Philadelphia's best of the kind.

Youth to Supervise Inauguration Broadcast.

SUPERVISION of the rival networks' broadcasts of President Roosevelt's inauguration will fall to a youth of 30 years, Herbert L. Pettey of Kansas City, who handled all radio activities of the Democratic National Campaign Committee during the recent presidential campaign. He has been assigned to Washington as chairman of the radio subcommittee of Admiral Cary T. Grayson's Inauguration Committee. Pettey is regarded as likely to be Roosevelt's appointee to the Radio Commission to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Gen. Charles McK. Saltzman.

Majestic Distributer Moves to Washington Boulevard.

The Electric Lamp and Supply Co., Majestic distributer, has moved its headquarters from Pine street to 1900-02 Washington boulevard.

Duo-diode detection is continued for tonal quality.

Syncro-silent tuning between stations, automatic volume control, tone control are standard features.

The largest model, with an 11-tube chassis, has twin 12-inch speakers.

Social Life in the National Capital

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.

A PLACE where laughter is gay and light, where cookies are crisp and tea has a special savor is the Woman's National Democratic Club, where the leading feminine spirits of a victorious party gather on a Saturday afternoon.

There the visitor to Washington will see Nellie Tayloe Ross, former Governor and able vice-chairman; the ever-magnetic Ruth Bryan Owen, the aristocratic Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, and a dozen others being talked of these days as possibilities for important posts in the next administration.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was the honor guest. Today the reception revolved around Mrs. John N. Garner, wife of the Speaker of the House and Vice-President-elect. Few women worked harder in the campaign than Mrs. Garner. But few were more secluded from the public eye. Not many woman Democrats have had opportunity to meet her socially—in fact, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President-elect, has not yet met Mrs. Garner.

With Washington still in official mourning, art and music affairs, to which even Mrs. Hoover may go with propriety, have become more and more scintillating. Mrs. Townsend's Wednesday morning musicale had brilliant artists in the audience as well as on the stage. Walter Gieseking, famous pianist, listened to Myrna Hess, famous woman pianist. At a Friday night showing of sculptures by Durig, who has modeled President Hoover, Mrs. Hoover and Mussolini, many here had opportunity to view their own images, among them Paul Claudel, Ambassador of France.

LAST STREET WIDENING ORDINANCE REPEALED

Halts Vandeventer Avenue Improvement Between Aldine and Kennerly.

The last of a group of 12 ordinances to repeal street widening and opening plans was passed by the Board of Aldermen at a special meeting yesterday. It halts the plan for widening Vandeventer avenue, between Aldine and Kennerly avenues, a distance of seven blocks.

This will be the only gap in widened Vandeventer, between Natural Bridge and Tower Grove avenues. The plan to widen one remaining section of Vandeventer, between Tower Grove and Kingshighway, never has been initiated.

Nine of the repealers, which were approved 10 days ago by the Aldermanic Streets Committee, were passed on Jan. 20 by suspension of the rules. Two others, approved in committee at the same time, were deferred for a property owners' movement in support of the improvements, which did not materialize. They were passed last Friday by suspension of the rules, leaving the Vandeventer bill for action in ordinary course.

The other two covered the establishment of the McCausland-Manhattan-Wellington boulevard. between Manchester and Leamington avenues, an important link in a circumferential thoroughfare, and the widening of Canterbury avenue, between McCausland and the city limits.

When the committee approved the 12 repealers it was announced it also had acted favorably on repeal of a plan to open Maury avenue, between Oleatha and Tholozan avenues. However, it was learned yesterday that the measure before the committee was an original bill for the improvement and the committee's action was to kill it.

Yesterday's special aldermanic session was called for second reading of the board's bill to submit charter amendments at the April election for revision of the street widening and opening condemnation system. A special committee, which handled the bill, formally approved it yesterday. The measure is expected to be passed tomorrow by suspension of the rules

CHILD WELFARE GROUP BACKS CONSOLIDATION MEASURES

Secretary Alt Support Merger of Charities and Corrections and Eleemosynary Boards.

The proposed consolidation of the State Board of Charities and Corrections with the Eleemosynary Board would have the effect of a unified State social welfare department, in the opinion of Herschel Alt, secretary of the Child Welfare Committee of the Missouri State Conference for Social Welfare.

Alt said the plan would make possible the development of a generalized field service under the direction of specialists in each type of activity, and would prevent wasteful duplication of effort. The Child Welfare Committee thought, Alt said, that the development of one strong State department administering institutional and non-institutional welfare services was a sound move.

The State Board of Charities and Corrections performs the following services: guardianship through the State Home and foster home placement; inspection of maternity homes, children's institutions and child-placing agencies; administration of mothers' pensions; supervision of county poor relief; development and supervision of superintendents of public welfare; inspection of almshouses and jails; juvenile probation. About 600 children are wards of the State.

ORCHID SHOW OPEN FOR TWO WEEKS MORE

Shaw's Garden Drew 370,361 Last Year—Gray Summit Extension Renamed.

The orchid show, which will continue for two more weeks at Shaw's Garden, reaches its finest today with the addition of 250 plants, including many rarities, from the 1600-acre arborteum at Gray Summit.

Pink moth orchids from the Philippines, outstanding in the Dwight Davis collection and shown last year for the first time here, are displayed on one of the orchid stages and also, with naturalistic effect, on trees. Others new to the display are the tall Australian nun orchid, so named for its white hood, and the saucy yellow Panamanian dancing girl.

Brasso-Cattleyas, most opulent of the hybrids, have been introduced in the yellow Baroness and the more familiar mauves. Both types of Andean Cattleyas have been augmented—the mauve Tulipans and the paler Flores de Mayo, which, blooming later, are just beginning to fill the Floral Display House with their fragrance.

The adoption of the name, "Missouri Botanical Garden Arboretun' for the Gray Summit tract, where all the orchids for the city shows are grown in 11 special greenhouses, was officially noted last week in the annual report of director Dr. George T. Moore. Development had gone too far on this show place of future St. Louis, he explained, to retain the casual designation, "Gray Summit Extension."

Denoting a growth undreamed of when Henry Shaw gave his small but distinguished garden to the people of Missouri, the report covered not only the original garden in town and the monumental project of the arboretum, but also the tropical station at Balboa, made this year into "one of the best kept and most beautiful spots in the Canal Zone."

Another thing undreamed of in Shaw's day as a St. Louis hardware merchant, equipping covered wagons for the Santa Fe and Oregon trails—was noted in Director Moore's measurement of smoke. This deadly enemy of plants was the pressing reason for establishing the arboretum. Dr. Moore reported that scientific instruments recorded 193⅓ hours, or about 13 per cent, more sunlight at Gray Summit than in St. Louis in January, February, March, October, November and December, 1932.

Attendance at the city garden, where a series of annual shows enhances the interest of regular greenhouse and outdoor displays, was 370,361 for the year. The biggest month, as usual, was November, when 51,031 persons visited the garden, with the chrysanthemum show as the chief attraction.

GETS HERO MEDAL

EDGAR D. HEGAMIN.

Troop Notes

Central District.

Meetings of scoutmasters and their assistants were held in all the divisions of the central district during the week. Round table discussions on troop problems and district and council activities were held. A district contest between troops for the district flag will begin tomorrow and continue until April 30.

Troop 185, Rock Springs School, held a hike last Sunday to the Lions' Den. Fourteen scouts attended. Three bird houses were constructed and placed in the trees in the surrounding country.

Charles Chuckey, Frederick Schmidt, Clarence Bucher, William Treis, and William Greene, received second-class awards at a court of honor held recently by Troop 105, Humboldt School. Edward Tuholski, Frank Paraszak, and Ed Singler received tenderfoot awards, and Dan Di Nike and S. Heggerman were given merit badges.

South District.

Troop 8, formerly sponsored by the Southampton Development League has now been taken over by the Buder School Patrons' Association and will meet at that school. E. L. Kleinecke has been appointed the new scoutmaster and a new Troop Committee consisting of the Messrs. Sommer, Dickson, Neubert, Hofman and Birkes has been appointed.

The following troops in the district must re-register before Feb. 15: Troops, 15, 129, 143, 182, 183, 217, 232, 247, 248, 250.

Troop 63, Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, held an industrial hike to the Peveley Dairy last Saturday with 38 scouts taking part, a new attendance record for the troop. The next hike will be in February to police headquarters.

Nineteen scouts and six officials of Troop 68, Mount Pleasant School, went on a hike to Camp Taconic, Eureka, Mo., last week-end. The Bob White Patrol won a treasure hunt and the Reds defeated the Blues in a trailing contest held Sunday morning. Each patrol served one meal while in camp.

West District.

Troops in the West District will have their activities reported in a bulletin to be sent to each troop every quarter year. The report will take into consideration membership, advancement and troop activities and will award the district flag to a different troop for each quarter year.

Troop 70, Emerson School, has re-registered with Maurice C. Frank as scoutmaster and Marshall Matteson, assistant scoutmaster. The troop committeemen are Dr. M. H. Tessler, Rabbi M. Nodel, M. Blitz, and M. Blatt. Herman Beitch is leader of the Eagle Patrol, Adolph Kamenetzky of the Flaming Arrow Patrol, and Jerome Klayman of the Pine Tree Patrol.

At the last meeting of Troop 246 the following patrol leaders were appointed: Samuel Marcus, first patrol; David Berman, second patrol; Harry Sandler, third patrol; and Lester Greenberg, fourth patrol. Irvin Jaffee was appointed senior patrol leader and Irvin Larner and Abe Lipsitz junior assistant scontmasters.

North District.

The Silver Fox Patrol went into the lead in the inter-patrol contest of Troop 33, St. Peter's Evangelical Church, when Jack McCue, Harry Zweifel and Don Lorimer, all of that patrol, won the first three places in the "Fire by Flint and Steel" contest held at the last meeting. Standings now are Silver Fov 75, Flaming Arrow 60, Kuku 45 and Eagle 40.

Cub Notes.

Twenty-four cubs from Pack 10, Glenridge School, Clayton, will demonstrate Cub handicraft work at the Boy Scout Council dinner to be held tomorrow night at Hotel Chase. They wil lbe under the direction of C. F. Zell, cubmaster.

Former Alton Banker, 80, Dies.

O. S. Stowell, former president of the Alton Savings Bank, now merged with the Alton National Bank, died of the infirmities of age Friday at his home at Alton. He was 80 years old. Until his activities were limited by adcanced age, Mr. Stowell was superintendent of the First Presbyterian Sunday School. Early in his career he operated a stone quarry, later entering the banking field. A son and daughter survive.

NEGRO TO GET SCOUT LIFE SAVING MEDAL

Rescued Several Persons In Fire In Building Where He Operated Elevator.

The St. Louis Boy Scout Council will be indicted "for stifling individualism in youth" in a mock trial at the annuual Boy Scout banquet to be held tomorrow night in the ballroom of Hotel Chase. About 600 scouters, which includes all leaders from the scout executive to an assistant scoutmaster, will attend.

The trial, in which all of the annual reports will be given as testimony for the defense, will constitute only part of the program. Silver beavers will be awarded to four St. Louisans for "distinguished service to boyhood" and a gold medal, the highest scout award for heroism in life saving, will be bestowed upon Edgar D. Hegamin, Negro, scoutmaster of Troop 203.

Hegamin earned his award for his rescue work in a fire on May 25, 1929, in a cleaning establishment at 804 Pine street, in which he was an elevator operator. He was directly responsible for leading to safety many persons, carrying loaded cars to exits and directing others from smoke-filled stairways to an adjoining roof.

Hegamin, now employed by the Bureau for Homeless Men, Fourteenth and Pine streets, is 39 years old and lives at 4246 Finney avenue. He is the only St. Louisan ever to receive this award and has received a letter of personal commendation from Dan Beard, national Boy Scout Commissioner.

William T. Jones, president of the St. Louis Bar Association, will act as judge in the mock trial. F. M. Curlee and Harry A. Frank, St. Louis attorneys, will be the opposing lawyers for the prosecution and defense, respectively. Col. H. D. McBride, scout commissioner of the St. Louis Council, will take the role of defendant in opposition to a suit brought by "any father" and "any mother" who will charge that the scouts are not doing their duty with "any boy," a new tenderfoot scout.

Needles to say, the defendant will plead not guilty. For witnesses he will have Lester M. Hall, oldest active scoutmaster in the United States, and representatives of all scout activities. Star witnesses for the defense will be Gunnar Berg, national director of volunteer training, who will step out of the witness stand to sum up the argument for the defense. Witness for the prosecution will be a "gang leader."

The case will go to a jury, of which Foster H. Brown, attorney for the Credit Men's Association, will be foreman. The verdict is hardly in doubt.

Other numbers on the program include several musical renditions by a Negro boys' quartet from the scout troop at Bellefontaine Farms and a display pageant by Troop 98, St. Roch's Catholic Church. Election of officers will also take place.

"Three-Dimensional Photographs" in Silver, Glass, Plaster and Enamel

Mrs. "Tokio" Payne Perfects a New Painless Process for Taking Life Masks and Already Has Made Portraits of Many Celebrities.

By JACK ALEXANDER

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

A LOT of inventive progress has been made since the days of Lysistratus, the Greek sculptor who first took casts from the human form, but until the advent of a perky lady artist of Fifth avenue, who calls herself Tokio Payne, the taking of a life mask meant a major operation plus no end of bother and annoyance.

In 1825 an American plastic specialist named Browere almost earned exile because of a rumor that in making a facial cast he had nearly "suffocated" Thomas Jefferson, then a retired statesman of 82 and a national hero. The charge was later proved exaggerated, but the truth was that Jefferson actually did have a terrible time and was glad when the cast was removed, as he later confided in a note to James Madison. Washington in 1785 is reported to have cursed like a trooper and sworn he would never let another plastic artist work on him after Joseph Wright, a predecessor of Browere, smashed a cast before it was dry because he was nervous and afraid it would turn out badly. Nevertheless, Washington did submit a few years later to the art of Houdon, the eminent French sculptor.

What makes Mrs. Payne's process as simple as a facial massage is her use of a quick-drying mixture. It hardens in two minutes and that ends the sitting. The older methods required from 30 minutes to upwards of an hour. Many historical references attest the fact that it was no joke to lie on one's back for an hour with the face weighed down with plaster and one's only source of oxygen a pair of quills which had a tendency to tickle the nasal passages.

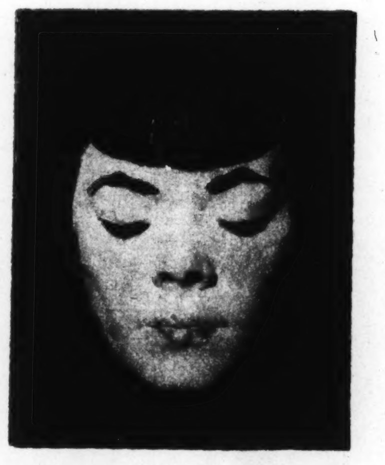
Mrs. Payne calls her work "three-dimensional photography." She makes a cast of the face and takes it to a shop where it is filled with molten bronze, Flemish silver, glass, plaster or enamel as the patron desires. When the filler has hardened, she chips off the cast, revealing the reproduced face. If it is of bronze, Flemish silver or glass she leaves it as is, a finished product. If enamel or plaster, she may touch it up with color, simulating complexion, eyebrows, lashes and lips, and adding the proper shade of hair. Ordinarily she leaves the eyes shut, as in the cast, but, on request, will reproduce them open in an extra sitting.

By far the best mask in her present exhibit in a Manhattan gallery is that of Groucho Marx. It is literally the comedian's speaking, wise-cracking, punning image, the eyes sly and wild and the familiar cigar held by lips that seem ready to burst apart in gay and joyous ribaldry. Apparently Groucho was the only subject who was well-heeled enough to be done with his eyes open, as all the others have them closed. Included in the exhibit are masks of Franklin P. Adams (F. P. A.), Walter Lippmann, Frederick H. Payne, Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Payne's father-in-law; Edward Johnson of the Metropolitan Opera; and from Broadway, Frieda Inescourt, Francis Lederer, Colin Keith-Johnson, Mrs. William Gaston (Rosamond Pinchot), Dorothy Stickney and Glenn Anders.

A WALK through the gallery alone is a little creepy, with the heavy-lidded eyes all about, seeming ready to fly open, but there is always the pop-eyed pan of Groucho to reassure the timid. To the untutored the masks seem at first to resemble the pictures of death masks seen in encyclopedias, but books of reference and Mrs. Payne herself assure the inquisitive that there is all the difference in the world. The death mask, they say, reveals the face as the world never saw it, relaxed and uncontrolled by the actor behind it.

The life mask, on the other hand, catches the subject as he wishes to be remembered by posterity—at his best, as he tries to appear before others and, therefore, as he often is seen by his contemporaries. Besides, you can see your own life mask and that's an item to be considered when it comes to laying out $100 for a plaster cast, $150 for metal or $200 for glass, which are the artist's prices.

Mrs. Payne is reticent about her work and especially about her secret process. She will confide, however, that Tokio is a nickname friends gave her in girlhood because of her Oriental cast of countenance and that she adopted it and is trying to live up to it in dress and coiffure; that her husband's name is Frederick Blake Payne; that she lives on Fifth avenue, but has a studio elsewhere in town; that she hates bridge but loves concerts. She studied sculpture at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts at Philadelphia and was a pupil of Alexander Achepinco and Maurice Stern in New York. She says she just stumbled over the formula for her plaster cast while puttering around in the studio and thought something could be done with it. She has also developed a device to insure easy breathing for the sitting. She appears quite young although the enamel cast of her son seems to be that of a youngster who objected to pinafores some time ago.



MRS. PAYNE'S SELF-PORTRAIT

The apparent youth of the woman who has almost in an instant wrought a revolutionary improvement in her chosen line stands out oddly against the antiquity of the art of mask making. The art goes beyond recorded history. Many ancient nations used to wrap the mummies of their leaders in thin gold sheets, tightly fastened, so that even where the mummy itself has withered away, the impression of the king, as of the day of his burial, has frequently appeared intact under the pick of the excavator.

The first masks made from living subjects were those by Lysistratus, but the vogue died out soon, to be revived for a time by Andrea Verocchio, an instructor of Leonardo da Vinci, who was promptly hailed as the inventor of the process.

There was a great deal of elaborate fol-de-rol when Washington's cast was taken by Jean-Antoine Houdon in 1785, the event being arranged after much polite correspondence between Madison and Benjamin Franklin, who was in Paris arranging for the sculptor's visit, and between Madison and Washington himself. Houdon finally arrived with several assistants and stayed the better part of a week at Mount Vernon.

Washington's painstaking description of the actual process of preparation, as recorded in his diary, follows, in part:

"Mon. Oct. 10th. Observed the process for preparing the Plaister of Paris, according to Mr. Houdon. The Oven being made hotter than it is usually heated for Bread, the Plaister, which has previously been broken into lumps, that which was hard, to about the size of a pullet's egg, and that which was soft, and could be broken with the hands, larger; was put in about Noon and remained until Night; when, upon examination, it was further continued until the Morning without any renewal of the heat in the oven, which was close stopped. Having been sufficiently calcined by this operation, it was pulverized (in an Iron Mortar) and sifted for use through a fine lawn sieve, and kept from wet.

"When used, it is put in a Bason, or other vessel with water; sifted through the fingers, till the water is made as thick as Loblolly, or very thick cream. As soon as the Plaister is thus put into the Water, it is beat with an Iron spoon (almost flat) until it is well mixed.

(Loblolly, by the way, is a thick oatmeal gruel).

"It must be immediately applied to the purpose for which it is intended with a Brush, or whatever best answers, as it begins to turn hard in four or five minutes, and in seven or ten cannot be used, and is fit for no purpose afterwards, as it will not bear wetting a second time."

Washington then tells in detail how to clean the brush so it may be used again.

Just what the No. 1 ranking Founding Father went through in submitting to the cast is omitted. The diary goes on:

"Oct. 12—In the evening Mr. Madison came.

"Oct. 14—Mr. Madison went away.

"Oct. 19—Mr. Houdon, having finished his business which bro't him hither, went up on Monday with his people, work and implements, in my barge, to Alexandria to take passage in the Stage for Philadelphia."

In justice to Houdon and his methods, it should be said that he was chiefly concerned with making an entire bust and the life mask was incidental.

Browere, the American, met with success in forming his National Gallery of life masks of the existing great in the early 1800's, but not without some anguish of heart, for he was sensitive to criticism and wild tales and got plenty of both. Much of his time seems to have been spent in running around and vindicating his reputation.

It was a grandson of Jefferson's who started the "suffocation" story. An octogenarian in retirement at Monticello, the old philosopher agreed to sit, or lie, for Browere, against the wishes of his family, who felt that his heart was too touchy for him to fool around with masks.

The grandson, and a couple of giggling granddaughters were excluded from the room, only the old statesman's Negro manservant being allowed to remain. The author of the Declaration of Independence was then stripped to the waist, except for his undershirt, and asked to lie on his back on a sofa. Then the plaster was smeared on his face and quills inserted in his nostrils to admit air. The exact time Jefferson was under the plaster is not known, but the whole process took an hour and a half, with interludes of 10 or 15 minutes when the old man got up and stretched his legs. It seems there was some distress involved but accounts differ. One widely publicized yarn was that Jefferson's life was saved only because he insisted on being permitted to hold onto a chair while lying on the sofa; that, when he began to choke, he made the fact known by beating on the floor with the chair; and that the Negro manservant had to be restrained from killing the sculptor.

Whatever the facts, the good people of Charlottesville were informed in a short time by a panting boy that Browere had "almost killed grandfather," partly severing the honored ears and nicking the revered skull in several places. By the time the news got up North, it had become "suffocation." There was a great deal of angry talk in the press and some issued a pamphlet, widely circulated, picturing Browere as an assassin. Browere was in misery until he got a letter from Jefferson saying that everything had been quite all right. But in a letter to Madison, Jefferson declared that he had been "taken in" by Browere's promises of a short session. It developed that Jefferson had not the heart to refuse an audience to a man who had come such a distance to do him the honor of preserving him in plaster.

EXCEPT for the Marquis de Lafayette, Browere had no difficulty in moulding the faces of other notables. Among them were: James and Dolly Madison, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, John and John Quincy Adams, Martin Van Buren and De Witt Clinton.

Lafayette was sitting patiently under the hardening mixture when an aide came rushing in with the news that he was due at a state dinner in a few minutes.

"Sacre bleu!", he is reported to have shouted, jumping to his feet and hurling the cast to the floor.

Browere retrieved the mask and found that the only damage was the loss of an eye. Later he got another audience with the Marquis and the injury was repaired.

Mrs. Payne has a short memory for the reactions and sayings of her subjects. Groucho Marx had said many funny things, none of which she remembers. "But he was very funny," she said.

F. P. A. was "very nice" and so was Francis Lederer.

"And Mr. Lippmann was so quiet," she said. "He looked just like a philosopher."

ANGORA, Turkey.

ANOTHER step in the Westernization of Turkey and the modernization of this, the republic's capital city, has been taken with the completion recently of the presidential palace. The new home of President Mustapha Kemal typifies the changes that have come over the national life since the days of the Sultans—changes for which Kemal himself has been responsible. In design, decoration and furnishings it is a part of the modern Turkey of European dress, emancipated women and religious freedom and in keeping with the developments which have transformed Angora from a dusty, primitive market town into a city of imposing public buildings, taxicabs and automatic telephones.

The new presidential palace, views of which are shown on this page, is a large, white structure of reinforced concrete, with a flat roof, embodying a good many modernistic details. Surrounded by terraces and drives, it stands on high ground and commands a view of the town and adjacent countryside. It has an open-air staircase, balconies and a rose garden with an extensive pergola.

The main hall is finished in red, silver and white, and from it doors lead to a terrace, to a winter garden and to drawing rooms, smoking rooms and card rooms. One side of the building, on the ground floor, is occupied with quarters for official uses. One of these rooms is the audience chamber, and next to it is a small salon with a gallery. The President's workroom is on the floor above. It and the library adjoining are square and furnished unostentatiously in brown wood. The President's bedroom also has plain, heavy furniture of somewhat modernistic appearance.

In the right wing of the palace are quarters for women and visitors. The apartments of the President's wife, in this part of the building, have something of the same air of simplicity that marks her husband's rooms, but exhibit, nevertheless, a feminine influence in draperies and furniture.

The winter garden, with its marble floor and lacquered furniture, is at the edge of a court about which the house is built. The court is of marble, and in it is a swimming pool, around which stands a double row of white columns.

The presidential palace was designed by Professor Clemens Holzmeister, rector of the Vienna Academy of Arts, who also was the architect for the building housing the Ministry of War. Professor Holzmeister is now engaged on a building for the Ministry of the Interior. Among other public buildings which have been erected in Angora since this city was made the Turkish capital, nearly a decade ago, is a Parliament house and a postoffice.

One of the new public structures in Angora is in marked contrast to the occidental type of buildings that have been springing up here under the Kemal regime. It is the headquarters of the Turkish Hearth Society, a cultural and nationalistic organization. Its architecture is that of old Turkey. The late "Golden Rule" Nash, Cincinnati manufacturer, gave the first $120,000 of the $1,000,000 spent in erecting this marble edifice.

ANOTHER recent improvement in the capital is a large artificial lake, completed last year. It not only is expected to provide comfort and diversion for the residents of this arid region, but, being shaped like the Black Sea, at Kemal's order, it is supposed to serve as a reminder to these people of the interior that Turkey is a maritime nation.

Since turning Turkey into a republic, whose President he has been from the beginning, Kemal has been occupied with the problem of making its citizens capable of maintaining that form of government. To do this it seemed necessary to him to revolutionize the old ways of life and make them like those of Western people. Among the measures he took to bring this about were the emancipation of women, abolition of the fez and of polygamy, establishment of religious freedom, reform of the civil and criminal codes and substitution of the Latin alphabet for the Arabic. The encouragement of Occidental architecture has been part of his plan for Westernizing the Turkish mind, and the new presidential palace may be regarded as embodying to the highest degree these ideas.

ALONG with other new speed records comes now a new record for trains. With attention focused on the latest performances of airplanes, automobiles and motor boats, a good many people had forgotten that trains carrying a hundred or more passengers are also capable of making speed. They were reminded a short time ago that trains are still in the running. And it was a European train that made them take notice. The "Flying Hamburger," Germany's new combination Diesel and electric train, also known as the Hanseatic Express, turned the trick by covering the 180.09 miles between Hamburg and Berlin in 142 minutes. That meant an average of 76.09 miles an hour, and it went into speed books as a new world record for a long run.

Many other trains, of course, have made greater spurts for short distances. As far back as 1893 the Empire State Express roared over a mile of track in 32 seconds, or at the rate of 112.5 miles an hour. In 1904 a Philadelphia & Reading train made 4.8 miles in two and a half minutes for an average speed of 115.2 miles an hour. And in more recent years many of the trains have attained speeds well over the 100-mile-an-hour clip—for short distances.

But to average 76 miles an hour for 180 miles, and to do that under everyday traffic conditions is something else again. Only one other performance seems to press it closely for first honors. That was the feat turned in by the Pennsylvania Special, which knocked off the 224.5 miles between Washington and New York at an average rate of 72 miles an hour.

THE difference of four miles an hour in favor of the Flying Hamburger is offset somewhat by the fact that the American train made a longer run and made the last 90 miles of it through the busiest rail traffic in the world. But still the German train is not to be denied supremacy. There are special circumstances to be considered in its case, too. For one thing, it averaged not 76 but 93 miles an hour for the first half of its run, and then loafed to hold down to the schedule of 142 minutes. Another consideration is that it was not a special train trying for a speed record, but a regular train which is expected to maintain a regular schedule of 142 minutes for this run from now on. It reduces by 37 minutes the rail travel time between Germany's two principal cities and by its 93-miles-an-hour sprint gives promise of reducing it more than that.

It is mainly to the streamlining of its form that engineers give credit for the Flying Hamburger's significant performance. Of course, it has an abundance of power, too. Streamlining of body without vast resources of power would not be sufficient. This German train has two 410-horsepower Diesel motors driving electric generators. These take care of the power problem, but it is streamlining that makes possible the most efficient use of the power. Not even the doorknobs project from this Flying Hamburger. Wind resistance has been reduced to an absolute minimum. At no point is a flat surface of even a square inch allowed to strike directly the backward rush of air as the train travels forward. A wide strip of metal completely encircles the train at the bottom, extending well below the axles and forming a windshield for the wheels. The front is rounded off like a torpedo, and the engine is in the middle of the train instead of at the front end.

This new German train, embodying the most advanced type of streamlining as applied to railroad trains, indicates what may be expected of railroads throughout the world in the very near future, engineers believe. Already streamlining in some degree is in evidence in the newer carriers placed in service on the leading railroads of this country as well as Germany, France and England. For some time now, ever

And Germany's New Streamlined, Diesel-Electric Driven Train Makes a Record Long-Distance Run at a 76 Mile-an-Hour Clip.

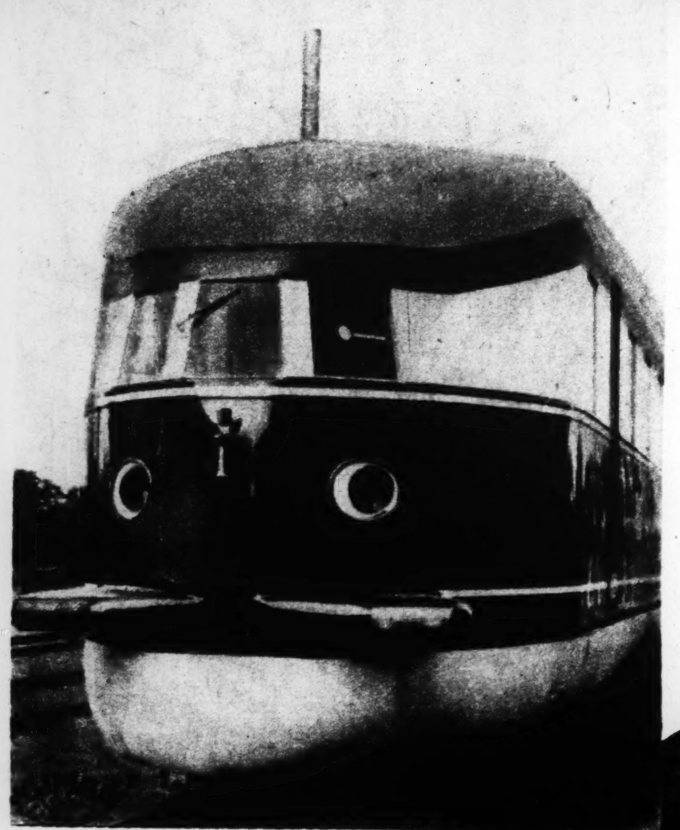
This new German train, embodying the most advanced type of streamlining as applied to railroad trains, indicates what may be expected of railroads throughout the world in the very near future, engineers believe. Already streamlining in some degree is in evidence in the newer carriers placed in service on the leading railroads of this country as well as Germany, France and England. For some time now, ever since the rapid development of the airplane and motorbus began, it has been apparent that the railroads, in order to survive at all as passenger carriers, must increase their speed.



Streamlined face of the German train.

In the past, increasing of train speed was achieved largely by increasing engine power, but this increase of power has been disproportionately large and expensive. For example, to accelerate the speed of a standard carrier from 40 to 100 miles an hour it was necessary by the old method to multiply the motivating power more than 10 times. The problem now is to increase speed without this increase of power. There are a number of ways of doing it. One is to reduce the friction within the train itself. This has already been done to a large extent by the use of roller bearings. Another way is to reduce the weight of the trains by building them of lighter materials. But the most promising method of all, and the one that is now getting most attention, is to reduce wind resistance by streamlining the outside shape of the trains.

The Santa Fe's Chief in the California mountains.

A British express, the Flying Scotsman.

The results obtained by the streamlining of airplanes and automobiles have been so favorable that railroads cannot afford to ignore them any longer, engineers say. From the standpoint of economy in operation, they declare, streamlining for trains is even more practical than for airplanes. They point out that a streamlined train averaging 100 miles an hour would operate at a profit if the present passenger rate is advanced only 6 per cent, or from 3.6 cents to 3.8 cents a mile. Under such a rate, the fare between New York and Chicago would be increased by about $2, but the time of travel would drop from 18 to 10 hours. The travel time from New York to St. Louis would be reduced from 24 hours to about 13 with an increase of only about $3 in fare.

The "Auto Tram," which the Michigan Central Railway is testing.

But in order to take advantage of what the aeronautical engineers have learned about wind resistance, the experts point out, the railroads will have to make drastic revision of their train designs. Equipment now in use cannot be made to conform to the requirements for high speed. It will be necessary to do more than round off the coach corners and slant back the fronts of locomotives. The engine and coaches will have to be fitted together very snugly and the whole train must resemble, as nearly as possible, a projectile or a drop of water falling. With the proper designing, it is said, the air resistance of trains can be reduced to one-twentieth of the present resistance they encounter.

So far, the Flying Hamburger represents about the only attempt to apply streamlining to a whole train. It has been tried before, however, on single units and with equally gratifying results. A streamlined interurban car recently placed in experimental service by the Michigan Central can travel 100 miles an hour with ease. Another, a 50-passenger coach driven by a four-blade propeller, has averaged 106 miles an hour for 173 miles, attaining a top speed of 143 miles an hour. It is said this car is capable of 200 miles an hour. Engineers are convinced that these experimental cars clearly indicate the course that all railroads of the future must follow.

While it may be said that railroads must accelerate their schedules in order to remain in the running as swift passenger carriers, it cannot be said they have not shown vast improvement in the last 25 or 30 years. Since automobiles and airplanes came into the picture, many persons have come to regard railroad trains as antiquated and outmoded carriers. Some of these observers point back to the speed record of 112 miles an hour made by the Empire State Express in 1893, and declare seriously that train speeds have not increased at all since that time and that they have, in fact, decreased. They cite figures to prove their point, but overlook the catch in the figures.

THE facts are, train speeds have increased enormously. Not for a mile stretch or a five-mile stretch, but for long runs which really count for something. As opposed to short spurts of 60 to 80 miles an hour for nineteenth century trains, the twentieth century trains, pulling far heavier loads, average close to 60 miles an hour for long distances. Some do better than that.

Among the outstanding fast trains of the world are to be found such performers as the Canadian National, which runs between Montreal and Toronto. It covers the 334 miles with six stops at an average speed of 55.7 miles an hour. Michigan Central's Wolverine averages 58 miles an hour for 228 miles. Canadian Pacific's Canadian, averaging 67.5 miles an hour for 123 miles, regularly reaches a top speed of 80 to 85 miles an hour. The same railroad's Royal York averages 68.8 miles an hour for the same distance. Still better averages are made by trains in England and Scotland, such as the Flying Scotsman, running between Edinburgh and London. England's Cheltenham Flyer regularly averages 69.1 miles an hour over a 77-mile stretch and on many occasions makes the run in a few seconds less than an hour.

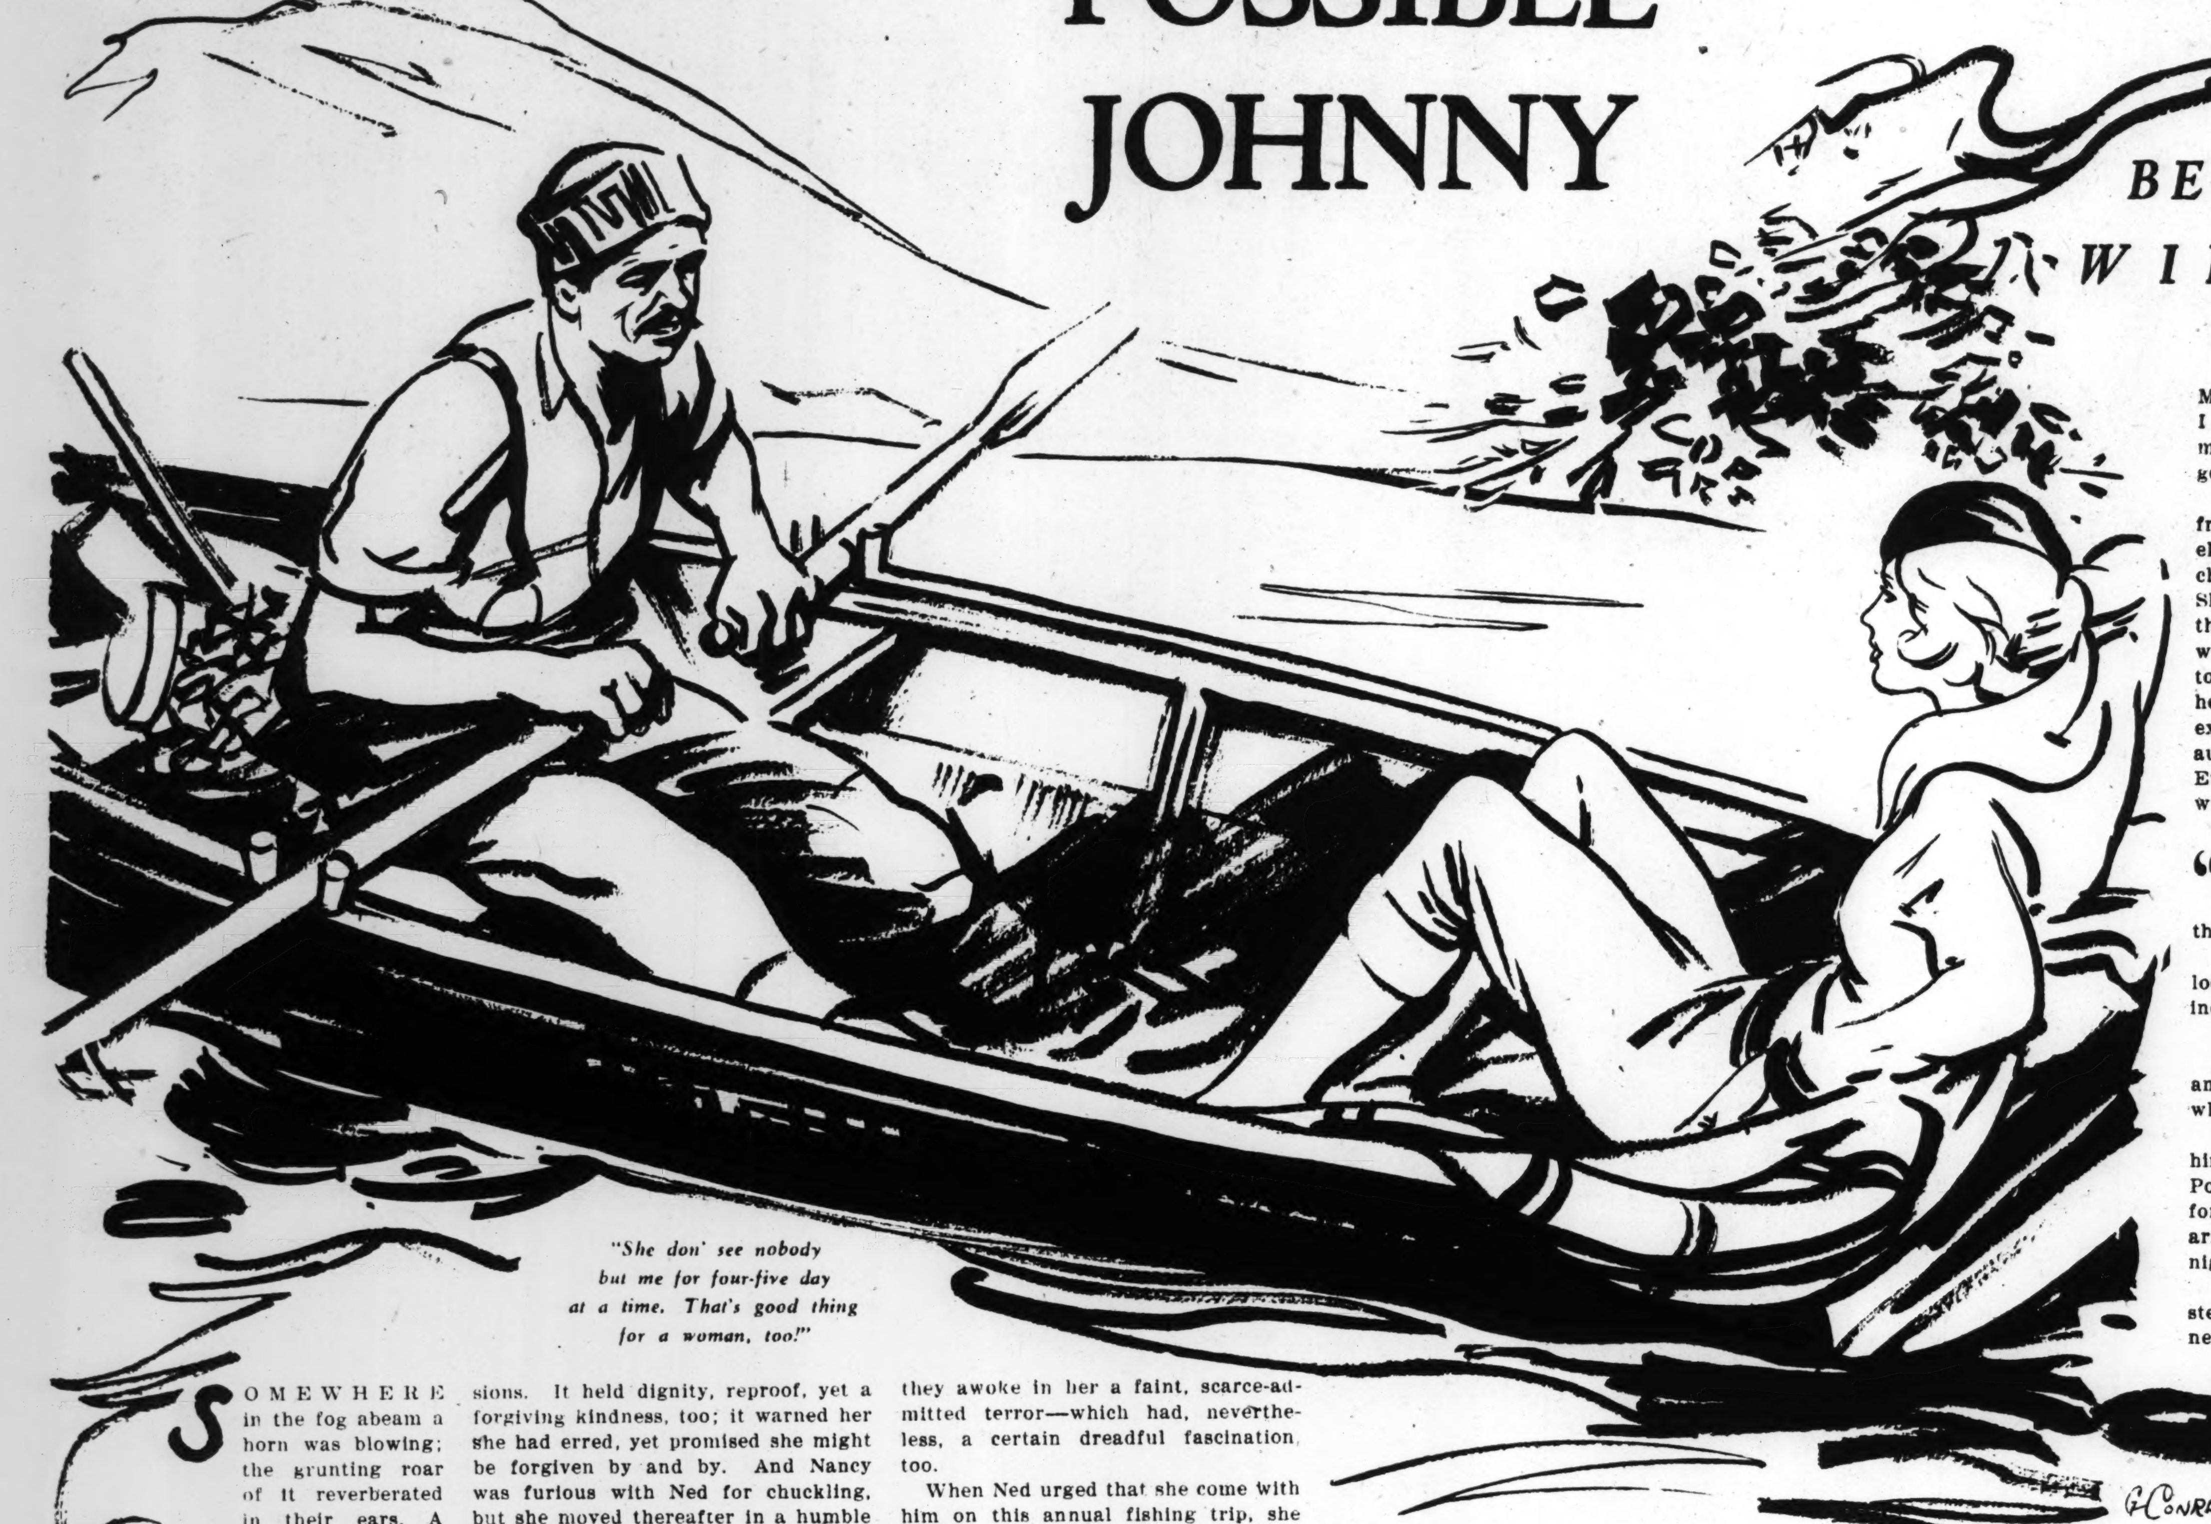
The old trains, with all their speeds for short spurts, could never pile up records like that made in 1924 by the Santa Fe-New York Central special, which covered the 3197 miles from coast to coast at an average speed of 46.25 miles an hour.

Nor could they beat a recent run made by a train between St. Louis and Cleveland, 67.3 miles an hour for the total distance of 536 miles.

POSSIBLE JOHNNY

By

BEN AMES WILLIAMS



"She don' see nobody but me for four-five day at a time. That's good thing for a woman, too!"

SOMEWHERE in the fog abeam a horn was blowing; the grunting roar of it reverberated in their ears. A bell buoy clanked dismally, and a low, greasy mud flat slid along their port side. Deep within the ship itself a bell tinkled, with a sort of cheerful relief, and the mud flat increased its speed, gliding past more rapidly. Then the whistle blew a long blast. It had blown, at brief intervals, most of the night, while they bucked the tides of Fundy, and tide rips roared in the darkness through which, like a blinded bull, they plunged. Nancy Dunton had been seasick all night; there was a fog drip just now at the end of her nose as she stood with Ned at the rail; and she was cold and miserable. She said bitterly:

"I was a fool to come!"

"I was a fool to bring you!" Ned retorted.

Her shoulders lifted in an icy anger; and they spoke no more. In the course of an endless time the little steamer docked; porters lugged their bags and the rod case ashore; and Johnny, Possible Johnny, came bounding across the wharf to meet them there.

Ned and the boys had talked of Possible Johnny in affectionate terms for years, and Nancy was curious to inspect him now. His name was Johnny something or other; it had never seemed to matter. Everyone called him Possible Johnny, from a twist of speech which was habitual with him. He was, Ned declared, a clown, a natural comedian.

But Nancy, in this first glimpse, saw nothing funny in Johnny. He was a little man, with very long legs; and he was smothered in clothes. A huge woolen cap, a Mackinaw coat that would have inclosed two Johnnys, Kersey pants cut for a man thrice his size and rubber boots with their tops turned down to flop below his knees. His cheek was the color of smoked salmon; his black mustache was very black; his teeth gleamed white; and his hands were heavy, twisted out of shape, the skin cracked, and every crack deep etched with grime. When Ned introduced them, Johnny took Nancy's hand; or rather he offered her his. She grasped it, and to do so was like grasping the unresponsive root of a great tree, it was so rough and hard—yet somehow flaccid, too. Johnny's hands, fit to set a vise-like grip on axe or pole or paddle, were curiously uncertain where gentler matters were involved. But Nancy, used to the consciously firm clasp of weaker hands, shuddered a little at this flabby contact, and said evenly:

"Ah! You're the funny man Ned tells about?"

"Possible," said Johnny; and Nancy heard Ned chuckle, remembered why folk called this little man "Possible Johnny!" Yet Ned's efforts to suggest the extraordinary completeness of the meaning which Johnny could put into this one word had left Nancy unprepared for her confusion now. Her remark had been a little patronizing, even a little cruel. Johnny's reply stripped her instantly of all pretensions. It held dignity, reproof, yet a forgiving kindness, too; it warned her she had erred, yet promised she might be forgiven by and by. And Nancy was furious with Ned for chuckling, but she moved thereafter in a humble silence until she and Ned were safe in Johnny's car.

They scurried up the hill into town; they left the town and the fog and ran into sunshine and open fields. And Nancy sat grimly listening while Ned, beside her, and Johnny in the front seat, flung their conversation to and fro.

——"boys away at school," Ned was saying. "So I talked Mrs. Dunton into coming. She hasn't done any fishing since the year we were married; been too busy with the boys. We'll have to teach her now!"

"My old woman, she don't fish much, too," Johnny agreed. "You can't, when you got nine children."

Nancy spoke for her sex. "I couldn't, Johnny, even with two boys, and Mr. Dunton, and the house to take care of. Now the boys are away, I did expect to have a little time to myself—for the things I want to do. But Mr. Dunton insisted on dragging me up here. I told him this morning I was a fool to come."

AND: "Possible!" said Johnny again. Nancy uttered a furious sound. She saw Ned's dry amusement, and she said no more.

The profession of guide—Possible Johnny worked as a guide in the spring and early summer—requires of its practitioners adaptability, and a shrewd capacity for appraising human kind. There will be some customers who wish to venture deep into the wild, heedless of mosquitoes, flies, rain and all discomfort, as long as trout are rising; there will be others who prefer a comfortable camp site, with ginger ale and ice readily accessible. Johnny sought to please. He knew what Ned Dunton would want, but he was not so sure of Mrs. Dunton's inclination. So from the moment of their first encounter on the wharf, and afterward during the 20-mile drive to his farm, where they would take the boats and start up river, he studied her acutely.

And he began to understand as much from Ned's loquacity as from Mrs. Dunton's silences, many things which were as yet not quite clear to these two themselves.

There comes to every man, and woman, too, when a heavy task is done, an hour of weary surrender; a slackening of the long tension of slow-driving effort, a sort of ineffectual inanition that endures until some new preoccupation fills once more the heart and mind. Ned and Nancy had been 20 years married. Three years ago the oldest boy went away to school; this year the youngest had followed him. And Nancy suddenly found herself with nothing at all to do. Her ordered household, geared to the demands of four people, served Ned and herself without the least direction from her hands; her days were empty and they must be filled. She began, tentatively, to try to fill them in this way and in that.

Sometimes the result of these attempts discouraged her; sometimes they awoke in her a faint, scarce-admitted terror—which had, nevertheless, a certain dreadful fascination, too.

When Ned urged that she come with him on this annual fishing trip, she consented reluctantly, yet also with an unadmitted hope. On the surface this was a fishing trip and nothing more; but actually it was much more. Once, a great many years ago, she and Ned had thus gone away alone together, and happily. Alive in both their minds now was the question, could they be happy thus again?

Ned did not admit even to himself the existence of this question; but Nancy shaped it in her thought. Upon its answer would so surely depend what her future ways should be.

She saw with a feminine lucidity that this was a crisis in their two lives; and she was sorry for Ned because he was too blind to see. It did not occur to her that Possible Johnny might, before they had been a dozen hours in company, read her secret mind.

They came to Johnny's remote farm beside the river, and Johnny's wife made them welcome there. Nancy found in Mrs. Corbeau a still, scrupulously clean, utterly silent individual, with the strength of steel in her spare frame. The kitchen where they sat was steaming hot. Possible Johnny talked loudly and incessantly, and warmed his hands on the very top of the stove, while Mrs. Corbeau served them coffee, and a silent daughter moved like a shadow in the shadows.

They were a silent family, save for Possible Johnny himself; and Ned, in an exuberant intoxication over the vacation days in prospect, talked almost as much as his host. Nancy wondered grimly whether Johnny's wife hated the man's loud hilarity as much as she hated Ned's. She felt a bewildered surprise when in the moment of departure Mrs. Corbeau clung tenderly to her husband; and Nancy heard her warn Little John, in the distorted French patois, which was their familiar speech, to take care of his father, to make sure he did not work too hard, to see that his feet were dry. Johnny, it appeared, was not fit for the utmost rigors of his profession nowadays. When they went to embark, Mrs. Corbeau and her daughter came to the landing to see them off. Nancy, looking backward, saw the two women standing to watch their men away; then the boats rounded the first bend, wilderness shut in about them, the world fell far behind.

Little John, who rowed Nancy's boat, was of a silent habit, and the other craft, in which Ned and Johnny kept up a loud babel of hilarious conversation, drew steadily ahead. So Nancy, all that morning, had her rebellious thoughts for company. She could hear now and then Ned's loud guffaws; and she thought there was something shocking and brazen in thus startling the still forest with empty noise.

They lunched on a dry knoll beside the first quick water, on trout Ned had caught as Johnny poled up the rip, and cornbread and hot tea. Nancy, till lunch was ready, sat apart, as far as possible from Johnny's loud babble and Ned's appreciative mirth. She welcomed John's silent company when, after lunch, they went on.

They lay that night on a bed of moss among the great boulders on a bluff over the river. The stars shone; there was no need of a tent to cover them. Ned slept soundly, and he snored; but Nancy was long awake. A single mosquito buzzed interminably around her head; when at last she crushed it, another took its place. She had been a fool to come, she thought bitterly; a fool to come. No one but Ned would be such an idiot as to bring a woman to a place like this. A woman old enough to prefer a sensible amount of comfort, a certain privacy, a few decencies, such as hot running water, a sufficient mirror, silk lingerie. She could not imagine Billy Clive, for instance, bringing a woman to such a place. She could not imagine Billy himself coming here. Bachelors learned to love their comforts, too; and Billy was apt to be immaculate as a woman. Ned had not shaved this morning; he would not shave till they started home. Freedom from the stroke of steel was his idea of a rest, a vacation, a riotous good time. No razor, and Possible Johnny—or, better, Impossible Johnny—for company.

NANCY was so sorry for herself that she tried, before she slept, to cry. But she could not. It was, after all, her own fault for consenting to come. At home she would have been free, with not even the boys to demand her time; and Billy Clive to keep her gay company, if she should choose to be gay.

But in a moment of weak sentimentality she had let Ned persuade her. And now he slept noisily beside her, and she must fight mosquitoes the whole night through. She thought drearily that at least she would be able to sleep in the boat on the way up river next day.

But even that hope was to fail; for in the morning Possible Johnny cheerfully announced that she would go this day as his passenger.

"We got to get acquaint', you and me," he told her, his little eyes twinkling. "I know your husban' long time; and your boys. By Gees, it come time for me to know you, too."

She said uncertaintly: "Oh, I'm sure Mr. Dunton would prefer to ride with you," and the little man said calmly:

"Possible!"

But he was already preparing, with a sleeping bag and a pack sack full of gear, a sort of bed for her in his boat.

"So! You put yourself on that," he directed. "Make some sleep if you want! You don't have to talk to me. By Gees, I can do enough talk for one man and woman, too. My old woman, she don' talk much, but we get along fine all the same!"

Nancy shuddered at the thought that she must listen all that day to his loud tongue. But no easy escape appeared; and during the long morning she began to be habituated to his chatter, just as one's ears become indifferent to the noises of a boiler factory. His steady prattle had at last an almost soothing quality; she did sleep for a while, and in the afternoon, refreshed, she began to listen more intently to the little man, to ask him a question now and then. She remembered Mrs. Corbeau, and she said once when he spoke of this old woman of his:

"I liked Mrs. Corbeau very much!"

"Possible!" Johnny agreed. "By Gees, I do, my own self!" He was rowing busily, but his tongue never slackened. "I got along wit' her now good many year. Take one smart man for do that, I tell you! Sometimes things maybe don' go so good, so I take one of my boys and lick him some, no matter for why; and that make her ver' mad at me, so we have one good fight, and everything all right again!"

She smiled, assented. "It's fun, making up, isn't it?" she said, and was astonished to find herself faintly liking this offensive little man.

"For sure!" Johnny agreed. And he rattled on. Her thoughts drifted for a while, she forgot him in more personal concerns. Then something he said caught her attention back again. In the summer, Johnny told her, he and his old woman had one fine time.

"Picking berries," he explained. "When blueberries come to be ripe, I hitch up my big wagon, and put some blanket in, and some bacon and flour, and my old woman and all my children; an' we go away back up in the mountains, maybe 20 mile, maybe 30. By Gees, we go way back, I tell you. And my old woman and the children pick berries all day long, and we stay there four, five, six week. By Gar, that time is best of all the year for me. Me and my old woman, we like that, I tell you. She don' see nobody but me for four-five day at a time. That's good thing for a woman, too!"

Nancy smiled, but rather with friendliness than mirth; there was an elemental simplicity and a pastoral charm in the picture which he drew. She had an impulse to tell him something about herself, as though his words had made her feel it necessary to justify herself to him. She found herself relating some of the vacation expeditions she and Ned had taken; an automobile tour with the Paynes; to Europe with the Bishops; to California with the Thayers. . . .

"WE HAVE so many good friends," she explained, "it seems more fun to do things with them than just us alone."

Johnny backed water with one oar, looking over his shoulder, and he said indifferently:

"Possible!"

She colored as though at a rebuke; and he swung in toward the point where they would camp that night.

The other boat was half a mile behind them; for despite his son's bulk, Possible Johnny had the better knack for making speed. Before the others arrived, he now had the business of the night's camp well under way.

When the other boat landed, Ned stepped ashore, and stretched the stiffness out of his arms and legs, and called to Nancy:

"Well, we're arrived! Here's where we settle down!"

But Possible Johnny, squatting to feed the new-born fire with little sticks, contradicted him.

"By Gees, no, M'sieur!" he protested. "Tomorrow we go on some more."

"Farther?" Ned echoed, in surprise. "Why, Johnny? Where?"

Johnny laid a wise finger against his nose; he winked a cheerful eye. "I find me a place last year," he declared. "You never see it, but by Gees, I tell you, it's one fine place. So many big fishes you don't take your boot off at night. If you do, Mist' Trout bite your toe off before morning, sure."

Ned grinned, but he asked doubtfully: "How far? Mrs. Dunton must be tired of traveling."

But Nancy said icily: "Please don't consider me, Ned. I want you to have just as good a time as if I weren't along!"

She saw him wince; but Johnny said sharply: "Possible!" And Nancy felt, ridiculously, that she had been silenced with a just reproach. She turned furiously away; but Ned stayed behind to consult with Johnny there. Later he reported to her as much as Johnny had told him. There was, the little man said, a certain island, with quick water, and a deep black pool, where not only big trout but sometimes even a salmon might be taken now and then.

"But we won't go on if you'd rather stay here," Ned assured her.

"I'D RATHER have stayed at home," she reminded him. "But I didn't! Now you'd better just forget me; act as if I weren't along. I'm sure I don't want to interfere with your fun in any way!"

Ned urged: "But I want you to be comfortable."

She retorted: "Nonsense! Don't be a hypocrite! I could have been comfortable at home."

He said angrily: "All right, we'll go on!" And stalked stiffly away to Johnny by the fire.

So next morning . . . Nancy had slept fitfully, dreaming of her wrongs . . . they pushed on upstream. The river, as they ascended, grew less in volume; and they encountered sometimes long stretches of quick water where Nancy had to go ashore and fight her way through the tangle along the banks, while the three men tugged and hauled the heavy boats through the rips into smooth water above. Nancy scratched her cheek, and tore her stockings, and got twigs down the back of her neck; and once when they ran without warning on a sunken log, the boat tipped so that she half fell, half stepped out into the water above her knees.

Their progress was slow; and it was full dark before they came to the island which was Johnny's goal. Long before that, Nancy was shivering with cold and with fatigue; and when Lit-

STRANGE PARTNERSHIPS in the UNDERWATER JUNGLES

LIFE in the waters of the Dry Tortugas, out in the Gulf of Mexico, at the end of the Florida Keys, is a far more complicated affair for denizens of the sea bottom than might be generally supposed, scientists are discovering, after considerable observation of goings-on in this coral sea garden.

Recent researches by divers who have explored the under-water jungles around these islands have disclosed that animals—even some very primitive organisms—enter literally into partnerships with other animals for mutual advantage and protection in their struggle for existence. These strange creatures, generally believed to have little intelligence, or no intelligence at all, have learned somehow that co-operation is better than competition, and they practice it by making use of one another's special equipment.

It is not quite correct to say that these partnerships are always for mutual advantage. Sometimes one member of the alliance has nothing to do with the arrangement, but is dragged into it by the other, who sees fit to appropriate his company. Such partnerships are often destructive to one or the other of the members, as in the case of a parasite and its host. Others seem to be beneficial to one member without either benefiting or harming the other particularly, and in still other cases the relationship is distinctly helpful to both, even though, as usually happens, the partners are of widely different species and have widely different problems to solve.

A number of cases of animal partnerships are described in a bulletin just issued by the Carnegie Institution of Washington, the data having been gathered by Dr. A. S. Pearse of Duke University; Dr. W. H. Longley, in charge of the marine biological station which the Carnegie Institution maintains at Tortugas, and Dr. Waldo Schmitt, Curator, Division of Marine Invertebrates, at the United States National Museum. These scientists have all donned divers suits and investigated at first hand some of the phenomena of jungle life under the tropical waters of the Tortugas area.

The Tortugas Islands, it may be explained, comprise eight small coral bars, which juts above the surface—and barely make it at high tide—some 75 miles west of Key West. Their combined land area probably is not more than a quarter of a square mile. The best part of the Tortugas is the part that is under water. It is said that if the sea bottom of the vicinity were elevated 20 feet, about 20 square miles of land would emerge. It is in these shallow seas that the principal charm of the Tortugas is to be found, for the sea bottom is a vari-colored flower garden of enchanting beauty. The strangest thing about this garden is that the "flowers" are animal organisms and not plants.

In the course of geologic ages the sea bottom and the under-water slopes of the islands have been blanketed with coral polyps which have the property of forming around and beneath themselves a thick protecting skeleton of lime. These flower-like animals, most of them of the sea-anemone type, live in great colonies comprising millions of individuals. Their principal mission in life seems to be that of converting the calcium salts which are in solution in the sea water into a substance which, in the mass, becomes hard calcareous rock. These coral formations are of amazing variety. Some are wide-branching, tree-like structures. Others resemble the horns of a stag. There is the "organ-pipe coral" and a species that forms a skeleton resembling the shape of the human brain, with its intricate convolutions. Still others resemble blossoms. Every conceivable color is to be found—violet, pink, brown, white, yellow, purple, green, bright blue, vivid scarlet.

THE mass effect of all these coral growths and their cousins, the sea-anemones, is that of a flower jungle, and the jungle is inhabited by innumerable other forms of animal life. In and about the coral reefs are sea cucumbers of many colors; long-spined sea urchins of deep purple; sponges of black and purple, covered with a thin sheen of emerald green; yellow, brown and purple gorgonians; purple sea-fans, often bearing aloft hermit crabs; spider crabs, with spoon-shaped fingers, well suited for grubbing off encrusted growths; tubeworms with brilliantly colored tentacles, and there are countless starfishes, crabs, crustaceans, all brilliantly colored. Through and around these masses of strange animal forms dart schools of fishes, big and little. Occasionally an octopus is seen and sharks are fairly numerous.

With so many life forms concentrated in a limited area, each struggling to seize and hold a choice position, survival for some is possible only through one organism's adaptation of its habits to take advantage of the protection or food-gathering help afforded by organisms of other species. The Greeks had a word for this, too. They called it symbiosis, "a living together," and the term has been borrowed by modern scientists. It has been applied to this intimate and beneficial business relationship between dissimilar organisms of the tropical seas.

These fish, Evermannichthys, or sponge fishes, are regular occupants of sponges, never having been found elsewhere.

One of the most interesting examples is the partnership between the coral reef crab (the Lybia) and certain sea-anemones. The crab deliberately removes the anemone from the rock to which it ordinarily fastens itself and carries it fully expanded in its first, or clawed pair of legs. When it is attacked it defends itself by pushing the anemone toward the enemy. This shelters the crab and does the anemone little harm, for the enemies of crabs usually are not foes of the anemone. By being pushed about through the water, the anemone, in turn, is enabled to gather a much larger quantity of food than would be possible otherwise, so it can well afford to share the surplus with the crab, which it does.

Dr. Longley also tells of certain crabs that deliberately tear bits of living sponge from the sea bottom and hold them on their own shells until the sponge particles take root and begin to grow. By this means the crabs cover themselves with protective armor, for the species of sponge which they utilize is distasteful to most creatures of the deep. It is filled with sharp, needle-like bodies and gives off a disagreeable odor besides. The sponge benefits from the association by being moved through the water.

Among partnerships beneficial to one member, but neither beneficial nor harmful to the other, is that which exists between a small, bright-colored fish and the giant sea-anemone. This fish never ventures far away from the host. Upon the slightest alarm it darts into the "blossom" of the anemone and disappears among the feathery tentacles. When the danger has passed the fish comes cautiously out of its hiding place. It is said that this fish is so dependent upon the anemone that it soon perishes if the two are permanently separated. This probably is not due to a broken heart but to the fact that the fish is of such size as to make it a popular food morsel among other denizens of the deep. At full growth it attains a length of only an inch and a half—just the sort of fish that a multitude of other fishes are looking for.

Other fishes which appropriate the services of other organisms are the sucker fishes, common around the Tortugas, which attach themselves to larger fishes. The most notable of this group is the Remora, which is equipped with a powerful sucker disk on the top of its head. It looks something like the corrugated rubber heel used on some shoes. This fish is frequently found sticking to the underside of sharks. Apparently it attaches itself to the larger fishes in order to get a free and fast ride to the spot where a kill is made. There it detaches itself and picks up whatever fragments it can find. Except for the fact that it might slow down the carrier's speed if many try to get a ride on the same shark, it causes the shark little inconvenience.

This sucker fish is one of the most interesting freaks of the deep. Its sucker disk is so powerful that the natives of Chinese waters often use the fish for catching turtles. After attaching a line to its tail, they cast it in the water near a turtle. It immediately darts to the turtle and fastens itself on the under surface of the shell. If the turtle is not too heavy and powerful it can be drawn to shore before the fish's grip is broken.

Dr. Pearse threw considerable light upon the practice of symbiosis through research he conducted at the Carnegie Institution's marine biological station at Tortugas in the summer of 1931. One of his studies involved taking the census of a big sponge.

He removed a "loggerhead" sponge, which was about the size of a large washtub, and placed it in a container so that none of its inhabitants would be lost. He then sliced the sponge into thin sections as one would slice a loaf of bread. Each slice was carefully examined and the occupants picked out, placed in bowls and counted under a powerful magnifying glass. The count showed 17,128 guests.

Among this great host of creatures were five fishes of the genus Evermannichthys, each about an inch in length. These fishes have extremely slender bodies, well adapted to life in the canals of sponges, which have come to be their regular home. It is said they are never found elsewhere.

Annelid worms were found, and there were barnacles, ostracods, amphipods and, in greatest number, the small synalpheid shrimp. These shrimps, in turn, served as hosts to two types of parasites.

"APPARENTLY the use of sponges as guest houses is an old established custom among marine animals," Dr. Pearse writes. "Sponges are inert, stolid masses of tissues which have no nerve cells and no proper nervous activities. Small wonder they are set upon by more astute animals and used as food and for shelter.

"Some of the guests are permanent residents which never live elsewhere; others are transient and only stay overnight. Some take only small organisms from the water which a sponge is continually waving through its canals; others gnaw away the tissues of the sponge and are classed as parasites rather than symbiots. But the sponge, with its low degree of specialization, readily replaces lost or injured parts and soon recovers from small or even serious injuries.

"Some sponges are quite inhospitable and have developed qualities which make them distasteful by growing spicules or by producing noxious odors. Apparently these qualities have made them as repugnant to guest animals as to human beings; at any rate, such sponges as the Stematumenia foetida rarely harbor any occupants."

GARBER, Missouri.

ONE day, long ago, a child traveled the Ozark trail that is nobody knows how old, and had a dream. It was a wish-dream. She wished that some day she might have a little town all her own, there beside the trail. The child is an aging woman now and the dream has come true. She has her little town. It is not much of a town, as towns go, but it is all her own, and peace dwells here and travelers who come along the trail tarry here a little while and gain a share of the contentment that it has to give.

One time, long ago, a man traveled the trail that is nobody knows how old, and found something that satisfied here, and tarried, and wrote a story and called it "The Shepherd of the Hills." It carried to far places some of the fragrance of the wooded hills and it found a home in the hearts of the million who read it. Now, in tribute to the story, the high Ozarks where it was born are called the Shepherd of the Hills Country, and people come from far to travel its trails.

Here in the heart of the Shepherd of the Hills Country is the little town of Garber, the town that is owned by a woman.

When Mrs. Ada B. Clodfelter was a child, long ago, she traveled the trails that are nobody knows how old, perched on a horse behind her father, the Rev. T. F. Gardenhire, a hill preacher, who came and went telling the gospel in scattered church houses, in cabins along the creeks and sometimes in a leafy hillside sanctuary with a rock for a pulpit. He loved the hills, his daughter remembers that. As Preachin' Bill of the Harold Bell Wright story loved them and spoke their praise:

"When God looked upon th' work of his hands an' called hit good, he war sure a-lookin' at this here Ozark country. Rough? Law, yes! Hit war made that a-way on purpose. Ain't nothin' to a flat country nohow. A man jes' naturally wear hisself plumb out a-walkin' on a level 'thought ary down hill t' spell him. An' then look how much more there is of hit! Take 40 acres o' flat now an' hits jest a 40, but you take 40 acres o' this here Ozark country an' God 'lmighty only knows how much 'twould be if hit were rolled out flat. 'Tain't no wonder 't all, God rested when he made these here hills; he jest naturally had to quit, for he done his beatenest an' war plumb gin out."

To the mountains that seemed the finishing touch of creation came the preacher, to regions like Dewey Bald and Mutton Hollow and Roark Creek, and with him, perched behind him on his horse, came his little daughter, for he called her his boy, as the Sammy Lane of the story was called by her father, and he was lonesome on his long rides unless he had her with him. Besides, she was a sweet singer and helped him when he preached.

Sometimes, when night came and caught them on the trail, they found shelter in a crowded cabin and the child wondered why, where there was so much room outdoors, there should be such crowding indoors, and pondered the problem, coming at last to a solution that was only a wish-dream.

The print shop that Mrs. Clodfelter operates.

One day she told her father about it. They were riding along the trail and the child was chattering and her father was listening indulgently, not saying much himself, probably thinking about other things.

"Daddy," she said, "when I'm big, do you know what I'm going to have?"

"No, daughter; what?"

"When I get big I'm going to have a little town, with houses for people to live in and a church for you to preach in, and everything."

"That would be fine, daughter."

They jogged along, the child dreaming her dream, her father probably pondering the strangeness of the wish that had found its way to the child's heart.

AFTER that the girl, as she grew older, spoke often of the little town that would be hers when she was big, and she thinks her father understood and shared her dream as something harmless, even if nothing would ever come of it, for they were much together and were in many ways like-minded. Her mother had had her disappointments, for the life of a hill preacher was hard, and was done with dreaming. "Child," she said, "you are always trying to do things that no human hands can do," and dismissed the little town of her daughter's dream.

It is the fate of childhood's dreams to fade and be forgotten, and the dream of the little town faded, but it was never entirely forgotten. Rather, it was cherished, a half-hidden heritage of childhood's dream days, with a sweetness of its own, though hope of fulfillment had died as childhood had passed.

* * * * *

Now the child who had dreamed was a woman facing the hard realities of life. Widowhood had come. All of a mother's planning and hoping was centered in her son. The great war came and claimed her son, and for more than two years he was at the battle front, while his mother prayed, day following day, for the one boon that his life might be spared. The boon was granted, but only to be soon snatched away. Her son came marching home, but he was stricken, his lungs gas-seared.

"God spared me, mother," he said, "but I am not going to be with you long."

Mrs. Clodfelter lived then at Springfield, Mo. Her son, despite his affliction, obtained employment as foreman in a shoe factory at Springfield, Ill., but the time came when Mrs. Clodfelter realized that she would have to get him out of that. She remembered the health-giving air of the hills where, as a child, she had been a wayfarer with her father. She wished that she might take him there.

Then, one day, her brother came to her. "Sis," he said, "I've got a little town for you down in the Ozarks."

"There's my dream," she said.

A real estate man had proposed a trade for some property that she had in Kansas. She hesitated only because she wanted her son's approval. "I'll not give you an answer," she said, "until I have talked to my son."

That night she called her son on the telephone. "Honey," she said, "I want to ask you a question. Don't answer me now. Study it over tonight and write me tomorrow."

She outlined the proposition to him.

"Why, mother," he said, "isn't that your baby dream?"

"Well, I don't know, dear, maybe it is; but it will not come true unless you say the word."

Interior of the Garber postoffice.

"All right, mother, I'll write to you tomorrow."

He wrote a little hesitantly, fearful of giving unwise advice, but going so far as to say that he would have to give up work in the factory. That decided his mother. She made the trade and at last she owned the little town of her dream—Garber.

It was a townsite of 11 acres that somebody with a wealth of optimism had laid out long ago on the White River branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, between Branson and Reed Springs, only a flag stop, with a demounted freight car for a station and the postoffice "at the forks," and the cottage where "Old Matt" and "Aunt Mollie" lived while Old Matt was Postmaster after he and Aunt Mollie moved to town from their old home on the slope of Dewey Bald, three miles away.

Mrs. Clodfelter's son, Orval, reluctant to sacrifice his earnings, continued his work for a while. At last, in April, 1928, he returned to his mother at Springfield. His condition was worse than he realized. His mother took him immediately to a hospital. That was on a Wednesday. The following Saturday his mother sat by his bed. "Mamma," he said, "don't give up." Then he died.

"He was the best son a mother ever had," she says now. "He understood me and I understood him."

Mrs. Clodfelter was not sure what her son meant when he told her not to give up, but she took it that he meant that she was to carry on with her little town. So, after her son was buried, she came to her little town, and she says she came to stay, and she expects that some time her little town will be a bigger town, a credit to her and to her son, who bade her carry on.

It is a little town still, but is is something more than that because Mrs. Clodfelter's planning embraces the countryside along Roark Creek, and the people of the countryside acknowledge allegiance to their "Miz Clod," as well they may, for to them she is the Government, as Postmaster, and the railroad, as station agent, the town, as Mayor, and head and front of everything that Garber is and hopes to be.

She was appointed Postmaster and station agent soon after she came. Old Matt's postoffice burned a few months later. She moved the postoffice to the store, and later took over the store. She built a new home for herself after occupying for a time the cottage that had been occupied by Old Matt and Aunt Mollie, and started construction of a hotel for tourists, completion of which was hindered by the loss of her money in a bank failure. There is a cabin, however, that she calls the Wigwam, where pilgrims, caught by nightfall, may find shelter.

It was felt that the town needed a Mayor and a meeting was held in 1929 and Mrs. Clodfelter was elected, without opposition. By common consent her term is perpetual. The question of a jail house was raised, but the Mayor decided that it was not needed.

The claims of religion were recognized by organizing a Sunday school, with Mrs. Clodfelter as superintendent. It was the beginning of a plan that she had cherished since the death of her son for the building of a church in his memory. When her desire became known, contributions began to come in, some from a distance, some from tourists who came that way from time to time, a dollar here and a dollar there. The people who lived round about came and told her they did not have money to give, but they would give their labor whenever she called for it. They came when she told them she was ready and dug stones from the hillside and mixed the cement to hold them together and the walls went up. The Garber Memorial Community Church is nearly finished now and it will soon be dedicated. It will not have a regular minister, not at first, anyway, but the ministers who serve churches in the nearest towns have promised to take turns at preaching in the new church.

NEXT to owning a town, Mrs. Clodfelter's dearest wish always was to own a newspaper. Garber is not big enough yet to have a regular newspaper, but it has the next best thing, a monthly magazine. The Buzzer is its name. It has just celebrated its fourth aniversary and is still going, with Mrs. Clodfelter as printer, editor and publisher. The print shop is a lean-to at the side of the store.

Mrs. Clodfelter still dreams. Some of her dreams have come true, so she keeps hoping and planning. She wants to do something for her neighbors, the hill people, whose needs are great. An industrial exchange would help them. They could bring their products and exchange them for the products of others or for merchandise or receive in payment "units" instead of money, and these would be honored in purchases or in payment for labor. That is a practical plan that she thinks she can work out. And a burr mill on Roark Creek to grind grain into flour and meal.

Above everything, though, she dreams of the day when Alta Vista Faith Home will stand at the edge of the cedar grove across the railroad track, where old people, beaten in the battle of life, may come and spend their sunset days, and another home for the orphans of the hills, to give them their chance.

These things she would do for her neighbors, for they are good, helping her, helping each other, hearing and heeding the call of distress, traveling miles over the trails that are nobody knows how old to help when help is needed.

They are big dreams, she realizes that, for the little town of Garber, but she remembers that great good once came out of another little town, even the little town of Bethlehem, and she takes new courage and dreams on.

tle John pushed the bow of their boat ashore. Nancy stepped wearily out.

After they had eaten, Ned proposed that the guides pitch the tents, but Johnny demurred. It was hard to set up tents in the dark. Nancy was wearily content to roll in her blankets on the first level spot she found. She wakened, hours later, at the touch of a light rain on her cheek. It rained harder. She got up and sat against a tree. When Ned finally did awake, and discovered her, he protested:

"Why didn't you call me?"

And she answered politely: "I thought this was the sort of thing I was expected to enjoy."

She almost smiled at Ned's furious exclamation. Then he shouted to wake Johnny and Little John to rig some rude shelter.

AND by and by dawn came. Possible Johnny cooked breakfast, and Nancy saw his cheek twist as though with pain.

Later Johnny called Ned aside, and Ned told Nancy the bad news.

"It's appendicitis. Acute, I'm afraid. He can hardly move."

"Nonsense!" she said.

"No, I've looked him over.

She bit her lips. "What will he do?"

"Little John will have to take him home, in one of the boats," Ned explained. "Little John will be back in four or five days, with another man."

Ned and Nancy watched them out of sight around the first bend, then Ned said.

"Now it's up to me to make you comfortable here!"

"I'm sure you can do that very easily," she agreed in a grim tone.

It was Tuesday morning when the guides departed. Ned fished that day, but with no success at all. It still rained; the night was miserable.

Wednesday, it rained harder, and Thursday it rained. Friday morning their boat was gone. Ned cried incredulously: "It couldn't drag that anchor far."

"No?" Nancy commented, in cool politeness.

"No!" he shouted.

"I see!" she returned; and she was so composed that he caught her shoulders, shook her fiercely.

"What's the matter with you?" he demanded.

"I'M MAD, MARY! YOUR MUFFINS ARE BETTER THAN MINE."

fice to the store, and later took over the store. She built a new home for herself after occupying for a time the cottage that had been occupied by Old Matt and Aunt Mollie, and started construction of a hotel for tourists, completion of which was hindered by the loss of her money in a bank failure. There is a cabin, however, that she calls the Wigwam, where pilgrims, caught by nightfall, may find shelter.

It was felt that the town needed a Mayor and a meeting was held in 1929 and Mrs. Clodfelter was elected, without opposition. By common consent her term is perpetual. The question of a jail house was raised, but the Mayor decided that it was not needed.

The claims of religion were recognized by organizing a Sunday school, with Mrs. Clodfelter as superintendent. It was the beginning of a plan that she had cherished since the death of her son for the building of a church in his memory. When her desire became known, contributions began to come in, some from a distance, some from tourists who came that way from time to time, a dollar here and a dollar there. The people who lived round about came and told her they did not have money to give, but they would give their labor whenever she called for it. Possible Johnny

Later Johnny called Ned aside, and Ned told Nancy the bad news.

"It's appendicitis. Acute, I'm afraid. He can hardly move."

"Nonsense!" she said.

"No, I've looked him over.

"Little John will have to take him home, in one of the boats," Ned explained. "Little John will be back in four or five days, with another man."

And she said no more; so Little Johnny presently departed, with Johnny huddled in the boat.

Ned and Nancy watched them out of sight around the first bend, then Ned said.

"Now it's up to me to make you comfortable here!"

"I'm sure you can do that very easily," she agreed in a grim tone.

It was Tuesday morning when the guides departed. Ned fished that day, but with no success at all. It still rained; the night was miserable.

Wednesday, it rained harder, and Thursday it rained. Friday morning their boat was gone. Ned cried incredulously: "It couldn't drag that anchor far."

"No?" Nancy commented, in cool politeness.

"No!" he shouted.

"I see!" she returned; and she was so composed that he caught her shoulders, shook her fiercely.

"What's the matter with you?" he demanded.

So Nancy boiled over. They stood there and poured out all their mutual grievances; she lashed him with a hot contempt; he bruised her with bitter words.

"I'll go downstream and get the blasted boat and we'll get out of here!"

He left her there and Nancy watched him go with bleak eyes; but afterwards she cried.

Ned was gone all that day. He had to break his way at first through thick forest. He couldn't find the boat, but continued failure drove him on. But in the end he turned back, reluctant and ashamed, yet compelled against his will. He wanted and dreaded to come to her again.

For Nancy, too, the day had been terrible. She began after an hour or two to expect Ned's return; later she began to be afraid he would not return at all. When at last she saw him she knew such intense relief it was like pain. She meant to pretend to be asleep when he returned as though she had not missed him at all; her resolution failed. She went on swift feet to meet him.

Yet when they met, they stood a moment without speaking.

"I didn't find it," he said.

"You mustn't leave me alone again," she told him.

Her words were angry ones; but he caught an eloquent undertone in her voice, and he sprang toward her, and took her in his arms. "Why, we're all right, Nancy!" he exclaimed. And he kissed her.

Later, while he cooked supper, she stayed near him, and when they returned to the tent, she lay close by his side.

Next morning the water began to recede. The sun now began again to shine; and their spirits rose.

"I'm beginning to have a good time," he confessed. "I'm glad it worked out this way; gave me you alone."

Seven days after they had departed, Johnny and Little John came back again. Ned and Nancy had gone up river that day.

In mid-afternoon they turned downstream; near the island they heard the sound of an ax and Ned said:

"Listen, Little John has come!"

"Oh," she whispered.

He caught her in his arms. "I'm—sorry, Nancy," he whispered.

"It has been fun, dear," she confessed. "Yes, it has been fun!"

So they came back to the island, to find there not only Little John but Johnny, too.

"For sure!" Johnny admitted. "My old woman fix me up quick!"

The two guides had picked up the lost boat; and the next morning it was time to start for home. Days later, after they had said good-by to Johnny on the wharf, they stood at the steamer's rail to watch the receding shore; and Ned said, "Johnny's a character, isn't he? I thought he was a goner, sure."

She smiled; and he added slowly: "But it was a good thing for us, Nancy, wasn't it?"

"Yes," she agreed. "But Johnny wasn't sick, Ned. He was pretending!"

"Oh," he protested.

"He had his appendix cut out last fall," she declared.

"He did? How do you know?"

"Mrs. Corbeau spoke of it to him before we started upstream. I knew enough French to understand."

Ned's eyes were shining with a swift and rapturous comprehension. "Then—you knew at the time" he said huskily. "Why didn't you say so, Nancy?"

"I wanted to see what would happen," she confessed, "if you and I were left alone."

THE POMPONNE SALON

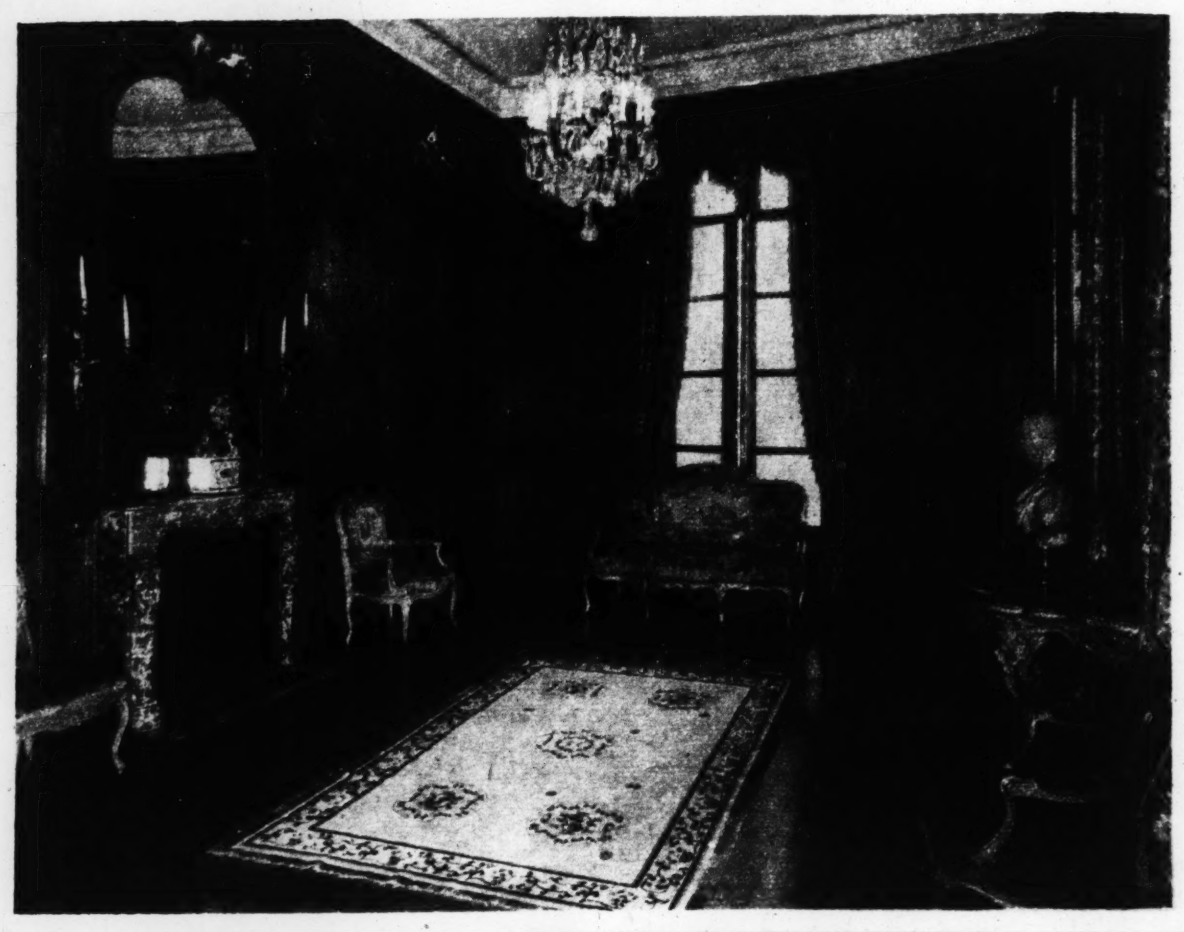
THE Pomponne Salon is the fifth in a series of exhibits to be featured weekly at the City Art Museum in Forest Park. Each display in this "Gallery of the Week" presentation will be reproduced in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, with an accompanying description of the exhibit by museum authorities.

French, Louis XV,
Early Eighteenth Century.

Nowhere could a better example of the difference of temperament between England and France be found than is exemplified in the juxtaposition of the English rooms with this week's special gallery, the salon from the Hotel de Pomponne in Paris. Solidity, dignity and directness are opposed to vivacity, charm and gayety.

The first half of the eighteenth century in France was marked by a reaction induced by the rigidity of the rules imposed by the academy and by the etiquette of the court during the life of the long-reigning Louis XIV. Other factors played a part also in the change of style. From Italy came a fresh wave of influence bringing new ideas which were essentially in accord with the desire for artistic freedom. Straight lines and angles tended to disappear and be replaced by sinuous lines and rounded surfaces. Finally, "Chinoiseries" had become high in favor since the late seventeenth century, when the French East India Company had imported the products of the Orient in huge quantities. Fantastic shapes and lack of symmetry were the result of an attempt to create French articles in harmony with the taste for things Chinese.

The Pomponne salon is of the early eighteenth century, probably about 1725. Here the light and delicate carving of the oak panels is so reserved and so well spaced as to remain subordinate to the design of the room as a whole. Large mirrors are set directly into the paneling, with frames carved as an integral part of the walls, with another mirror panel set between the "French" windows on the opposite wall, creating by reflection a series of artificial vistas which increase the room's apparent size. The painted panels above the mirrors and doors of the salon, whose subjects are taken from that most popular Renaissance source, classical mythology, are thought to have been executed by Charles Antoine Coypel.



THE furnishings of the room, typical of the Louis XV style, reflect again the spirit of the time, dainty, gay and exceedingly sophisticated. Lightly turned phrases and bantering laughter seem to come from the fine settee, with its slender cabriole legs, its gilding and its covering made from designs by Boucher and Oudry.

The town house from which this room was taken upon its demolition was situated near the present Paris Opera, at the corner of the Rue d'Antin and the Rue des Petits Champs, and was once the property of Madame de Pompadour.

"WELL, GRANNY—YOU OUGHT TO GO MODERN AND TRY MY BAKING POWDER."
. . . AND ANOTHER WOMAN CHANGES TO CALUMET!

JUST one glimpse—one taste—of a Calumet cake or muffin convinces experienced cooks that here is something new. This more modern baking powder gives you quality in your baking such as you've never known before!

Something more than ordinary success . . . a brand new idea of just how fine baking can be!

Texture like velvet . . fine, fine grain . . . beautiful even lightness. Where does it come from? From Calumet's controlled Double-Action. The first action begins in the mixing bowl when liquid is added to the dry ingredients. But the second is held in reserve to act in the heat of the oven. And it raises your batter or dough evenly, gently all through the baking. Perfect results every time!

So efficient is this scientific Double-Action that much less is needed than with ordinary baking powder. Just think! . . . only a level teaspoon of Calumet to a cup of sifted flour gives perfect results in standard recipes. Notice the thrifty Calumet proportion in this delicious Date Muffin recipe.

Better baking . . . reasonable price . . . and you use less! Three good reasons why women call Calumet the most economical baking powder!

CALUMET DATE MUFFINS

2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup dates, seeded and finely cut
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup milk
4 tablespoons melted butter or other shortening

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, sugar, and salt, and sift again. Add dates. Combine egg, milk, and shortening. Add to flour, beating only enough to dampen all flour. Bake in greased muffin pans in hot oven (425° F.) 25 minutes, or until done. Makes 12 muffins.

AN EASY VICTIM

This is a game that can be played by any child. All that is needed are scissors, paste and some cardboard. The directions for playing "Toy Talkies" are given at the bottom of the game.

THE PLAYERS

NED NUTTER—Air mail pilot of Hickory Hollow.
JOE EAGLE—He carries Ned Nutter and the mail.
FREDDIE FOX—A vicious schemer.
MOLLY SQUEAK—Ned Nutter's cook.
SAM SQUEAK—Janitor of the hangar.

JOE EAGLE—Oh, hum. I wonder when dinner will be ready? (Molly Squeak enters.)

MOLLY SQUEAK—Dinner is ready now. Come, before it gets cold. (She leaves.)

JOE EAGLE—Coming. Gosh, that soup smells good. (He leaves and Sam Squeak enters.)

SAM SQUEAK—That Joe Eagle is the laziest person I ever saw. All he thinks of is eating and sleeping. (Ned Nutter and Freddie Fox enter.)

NED NUTTER—Now this is the Hickory Hollow air mail hangar. Isn't it a peach? You might be an inventor, but I'll bet you couldn't improve on this place

FREDDIE FOX—Hm-m-m. I'll admit that you have a mighty fine place here

NED NUTTER—And I want you to meet Joe Eagle. Where is Joe, Sam?

SAM SQUEAK—He is eating dinner, boss.

NED NUTTER—Won't you have dinner with us, Mr. Fox?

FREDDIE FOX—I would like to, but I had dinner before I met you. You run along and I'll amuse myself looking around.

NED NUTTER—Very well, I won't be gone long. Come on, Sam. (They leave.)

FREDDIE FOX—(Sneering) Hump! So he thinks he's such a great inventor—and that I couldn't improve on these silly contraptions. I'll show him. (Joe Eagle enters.)

JOE EAGLE—Gosh! But that was a fine dinner—M-m-m.

FREDDIE FOX—Are you Mr. Eagle?

JOE EAGLE—Yes.

FREDDIE FOX—Nutter told me all about you. So you let Nutter put a saddle on you and ride you to Turtle Creek with the mail twice a day?

JOE EAGLE—Yes, and Ned Nutter gives me a nice home and lots of good food in exchange.

FREDDIE FOX—Huh! Is that all you get?

JOE EAGLE—That's all I asked for. It's the easiest job I ever had.

FREDDIE FOX—Why, you're underpaid. You ought to get more than that. If it wasn't for you there wouldn't be any air mail to Turtle Creek.

JOE EAGLE—Yes, that's right. I'm the only one strong enough to carry such a load on my back when I fly. (Sam Squeak enters.)

FREDDIE FOX—Let's go over here and talk. (Joe Eagle and Freddie Fox leave.)

SAM SQUEAK—I wonder what mischief that Fox is up to? (Ned Nutter enters.)

NED NUTTER—Where is Joe and Mr. Fox?

SAM SQUEAK—They just left. I wouldn't trust Fox very far, boss.

NED NUTTER—Nonsense. He's a great inventor. Come, let's find them. (They leave and Freddie Fox enters.)

FREDDIE FOX—(Sneering) So he thinks he's a better inventor than I am! I'll show him. That Joe Eagle has wings of steel, but the mind of a child. Ha! ha! (He leaves and Ned Nutter and Joe Eagle enter.)

NED NUTTER—I'm sorry Mr. Fox couldn't stay. I wanted him to see us take off. Wait here, I'll be back in a moment. (He leaves.)

JOE EAGLE—(Thinking aloud) Well, this is going to be my last trip. A fellow can't waste his time working for nothing. I wonder what kind of a place Mr. Fox has. He certainly is a smart fellow.

DIRECTIONS: Cut out back-drop and pin it on a wall near the floor. Next, take two books and stand them at each end and about 5 inches in front of back-drop. Then take characters, cut them out, and paste them on thin cardboard, folding flap at bottom so they will lean back a little. Attach a piece of thread about 15 inches long. Place the characters back of the book on the right-hand side of the stage and draw them on the stage with thread as they are needed. The operator may talk for the characters, changing his or her voice as different characters go on the stage, or each character's part may be spoken by a different child. A flashlight can be used as a spotlight.

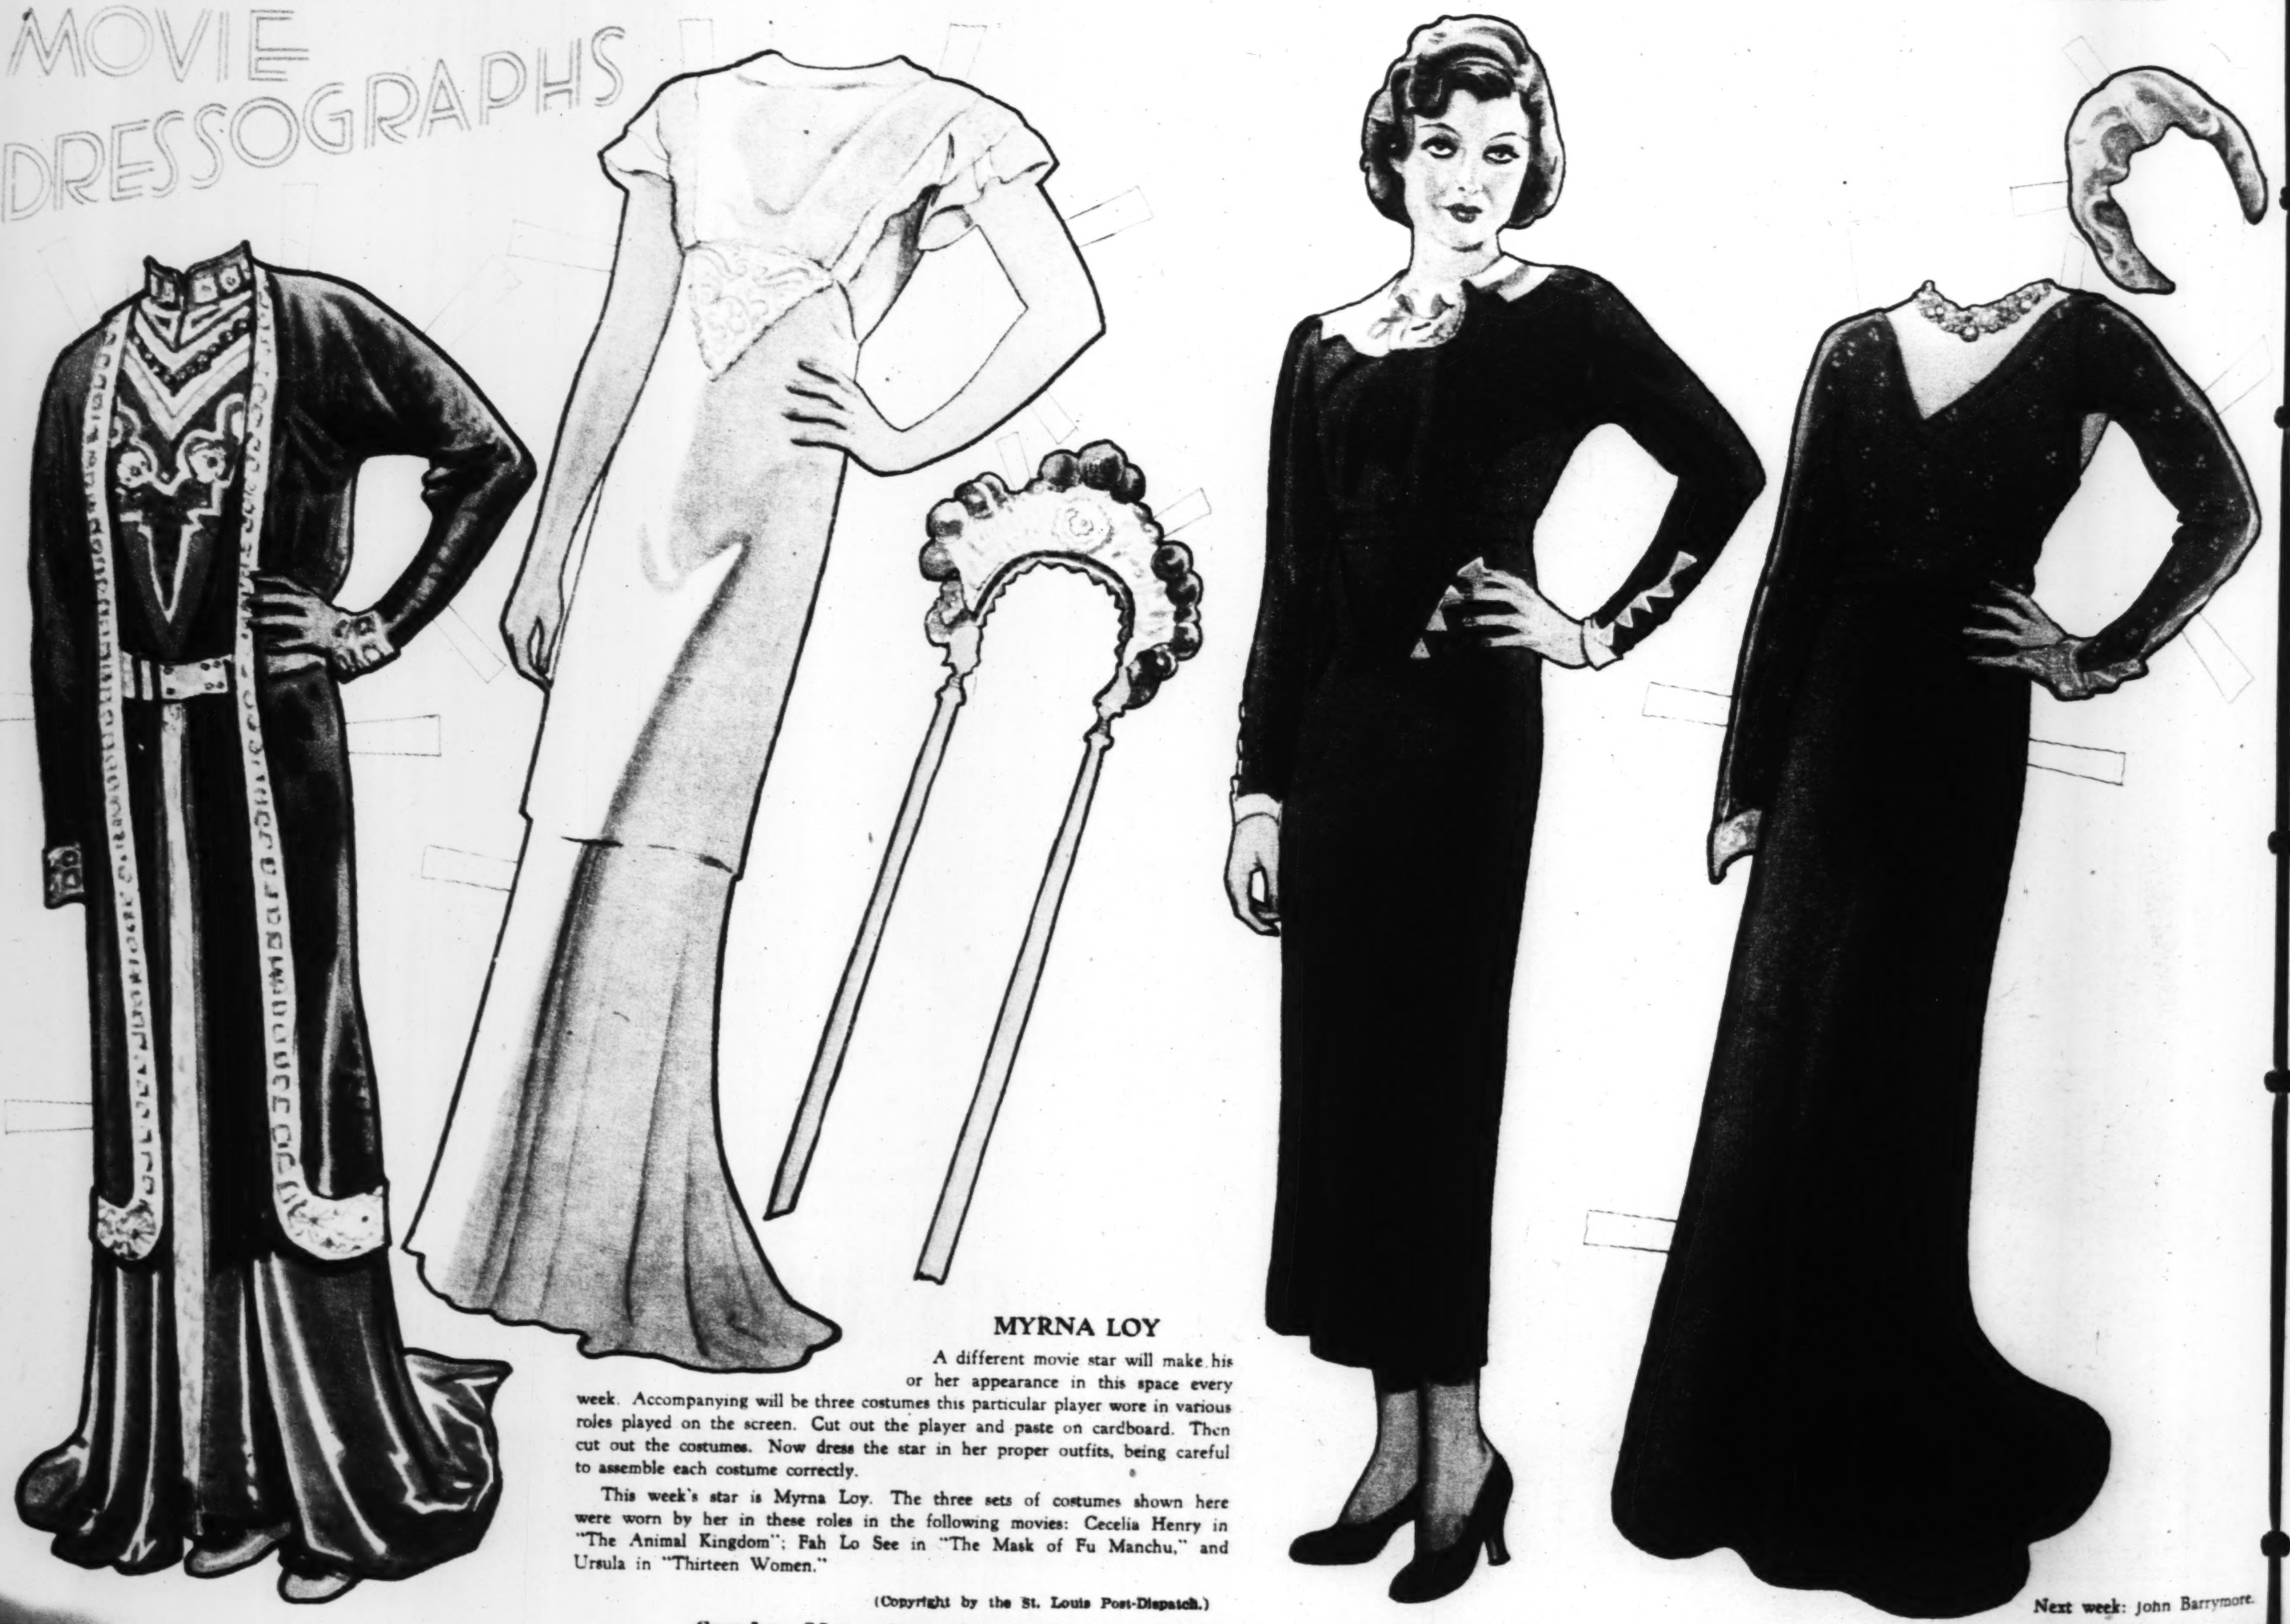
MOVIE DRESSOGRAPHS



MYRNA LOY

A different movie star will make his or her appearance in this space every week. Accompanying will be three costumes this particular player wore in various roles played on the screen. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress the star in her proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly.

This week's star is Myrna Loy. The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by her in these roles in the following movies: Cecelia Henry in "The Animal Kingdom"; Fah Lo See in "The Mask of Fu Manchu," and Ursula in "Thirteen Women."

IT REGISTERS ONE'S CAPACITY FOR HIGH SPIRITS

While Miss Helen Foder expresses hilarity, the machine registers her breathing curves, showing—according to its sponsors—how much the fluctuation of heart and pulse accompanies the change of emotions. It is a part of experiments being conducted by Dr. Sumner Lee Crawley at Cleveland College, Cleveland, O.

MARLENE AND MAURICE—Miss Dietrich has objected to photographs of herself and Maurice Chevalier being made together, but this photographer went ahead anyhow, catching Miss Dietrich wearing a new flannel man's suit. The other man in the picture is Rouben Mamoulian, Miss Dietrich's new director.

COMMEMORATING THE EMANCIPATION OF TURKISH WOMEN

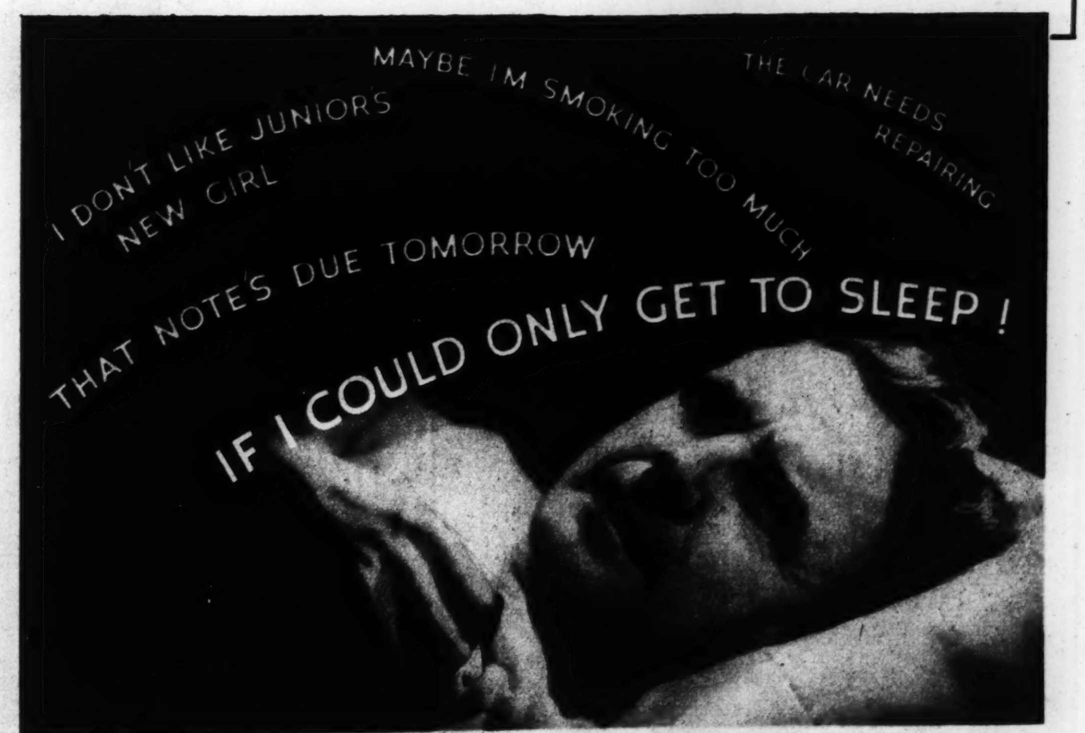
Make Sure

You Sleep Tonight

This Natural, Drugless Way



I DON'T LIKE JUNIORS NEW GIRL
MAYBE I'M SMOKING TOO MUCH
THE CAR NEEDS REPAIRING
THAT NOTE'S DUE TOMORROW
IF I COULD ONLY GET TO SLEEP !

No More Bed-Tossing . . . . New Energy Tomorrow

HERE'S a way to get your 8 full hours of sound sleep tonight—entirely without drugs. A way that 20,000 doctors recommend because it's safe and effective.

It is a delicious food-drink that not only brings you restful sleep tonight—but, when taken regularly, restores your natural tendency to sleep soundly every night. And greatly multiplies your ability to recover from fatigue.

The name of this remarkable food discovery is Ovaltine. In addition to bringing sleep, it possesses unique properties which rebuild your tissues while you sleep. So morning finds you doubly refreshed—with an abundance of new energy that lasts straight through the day.

It Acts 3 Ways

Ovaltine acts 3 ways to combat the main causes of sleeplessness which authorities list as: (1) blood-congested brain cells (2) digestive unrest and (3) nervous irritability.

First: Taken as a warm drink at bedtime, Ovaltine not only promotes relaxation but tends to draw excess blood away from the brain. Thus combating mental over-activity—and "conditioning" the mind for sleep.

Second: Ovaltine contains in high proportion, a remarkable food property called diastase—a property recognized for its ability to digest the starch content of other foods regularly taken into the stomach. Thus possessing the power to lighten the digestive burdens of a stomach that's over-taxed or "nervous."

Third: Also notable among the constituents of Ovaltine is food calcium. And it is increasingly realized that a proper calcium metabolism is necessary to avoid nerve irritation.

Phosphorus, too, is a vital requirement of brain and nerve cells. Ovaltine supplies this in abundance, much of it in its easily assimilated food form (lecithin)—together with a high proportion of the anti-neuritic Vitamin B.

Thus, a cup of Ovaltine at bedtime not only conditions the mind for sleep and helps to allay digestive unrest, but also provides the very factors necessary to overcome sleeplessness due to nervous irritation.

Begin Tonight

Say "goodbye" to sleepless nights and overwrought nerves. Get acquainted with Ovaltine this very night and see how quickly you fall asleep—how much more soundly you rest.

Simply 'phone your druggist or grocer for a can of Ovaltine now. Mix 2 to 4 teaspoonfuls with a cup of warm milk and drink it tonight before you go to bed. Then see how naturally you fall asleep almost before you know it.

In the morning, take stock and see how much more rested you feel. Note the feeling of new energy and vitality that's yours.

More important, as you continue to take Ovaltine, observe how it restores your natural tendency to fall asleep quickly every night. And see how your ability to recover rapidly from fatigue is increased and multiplied.

So again we suggest that you 'phone your druggist or grocer now. Or, if you prefer, send the coupon for the generous trial supply that's offered you below.

NOTE: Thousands of nervous people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. During the World War, medical authorities made it a standard ration for invalid, nerve-shattered soldiers. It is also highly recommended by physicians for nervous, underweight children—and as a strengthening food for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged.

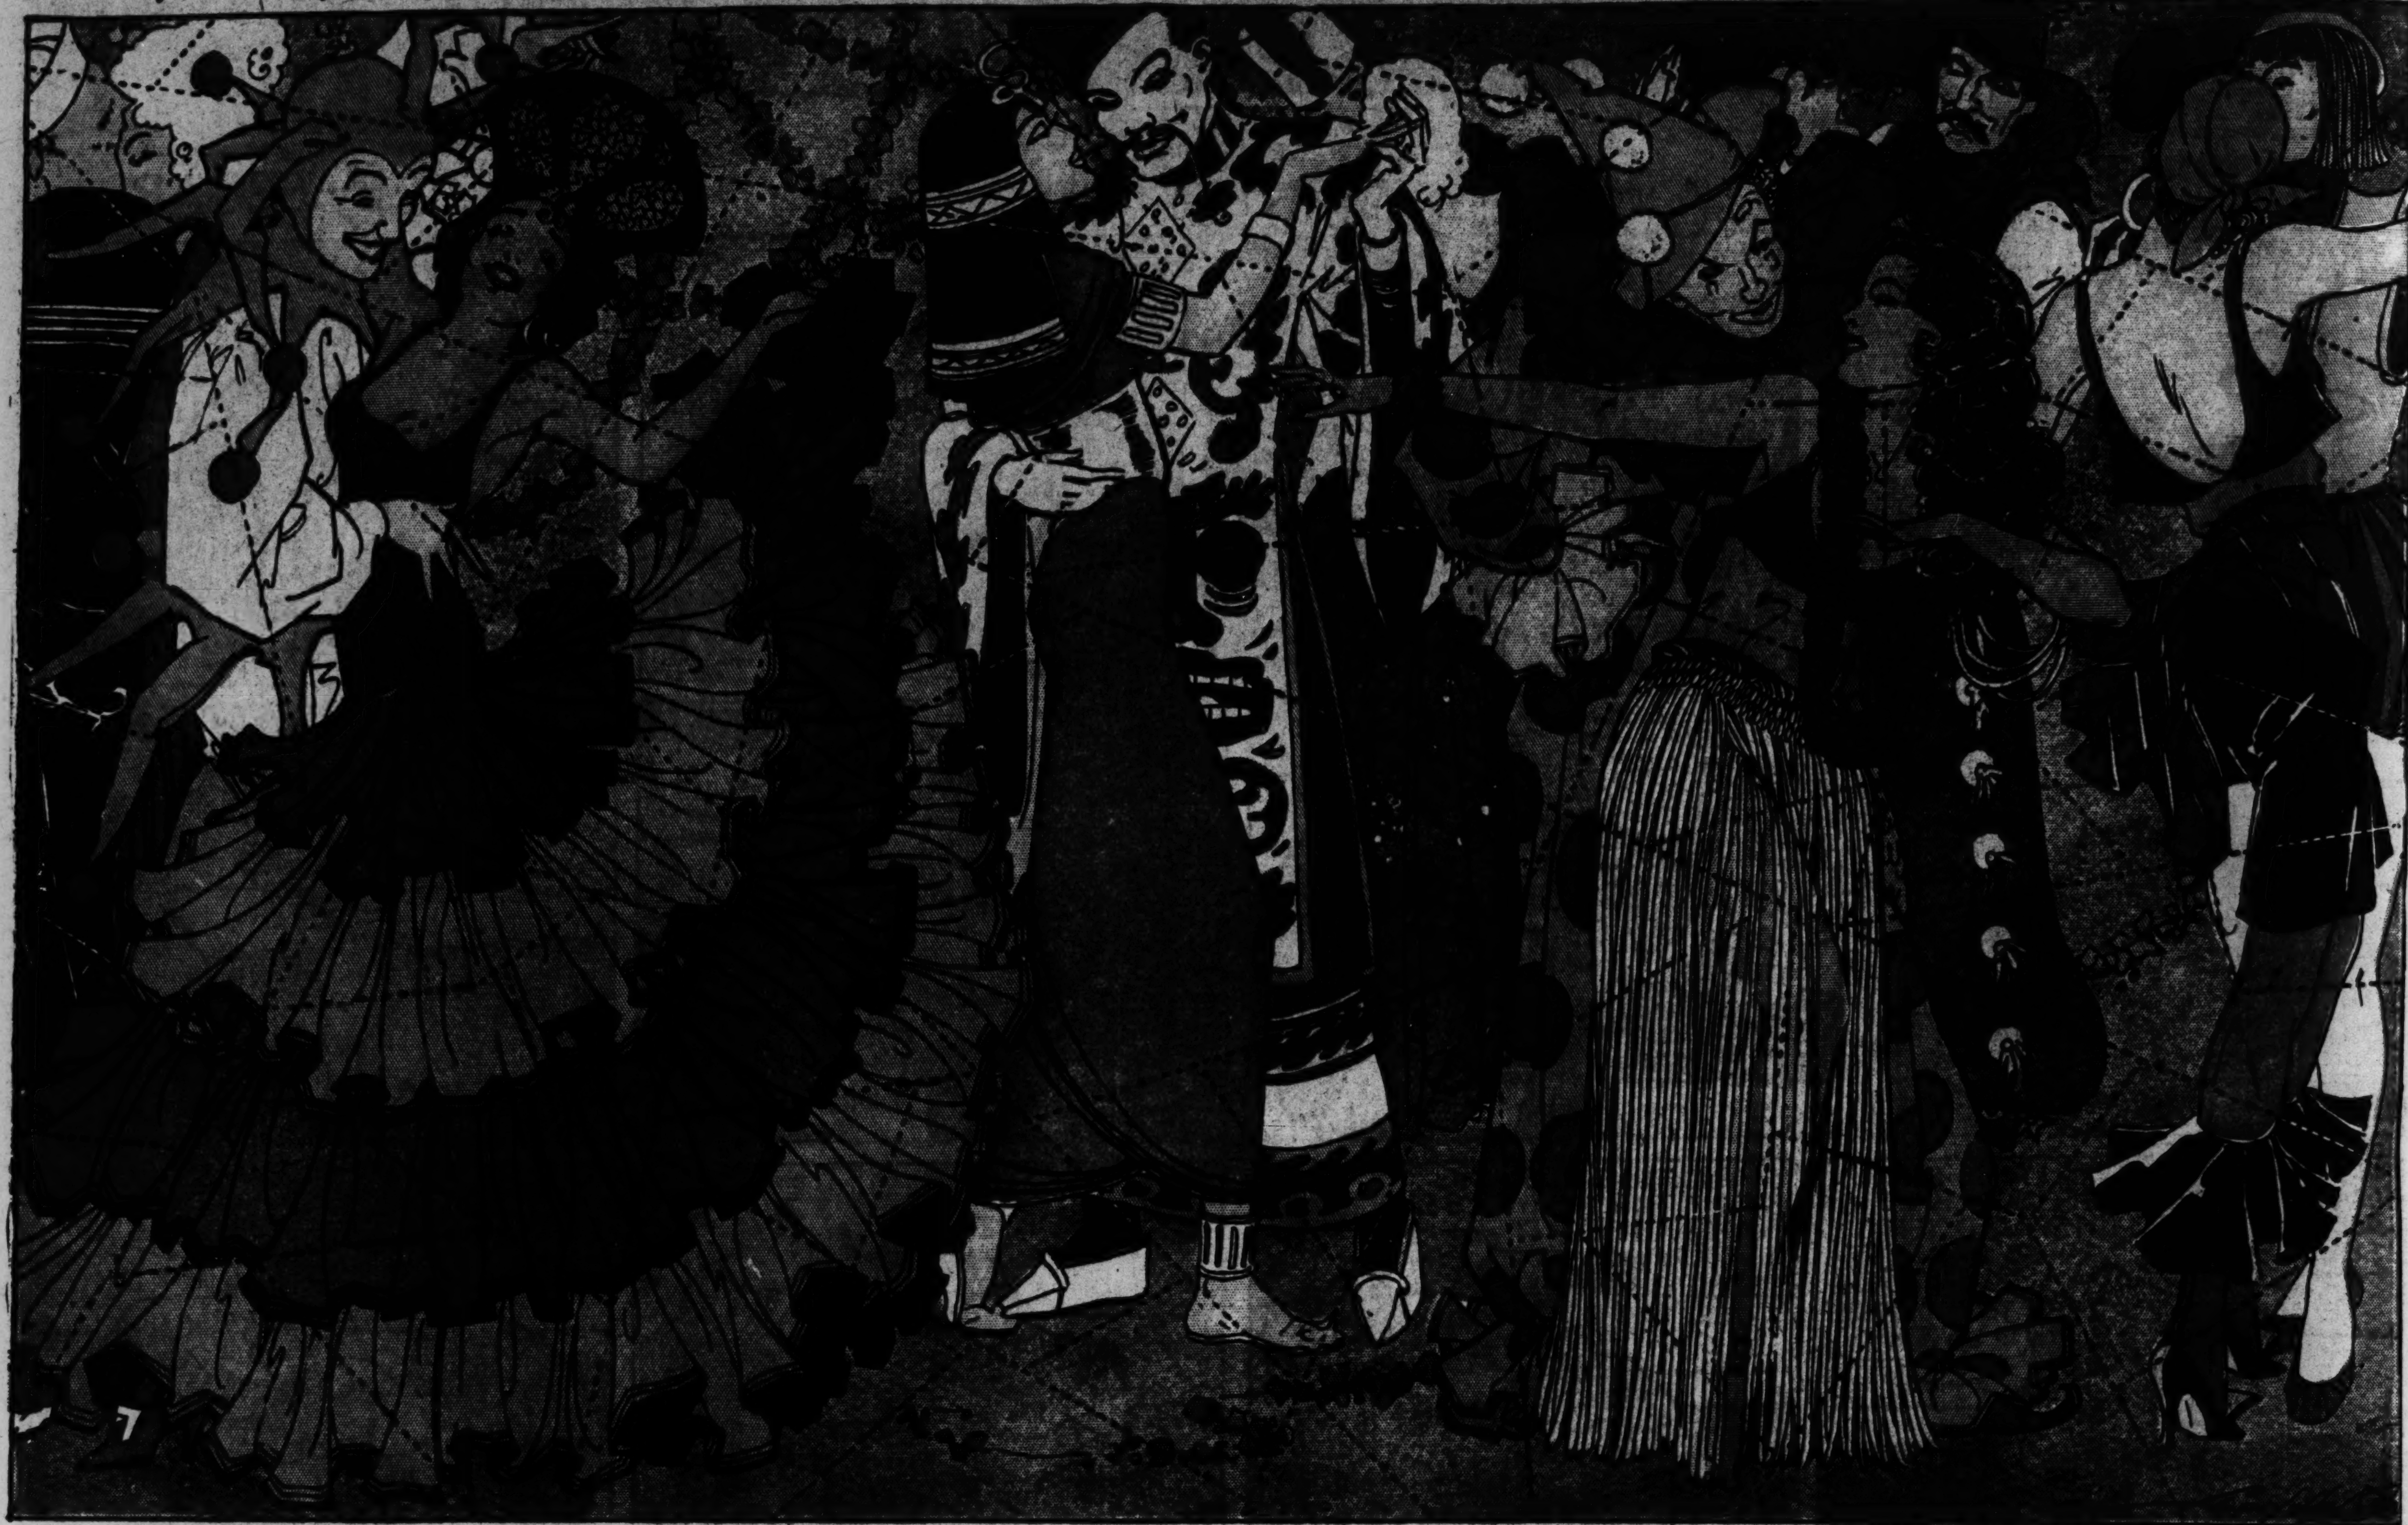
ANOTHER JIGSAW PUZZLE TO MAKE AT HOME



Use rather stiff cardboard, such as the top of a laundry box, for mounting. Cut out the half-page picture above and soak for a few moments in cold water. Remove and lay on pad of old newspapers. Using another newspaper as a blotter, soak up the surplus moisture. Coat reverse side of picture with well-mixed flour paste, having no lumps. Put another thin coat of paste on the cardboard, then mount picture. Again using old newspapers, press gently but firmly over the entire surface to flatten out any air pockets. Last, give the picture a few rolls with the kitchen rolling pin. When the paste is nearly dry, it is a good idea to place a weight, say a flatiron or two, upon the mount. If carefully done, it will dry as flat and tight as a drum head. An old safety razor blade, mounted in proper kind of handle, is ideal for cutting puzzle into sections. A pair of good scissors will serve almost as well. Cut along the lines as carefully as possible.
